It was good to have Dr. Denison with us for this week. We are convinced that he is doing a basic work that will be far-reaching in our Church-life, East, West, North and South. Any church will be the richer by having him for an institute such as he conducted in Burlington.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

October 25, 1925.

Subject: "Paul at Ephesus."

Golden Text: "For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil."—I. Tim. 6: 10.

Lesson: Acts 18: 18-19: 41.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 55: 8-13.

Athens, Corinth, Ephesus, these three. And the greatest of these was—well, if Ephesus was not the greatest, it was certainly on a par with the others. Situated at the mouth of a river which "tapped" a rich section of Asia Minor, and located also on an artificial harbor accessible to the largest ships, and finally, the terminus of the many fine roads that connected the chief cities of that section of Asia Minor with the coast, Ephesus was the most easily accessible city in Asia, both by land and by sea. Its location favored its religious, political, and commercial development, and at the time of Paul, it was the metropolis of Asia. Paul had a sense of strategy, and after leaving Corinth he turned to this advantageous field. He did not spend any time there upon his first visit, but hurried on to Jerusalem in order that he might keep the feast, perhaps the feast of the Passover. As soon as he had "saluted the church" in Jerusalem, he went down to Antioch, spent some time there, made a tour of the Galatian and Phrygian churches, and then came to Ephesus, where he spent no less than two years and three months, and from whence he preached either in person or through his converts, the gospel throughout that section of Asia.

It is too bad that Paul did not leave us a diary of his Christian life, for it is hard to conceive of what would be more interesting reading. His was a colorful life and there was always action wherever he went. Ephesus offered no exception. Paul went first into the synagogue where he preached or reasoned for about three months. But as usual, there were some preverse Jews who did not only not believe, but tried to see to it that others did not believe either. These Jews "spake evil of that way before the multitude," and Paul, rather than engage in useless and fruitless controversy, gathered his disciples together and went to the house of one Tyrannus. He continued there for two years so that "all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks."

Ephesus was noted most of all as the city in which one of the seven wonders of the world was located, the Temple of Diana. This temple, dedicated to Diana or Artemis, was a magnificent and influential building. It was a masterpiece of art and its wealth was almost incalculable, for in addition to the value of the building itself, and the gifts which were made to the goddess, there was deposited in the temple great sums of money for safe-keeping. There was also a museum in which there was the best statuary and the finest paintings. A large number of people, in addition to the priests and priestesses, were employed at the temple, and multitudes made the holy pilgrimage to the temple yearly.

Those who visited the temple usually bought images of the goddess, Diana, who by the way was the mother goddess or the goddess of fertility, the source of all life, and this matter of trade in images and shrines had grown to large, even amazing proportions. We do not know what Paul had to say directly in regard to these images, but it is quite likely that he said little if anything directly. Instead, he probably preached Jesus so effectively that the people saw the inadequacy of pagan worship and the idols associated therewith. At any rate, one Demetrius, a silversmith, and one who brought no little trade to the craftsmen who made the images, became alarmed at the marked falling off in receipts from the business. He called his craftsmen together and presented the matter to them. His method is interesting. He appealed to them in a very subtile way. First of all he intimated that their trade might fall into disrepute. Then he suggested that even the great temple of the great Diana might be deposed from its place of magnificence. The policy is as old as time. The man's interest was purely selfish—he was concerned with dollars and cents. But it would not do to put it into such plain blunt terms, and he appealed to the higher interest, the religious ideals of his hearers.

Men did the same thing when the issue of prohibition was raised. Many persuasive arguments, some of them with more or less weight, were offered, but at the heart of it all was organized selfishness with profits as the supreme ideal of life from the standpoint of those who wanted liquor. The same principle obtains in regard to much of the discussion in regard to the open Sunday. People may profess many reasons why things should be wide open on Sunday. As a matter of fact, they do put forth spacious arguments. But trace the arguments down, and at the back of them there is organized selfishness that wants the profits from Sunday sales. The love of money is a root of all kinds of evil.

Mobs never have any sense. The mob at Ephesus was no exception to the rule. It seized upon Gaius and Aristarchus, two of Paul's companions, and draged them into the theatre. We get an insight into the measure of Paul's moral courage when we learn that he wanted to rush into that wild mob and stand by his friends. His career might have ended then and there if he had done so, but his friends prevailed upon him to remain away, and finally cooler heads prevailed among the mob and order was restored.

Teaching Points.

1. Christianity is a "way" of life, not a creed.
2. A man usually squeals when you touch his pocketbook.
3. Christianity supplants idolatry, not by attacking idolatry, but by offering something better.
4. Men often use religion as a cloak for other things.
5. There is a spirit of loyalty among pagans to their gods that Christians might well emulate.
6. Mob judgment is usually wrong.
7. Paul was a man of superb physical and moral courage.
8. Race prejudice usually makes impossible a fair hearing. (V. 34.)
9. "The love of money is a root of all kinds of evil."
10. That which gives real greatness and permanence to a city or nation is righteousness and vital religion.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic: "Our New Americans: How They Help Us and How We Can Help Them."—Deut. 10: 12-22; Luke 7: 1-5.

Some Bible Hints.

All good things flow from loving God—sympathy for strangers, care for the needy, justice for the oppressed. (V. 12.)

God is Creator of all, and therefore Lover of all. He plays no favorites. Equal character brings equal blessing. (V. 17.)

Blessings are granted us that we may share them with less fortunate people. We dare not hoard our good. (V. 19.)

Foreigners may bring more religion to America than we have, higher ideals, larger generosity. (V. 4.)

Suggistive Thoughts.

Foreigners bring traditions, history, art, science to us, as well as brawn to build our cities.

We give to some people what they have never enjoyed—liberty, democracy—things that they prize more than we do who are used to them.

Many call themselves Americans who are not Americans, just as many call themselves Christians who are not so. As the Christian must have Christ's spirit, so must the true American have the spirit of America.

To see a foreigner go down on his knees before the Stars and Stripes suggests to us what a precious heritage the flag stands for. De we know it, appreciate it, feel it?

A Few Illustrations.

Sweat shops are manned by foreigners. They must live, and not knowing the language, must take what work they can get. They offer an opportunity for justice.

As a sleeper is aroused when he is in danger, so may we arouse our New Americans to their need of Christ. Multitudes know Him not, and yet are ready to listen to His story.

The best scholars in our great city schools are foreigners. They study. They should teach us that we are not mentally superior; indeed, we must work hard to hold our own with them.

The church might use the motion picture to teach Americanism. Pictures speak where words fail. We must draw the foreigner into the circle of American life.

To Think About.

How may our society serve foreigners in our community?

What have some foreigners contributed to American life?

What do foreigners in our district most need?

A Cluster of Quotations.

"Just as the life of Jesus did more for man than millions of sermons, so the life of a Christian will help foreigners if it is of the same nature as the beautiful life of Jesus."—Anon.

"Endeavorers should ally themselves with all agencies that help the foreigner. These agencies are the church specializing in certain lines."—J. S. Steele.

"It is the man that counts, not his birth, country, nor color. We must learn to look for spiritual values in the man, draw them out, cherish them."—Bracken.

"Electrical science owes as much to Pupin as to any other living man. He is a Serbian immigrant. He started at the very bottom and rose to the very top. He has abundantly paid in inventions the debt he owes to America for his chance."—J. B. Bright.

Branch Rickey, vice-president of the St. Louis team in the National League, has never seen a Sunday base ball game. All his contracts stipulate that he need not report at the ball park on Sunday.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It makes us so very, very happy to be kindly remembered. We were made happy this week when we received a very nice letter from our friend and brother, W. W. Elder, Chaplain in the U. S. Navy, Guantanono Bay, Cuba, enclosing us a check for $20.00 from the Sunday School there for the Christian Orphanage here. He said, "Our Sunday School is small but during almost two years I have been here we have accumulated a small surplus, and I know of no better way to spend it than to send it to the Christian Orphanage." Now isn't that a fine idea and a loving spirit? In a far country, but thinks of our 105 little children here in the Christian Orphanage. Just think of the boys and girls in Cuba helping us in the work here, a loving spirit indeed.

How many of our churches and Sunday Schools that have a surplus would like to make such a good use of it?

Oh! how often I wish I had the ability, to be able to convince our people of our need, and had the power of speech that I might enthuse them or the use of the pen that I might convince them of the great and crying need of our work.

Every Sunday School in the Southern Christian Convention ought to be on the list of monthly contributors helping to support the Orphanage. Then every church and Sunday School ought to make a special Thanksgiving offering and a special Easter offering, and be happy to have the opportunity to do so. The churches and Sunday Schools ought to have self pride enough to want to see how much they can give, and not how little.

It takes money to clothe, feed and care for children in an orphanage. It takes money to care for them in your own home. You who have had experience know. I know, and we all know that it costs money. Your Orphanage, the little children who have a home in it, and those who have the work in charge need your sympathy and your help.

Don't forget, friends, that winter will soon be here with its cold winds, rain, sleet, and hail, and all that it takes to make winter weather. The children need wraps, shoes, stockings and many other articles of clothing. If you have wraps outgrown by your children, dresses, little suits for boys, shoes perhaps too small for your boy or girl, send them to us. They will fit some one in our large family and save our bank account.

We need your prayers, your sympathy, and your help. Will you give us the three?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

BIG OAK AND BENNETT.

Our revival meeting opened at Big Oak in August, with Evangelist H. C. Caviness of Cary, N. C., doing the preaching and Mr. J. Charles Yelton of Mount Joliet, Tenn., leading the singing.

The interest was fine, attendance large, and the co-operation could not be surpassed. We had three services daily. At the close of the first week, Mrs. Caviness and Misses Jessie, Ruth, and Louise Cunningham, joined the evangelistic party. Mrs. Caviness and the Misses Cunningham doing personal work, leading prayer meetings, or what God would have them do, while Miss Louise Cunningham furnished the piano music that was enjoyed so much.

We built an arbor to seat 1,000, and that was not sufficient at times to accommodate the crowd, as many came from Sanford, Lillington, Burlington, Cary, High Point and various other places.

As a visible result, there were seventy to unite with Big Oak Church, a goodly number to unite with the surrounding churches, and many reconsecrated themselves in the services. The church was greatly revived and built up.

On the fifth Sunday in August, we met for our dedicatorial service of Bennett Church.

At the eleven o'clock service, Rev. T. E. White gave the sermon, and following that used the regular dedicatory formula, with the congregation joining in with a hearty "Amen." We wish so much that everyone could have heard his sermon. It was really great, and the large congregation that heard it enjoyed it so much.

Rev. G. R. Underwood gave the historical sketch, short as it was, for the church has only been organized for ten years, but it was heard with pleasure, being given by one of the former pastors, who still holds a very warm place in the hearts of the people there.

The music was furnished by the church choir and a male quartette from Greensboro, that sang to the delight of all present.

The afternoon sermon was given by Rev. T. J. Green, a former pastor, who was heard with a great deal of pleasure, because of his wonderful message and the ties that bind him to the people.

We all came to the end of the day happy for what we had heard, seen and felt.

On September 13th, Brother Caviness opened our revival meeting at Bennett, with Mr. Moss, of Charlotte, presiding at the piano, and the pastor leading in the singing. The attendance was fine and interest continued to grow. As a result, 13 united with our church, several are to unite with other churches, and all were revived and more determined to go forward for God. This meeting closed August 27th, and all were happy as we separated, and give praise to God for it all.

We are very happy to have had with us Brothers Caviness, Yelton, Moss, White, Green, and Underwood, also Brothers Kidd and Livington, and their revivalist from the Baptist Church, also we are grateful for the co-operation of all denominations in these meetings.

May God lead and bless all.

WILL THE STRONG HELP THE WEAK?

To the Churches of the Southern Christian Convention collectively and individually, this appeal is made in behalf of the Negro Christians. They are here to stay. They are on our farms, in our shops, in all departments of work, and many are engaged in our homes—and they know us far better than we know them. They are better suited to our work and our section of country than any foreigners we can employ.

The Negro Christians have grown much and are adding members and strength to their local churches faster than the white Christians. Their great need just now is a better trained ministry and better equipped teachers.

For this purpose Christian College, Franklinton, N. C., has been established. The Board of Control is trying to build a new dormitory for girls, with forty-eight bed rooms. The walls of the building are up to the second floor; some of the steel work up to the third floor, and much material on the ground. Our money has given out and it seems impossible to borrow on that class of non-dividend-declaring property. So I appeal to the individuals and to the local church. Can you not lend a helping hand to these people, who are so loyal to the Christian denomination and who have grown so fast since Rev. J. W. Wellons first preached near Mt. Auburn to the old slaves under the shade of the oaks, then organized them into churches and then into a conference? Do they not merit our sympathy and our help in this hour of their need for funds to enlarge their college equipment. Won't you aid them in their endeavor to help themselves?

Send all contributions to, the undersigned.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew the great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

SILENCES.

LESSON: James 3. (Read entire chapter.)

"There are three kinds of silence: Silence from words; silence from desire or passion, silence from unnecessary and wandering thought. Silence from words is good, because inordinate words tend to evil. Silence from desire and passion is better still, because it prompts quickness of spirit. But silence from unnecessary wandering thought is the best of all, because it is essential to eternal recollection and because it lays the foundation for a proper regulation of life's action and silence in other respects." The Japanese motto, "See no evil, hear no evil and speak no evil," is good. There is power in silence. The scriptures tell us to "Be still and know God." Christ had His periods of quiet. All Christians must have them. All thinkers must have quiet, and everybody should have quiet to obtain their best.

Prayer.—Dear Father, after the storm, the quiet and the still small voice. We want to hear Thy voice. We don't hear it as often as we wish. Draw us into the quiets of life and cause us to think and worship toward Thy holy hill. Forgive us our sins and make us Thine. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S WAY.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold.. The rich and the poor meet together."—Prov. 22: 1, 2.

"Behold this is the joy of His way and out of the dust shall others spring."—Job 8: 19.

"In His hand is the breath of every living thing."—Job. 12: 9, 10.

"In the democracy of the dead all men at last are equal. There is neither rank nor station nor prerogative in the republic of the grave. At this fatal threshold the philosophers cease to be wise, and the song of the poet is silent. Dives relinquishes his millions and Lazarus his rags. The poor man is as rich as the richest, and the rich man is as poor as the pauper. The creditor loses his usury and the debtor is acquitted of his obligation. There the proud man surrenders his dignities, the politician his honors, the worldling his pleasures; the invalid needs no physician, and the laborer rests from unrequited toil.

"Here at last is Nature's final decree in equity. The wrongs of time are redressed. Injustice is expiated; the unequal distribution of wealth, honor, capacity, pleasure and opportunity, which makes life such a cruel and inexplicable tragedy, ceases in the realm of death. With the strongest there is no supremacy, and the weakest needs no defense. The mightiest captain succumbs to that invincible adversary, who disarms alike the victor and the vanquished."

Prayer.—Dear Father, help us to live today in a way that we may find the Great Leveler—Death—a friend that ushers us on into the glory of the presence of God and to perfection. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WORLD BROTHERHOOD OUR DUTY.

*"Holy Father, keep them in Thy name * * that they may all be one, even as Thou, Father, art in me and I in Thee, that they may all be in us: that the world may believe that Thou didst send me."*—Jno. 17: 11, 21.

"Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you."—I Cor. 1: 10.

The world has become almost one big city. All are neighbors. It is stupendous conceit for any to think that he is superior to any other. We are actually dependent upon one another for virtue and success. None can be made perfect without the virtues of the others, or without the universal fellowship of all the children of men.

Darkness will cover the earth until men learn the lesson of universal brotherhood. Let us do away with prejudicees! Let us stand fearlessly and lovingly for the unity of mankind.

Prayer.—Our Father, we are but a part of a great whole, and as Thy children help us to do our part well. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THIRTEEN THINGS TO REMEMBER.

"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. 4: 8.

1.—The value of time.
2.—The success of perseverance.
3.—The pleasure of honest work.
4.—The dignity of a simple life.
5.—The worth of character.
6.—The power of kindness.
7.—The influence of example.
8.—The obligation of duty.
9.—The wisdom of economy.
10.—The virtue of patience.
11.—The improvement of talent.
12.—The joy of thinking and being original.
13.—The superior delight of living a Christian.

Prayer.—Oh, Almighty God, our God, we do rejoice in Thee and praise Thy holy name this day. Fix our minds on the good things of life. Forgive us and help us to strive to live clean and do good today. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SEVEN THINGS THE LORD HATETH.

"There are six things the Lord hateth;
Yea, seven which are an abomination unto Him:
Haughty eyes, a lying tongue,
And hands that shed innocent blood;
A heart that deviseth wicked purposes,
Feet that are swift in running to mischief,
A false witness that uttereth lies,
And he that soweth discord among brethren."
—Prov. 6: 16-19.

(No comment.)

Prayer.—Our Father, this day hast Thou begotten us into a righteous living. Help us to keep Thy commandments and not to forsake Thy law. Command Thy blessings upon us and we will ever praise Thee. Lead us when we walk. Watch over us when we sleep. Talk with us during the day. Light our pathway with Thy countenance and keep us from the evil way.

We acknowledge our sins before Thee. We have come short of Thy glory. Forgive us all our sins and redeem us always. Make us Thine forever. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE TOXIN OF TEMPER TROUBLE.

*"Be content with such things as ye have * * so that we may boldly say, the Lord is my helper, I will not fear what man can do unto me."*—Heb. 13: 5-6.

The toxin of fatigue has been demonstrated; but the poisons generated by an evil temper and emotional excesses over non-essential things have not yet been determined, and perhaps but very little thought of, although without a doubt they do exist. Explosions of temper, emotional cyclones and needless fear, or panic over disease and misfortunes that never materialize, are bad habits and often bring on distress, if not the very thing feared, when if the mind could have been freed from these things no such thing would have happened. By proper ventilation and illumination of the mind, we may be free from these things. Therefore cultivate tolerance, poise; and think about the things that are good and make strong and healthy—that make for contentment and happiness, and forget the negative things. Then see what a difference it makes in life.

Reread the text of Thursday, and pray.

Prayer.—(All join in the Lord's prayer.)

SUNDAY.

THE WORLD STORY A LIFE STORY.

"How should one chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight except their Rock had sold them and the Lord had delivered them."—Deut. 32: 30.

The story of the world is one of human sentiment and of God. It is a story of struggles in which causes have been won and lost, and all great things that have been accomplished were first born of God in the human spirit. Resources of nations are hurled against righteous causes of another and are shattered. The Roman spirit is assailed by Roman selfishness and bigotry and they fall apart. New China is fighting against unalterable China, and China is dying. Napoleon's remark that Heaven espoused the cause of the larger army was nowhere better disproved than in his own history. A few colonial farmers standing for God's cause are worth ten thousand British mercenaries. To one man comes a supreme passion and behold it is an accomplished fact. To another there is no passion and nothing comes to pass.

It is impossible to imagine the importance of human emotions and passion for high and holy things. The miller who cares looks to his millarce; the engineer to his tender; the sailor to his fuel; the Christian to his God. The Christian man who has something to do, does it with strength and purity of heart. What have we to do today? See to it that the heart beats high and so shalt thou be strong. As thou dost fail so shalt thou be weak. The source of power is in the round-house of the heart of God. Let us go to Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, day by day feed the fires of our souls with the fuel from heaven, yea from Thy very heart-life, that we may be strong in the struggles of life and victors in the noble cause. In His name we ask ti. Amen.

BETSY ROSS AND THE STARS AND STRIPES.

Betsy Ross was born on New Year's Day in the year 1752. She was a little Quaker girl, and I think she must have been a nice one and jolly to play with, because, although she was named Elizabeth, everybody seems to have called her Betsy, even after she was married.

She was thirteen years old when the Stamp Act made the trouble in this country, and I suppose she must have been going to school just as we girls are. I can imagine just how she and the other school girls would talk about it. I am sure that she was very patriotic and went without her tea when the tea was taxed and promised as solemnly as any fothe older ones that she would go without mutton that they might have the wool to manufacture, and all those things. And I suppose she read the Pennsylvania Journal when it came out with a skull and crossbones at the top, and heard about how they buried Liberty in New Hampshire, and all the things we studied about in the "causes" of the Revolution.

When she was twenty-one years old they had the Boston Tea Party, and that year Betsy Ross was married. Her husband was the brother of George Ross, who signed the Declaration of Independence. You can find his name in the list of signers in our history. John Ross, Betsy's husband, was very patriotic and belonged to some kind of Home Guards that used to guard the military stores on the wharves at night. One night while he was on guard some gunpowder exploded and killed him. So Betsy was a widow and must make her own living. I think that was pretty hard when she was only twenty-four years old.

Her husband had kept a little upholstery shop, and she kept it up, and sewed too, for she was a very neat sewer.

When the Congress chose the new flag, of course they wanted someone who could sew very nicely to make it. George Washington, Robert Morris, and Colonel George Ross were appointed a committee to see to it. Colonel George Ross was a relative of Betsy's husband, and he told the others how well she could sew, and how she had made flags before.

The flag was to have thirteen stripes, seven red and six white, with thirteen white stars on a blue ground in the corner. The thirteen was to represent the thirteen colonies. The committee had made a drawing of it and they took it to Betsy Ross and asked her if she could cut and sew a flag like it. She said that she could, and she showed them how to make it even better with five-pointed stars instead of six-pointed ones. Five-pointed stars are much prettier and they show off better, so I am sure we are all glad that it was to Betsy Ross and not to any other woman, who would not have known about the stars, that the plans were taken.

She began the flag on the seventh of June and she worked just as hard as she could on it and finished it in three days. On the fourteenth of June Congress adopted it for our flag, and that is why we celebrate Flag Day.

Mrs. Betsy Ross went right on making flags, for no one could make them better. She made flags for the United States for sixty years. She lived to be an old lady, eighty-four years old. She lived in Philadelphia, and she is buried there. And now they keep her house for a sort of curiosity museum.—Normal Instructor.

THINKING OF OTHERS.

James had a fine drum, Harold a trumpet, and Hugh a set of sleigh-bells, which had been given them for Christmas. One bright winter morning they decided to have a parade. They invited all of the children on the street to join them. Henry Johnson was chosen captain and marched ahead of the others. They were having a gay, good time and a very noisy time too. When they reached the corner, Henry said, "Turn to the left. Go to William Brown's." The children obeyed like good soldiers. The drummer beat more loudly and the trumpeter blew with all his might. The sleigh-bells jingled merrily. The rest of the children shouted and clapped their hands. When Captain Henry saw the doctor's horse in front of a house he cried, "Halt! Hush! Stand where you are until I come back, and please be still." He ran up the steps, touched the doorbell, and when the lady opened the door he took off his cap and asked, "Is someone sick?"

"Yes, my little boy is very ill. Why do you ask?"

"I thought our noise might hurt a sick person. I will take my soldiers away. I hope your boy will get better. May I come to see him sometime?"

"Yes, indeed! I should like for him to have such a kind, thoughtful boy for a friend," the lady answered.

Then Captain Henry told his soldiers about the sick boy, and they turned and marched away quietly. Henry went every day to inquire about the boy, and when the little fellow was well enough, he went to play with him. They became great friends.—Selected.

POOR MARY BELINDA ELIZABETH.

Mary Belinda Elizabeth Wood
Has a young dog that is not very good.
He sniffles and snuffles and barks out loud
Whenever he happens to be in a crowd.

Scrambling around under grown peoples feet,
He claws and scratches for something to eat.
No matter how well he knows what is right,
He seldom behaves in a manner polite.

Mary Belinda Elizabeth Wood
Has a worse time than a kind mother should.
And I'm certainly glad I can truthfully say
That no little children behave in that way!

—Clara Alexander.

THE BOY THAT LAUGHS.

I know a funny little boy,
The funniest ever born;
His face is like a beam of joy
Although his clothes are torn.

I saw him tumble on his nose,
And waited for agroan,
But, how he laughed! Do you suppose
He struck his funny bone?

There's sunshine in each word he speaks;
His laugh is something grand;
Its ripple overruns his cheeks
Like waves on snowy sand.

No matter how the day may go,
You cannot make him cry;
He's worth a dozen boys, I know,
Who pout and mope and sigh.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND COMMUNITY.

riers and indicating the wisdom of community solidarity in these tasks.

Then there are some leaders who see all these and other agencies at work for the improvement of society and still find the best types of living thwarted by existing social customs of various groups in the community. From whatever angle we approach the task we are forced to the position that religion involves the whole life and that religious education is, after all, a task for the whole life of the community.

The greatest Teacher of all said that He came not to be ministered unto but to minister. His church is not to be ministered unto but to minister. Assuredly, the time is here when the followers of Jesus should seek the alignment of forces that will minister to the larger community and world needs. Too long have denominational and theological interests hindered the church in undertaking its task on the basis of the actual needs of the community. The vital needs of human life today are challenging the church to educational methods that are far-reaching in their consequences. A world in which so many forms of social injustices are tolerated is summoning the churches to a recognition of human brotherhood. Surely the churches must experience the reality of brotherhood within their membership if they would undertake to bear the torch into the darkness of the injustice of the world at large.

According to Christian ideals the world is one vast brotherhood. Christian education has as its goal the development of the best possible social living in this entire body. The total group is the world, the local group is the community. The total task is so large that it sweeps away the barriers of denominational differences. The local task comes to such grips with community problems that it has no patience for narrowed denominational or theological necessities. The problems are so vexing that they admit of no solution except in terms of community welfare and world brotherhood. The churches may surely find life in ever enlarging terms if we are willing to lose our life in community and world service, under the high standards of social living which Jesus himself has set for us.

Several Chautauquas have eliminated the Sunday program this year, while others announce a no-Sunday schedule for 1926. The reason given is an increase of Sunday sentiment in the country.

Tyndale, the Bible translator, the 400 anniversary of whose work is celebrated this year, was strangled, then burnt, near Brussels in 1536.

BANISHED FROM AMERICAN SHIPS.

One of the most significant signs of the passing of the days on the sea when the old chorus "drink and the devil had done for the rest" often fitted the situation far too closely, is afforded by the statement that the largest high-powered passenger steamer ever to be built in the United States will be equipped with a soda fountain in place of the bar which has been banished from ships flying the American flag.

The vessel is the Malolo, which is now being built, under the supervision of Gibbs Brothers, Inc., for the Matson Navigation Company at Cramp's Shipyard, Philadelphia, Pa. The Malolo is designed for the San Francisco-Honolulu run, and when put in service in the Spring of 1927, she will make the round trip in four days less than the fastest time now made by vessels plying between the two ports.

Plate glass and teak wood will play a predominate part in making the Malolo's soda fountain one of the most beautiful installations of its kind. A sheet of plate glass an inch and a quarter thick will cover the twenty-eight foot counter of teak, protecting its polished surface and at the same time bringing out the grain and lustre of the wood.

The fountain will have twelve syrup taps and will draw its soda from a 40 to 50 gallon per hour high pressure carbonator. The syrup pumps will be of Brittania metal, heavily silver plated. The covers of the ice cream cabinets, cooler chambers, sinks, and drainers, will be of nickel silver. The general design of the fountain's woodwork will harmonize with the decorative scheme of the room as a whole.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellowmen, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

Let the Church be true to her character—true to the ideals set forth by her divine Lord; let her lay aside the pretense of virtue and practice courageously that which she exists to show forth; and as it was with the Lord's teaching in ancient days, the common people will hear her gladly—S. H. Hughson.

Successful soul-winning must have two component parts: going to God for sinners, and going to sinners for God.—Thomas Hogben.

To Make Ministers Efficient.—

Dr. George C. Dowey has resigned as pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Los Angeles, California. He will join Dr. A. F. McGarrah in his work to make Presbyterian ministers more efficient in the business methods of the church. It would appear that there is a place and a crying need for such a worker in many other churches. The wasteful and unsystematic business methods very greatest sources of weakness of the whole church.

"Million Dollar Days."—

The Jews having received much, are now preparing to give much. They have set aside November 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th as "Million Dollar Days." On these days the Council of the Federation of Jewish Societies for the Support of Philanthropic Societies in New York will attempt to raise one million dollars each day. Colonel Michael Friedsam and Arthur Lehman have their names honorably affixed to the 16th and 17th respectively. Other large gifts have also been announced.

To Build Taylor Mausoleum.—

The contract for a Mausoleum to hold the bodies of President Zachary Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, has been let, it is announced. The Mausoleum will be placed on land belonging to the State of Kentucky, and will be erected near the present tomb, about six miles from the Jefferson County Court House. The bill providing ten thousand dollars for this purpose was signed on February 21st by President Coolidge. The Mausoleum will be built of Indiana limestone and will inclose a marble Sarcophagus.

Dr. Jefferson Condemns Candidating.—

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson has been saying some blunt things about candidating, which preachers and churches might do well to think on. He says: "Candidating is a disgrace to the house of God. Who thinks of God when a candidate is preaching? Not the preacher, because he is thinking of the people; not the people, because they are dissecting the preacher. Nothing is so demoralizing to a Christian church as candidating. It converts public worship into a farce. Moreover, it is humiliating to the preacher. To be inspected like a pumpkin at a fair, to be put through the paces like a horse at a race, to be judged by a miscellaneous assembly, many of whom do not know what a good sermon is, is an outrage upon ministers which ought to be abolished forthwith. Hundreds of churches suffer today, under the ministry of men who were chosen on the impulse of first impressions, rather than on the record of faithful and successful work."

Vanderbilt University Celebrates.—

Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn., began on October 15th, a three days' celebration of its fiftieth anniversary. By a gift of one million dollars, by Cornelius (Commodore) Vanderbilt, the school was founded as an institution of the Southern Methodist Church. The University was opened as Vanderbilt University in 1875. Since its beginning, the assets of the institution have increased to twelve million dollars. Among some of the noteworthy events of the celebration was the opening of the new medical unit which will start its career with a plant worth three million dollars and an endowment of five million. This medical unit is something new in the medical world, and much good is expected from it here in the South. Vanderbilt severed its connection with the Southern Methodist Church in 1914, and is now operated independently. The man who made the institution possible, stated as its purpose "To strengthen the ties that should exist between all sections of our common country." These words are engraved on the base of his statue on the University campus.

New York's Police Chief on Homes.—

Chief of Police Enwright recently gave New York and other places something to ponder over, if the New York World quotes him correctly. "Thirty years ago," the Chief is quoted, "seven out of every ten criminals were over thirty. Today the figures are reversed: seven out of ten criminals are under thirty, a large fraction of them around twenty-one. But—

"In days past the boy or girl was raised in a home atmosphere. They knew and loved their parents. They went to school on week days, to church and Sunday School on Sundays, and they stayed at home at night. Now there is no longer religious training, no longer any home training, and the child, instead of being raised with proper ideas and ideals, sees an example of laxity in life and habits of the parents that soon leads him to a life of crime.

"One of the things that has broken down home life is the automobile. On Sunday, instead of going to church, the parents go for a tour of the country, to a road house for dinner, and there's a day of moral laxity instead of a day of thought of religion and God. At night they are out again. The boy, when too young to go on these trips, sees them, nevertheless. He may be left at home with orders to go to church, but soon he figures, 'Oh, what's the use? Dad and mother are out; guess I'll go out myself.'

"And he does!"

Famous Writers on Their Faith.—

A London morning paper which knew what it was about, invited a number of famous writers to express themselves on religion. The enormous rise in the circulation of the paper proves that religion is still a very vital thing in the world. The first of the writers to go in for the preaching game was Mr. Arnold Bennet. He is the author of "The Old Wife's Tale," "Clay Hanger," and other novels, and is a discriminating artist. Mr. Bennet knows nothing of the future life, except that he thinks maybe there is one. He speaks of God as the unknown God, but then reveals the fact that he knows about conscience, and that it is implanted by the Creator who is arrayed on the side of right and justice. In short, to sum up, Mr. Arnold's thoughts on religion are: no dogma, a belief in the unknown God who is, however, known in conscience and in the teachings of Christ, in a return to whose practical and merciful ways lies the path for humanity.

Mr. Hugh Walpole gave a brief spiritual autobiography. He has come from a blind obedience to dogma to a freer belief in the teachings of Christ stripped of dogma and applied to modern life. He believes that the progress of modern science will lead men to rather than away from God.

Miss Rebecca West holds to what religion she has through intuitions which are not strengthened through membership in any church. She occasionally goes to both non-conformist and Roman Catholic churches. She does not think that Christianity is the final word in religion. She believes that it came to satisfy a need which may cease to exist, and that a further revelation of the divine may be given.

In the expression of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, he traces his pilgrimage from Catholicism, through materialism, into a sure faith in spiritualism. Sir Arthur revolted at the atonement, which he misunderstood. He believes in God who is merciful, in Christ, the heaven-sent teacher, who lived out an example. He has after all just understood aright the coming of Christ.

The weaver of mysteries, Mr. E. Phillips Oppenheim, believes that the loss of the old faith is the result of broadened intellectuality, but he thinks the loss is a heavy one. He closes by observing that all which is left a man who thinks, is an altar to the unknown God and a charitable creed. This creator of great mystery stories cannot solve the mystery of life and death.

All these writers and others seem to be agreed that some religious experience is certainly present, and most of them respect the Christ, and hold, that, stripped of its dogmas, Christianity has the saving message for the world. What a pity it is that these noted writers cannot agree in upholding before the world the Christ of the Gospels.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Salvation Army has 3,000 officers in India.

Red is the color for expelling demons, and this accounts for its predomination in the garments of European peasants.

Rev. S. L. Beougher, President of Bethlehem College will serve also as pastor of Wadley Christian Church the coming year.

Rev. E. M. Carter is now acting as Field Secretary for Bethlehem College, raising funds and collecting subscriptions for that institution.

The London*Morning Post* estimates that there are 250,000 Jewish Christians in the world. God has promised that before the end of time has come he will draw them back into His Kingdom.

Recently, in Columbus, Indiana, when a paving stone was removed from in front of the Salvation Army citadel, a petrified snake was found. For fifty years before the Vosltead Act was enacted, the building was occupied by a saloon.

Mr. J. T. Boykin is responsible for the statement that Rev. A. R. Flowers performed his six hundredth marriage ceremony on October 7th. The contracting parties were Miss Annie R. Welsh and Mr. Harry M. Hedgepeth, both of Richmond, Va.

The Sun's editor was permitted to conduct chapel services at Bethlehem College on Friday, October 16th and to spend an hour with the faculty and students there. Bethlehem is doing great work in our Georgia and Alabama Conferences. President Beougher is an able executive and is doing a great work at Bethlehem.

The editor and managing editor of The Sun had the privelege of spending some days in the homes of Rev. G. D. Hunt and Rev. C. M. Carter. These good preachers have splendid Christian homes, interesting and delightful families, and it was indeed a benediction and a blessing to share their hospitality and fine fellowship.

According to the latest reports, the paper industry consumes each year some six million cords of wood, the product of more than a million acres of forest, more than sixty per cent of which is spruce, the remainder being hemlock, balsam and poplar. How much of this is being used to forward the work of the Kingdom? is a question well worth while raising,

As we go to press, we have just heard of the sudden death of one of the staunch members of our Suffolk Christian Church. Mr. John M. Butler, succumbed to an attack of his heart on Tuesday evening while out riding with his wife. Mr. Butler was at the steering wheel of his car, when the call came, but his wife, while supporting him in her arms, was enabled to stop the car without physical injury to herself. Our deepest sympathy goes out to her and to his two sons.

The First Christian Church, of Richmond, has one example that might well be emulated. Mr. N. B. Barker, one of its good members, lives in the extreme opposite end of the city, a distance of about five miles; and in point of time about forty-five minutes ride from the church. But rain or shine, Mr. Barker is on hand for Sunday School and both church services, or he has a good reason why. Our much loved brother has been suffering greatly from indigestion for the past several months, but we are made happy by being able to tell that he has greatly improved.

The last hanging in England for sheep stealing occured in 1825. To the plea of the thieves that three men ought not to die for one sheep, the judge replied: "You are not hanged for stealing the sheep, but that sheep shall not be stolen." The prison reformers of our country have no doubt, done a great and humane work. However there are many among them that miss the salient fact pointed out above. The law is not so much to inflict punishment on him who has done the crime, as it is to deter others from doing the same thing. Our prisons should be surrounded with all that will uplift the prisoner, yet they should be made un-attractive enough to the delver in crime to cause him to hesitate before he plunges. Many of our prison reformers need to be reformed for the good of humanity.

LYNCHBURG NOTES.

The United Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va., has the following interestings to report:

There were three additions to the church last Sunday night.

Mr. Aubrey L. Bennett and Miss Maggie L. Vaughan were united in marriage by the pastor, at his residence, September 17th.

A Junior C. E. Society has been organized in the church. The Young People's C. E. Society is now doing splendid work.

The pastor's family has recently been the recipient of two poundings: one from the men of the church; and one from the N. and W. Overall Factory, where he holds mid-week services occasionally.

The pastor has been given an increase in salary of $25.00 per month.

The Ladies have organized a Missionary Society. They have elected a delegate to go to Greensboro on October 30th.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

From Elon College one has to travel nearly five hundred miles, in a night and the better part of a day, to reach a session of the Alabama Conference, but it is worth this much and more. It is by no means one of our largest conferences, in actual achievement and in numbers, but it is one of our largest, in prospect and in promise. The conference is now suffering the pains and pangs of growth and travail. A healthy deliverance is sure to come.

The mill-stone about the neck of some of our conferences is that they seem content not to grow, and are satisfied with their efforts at holding their own. This conference, far from being content not to grow, is painfully disconcerted with the steady and continuous growth it has, and is determined, at all hazards, to grow more and achieve better.

The conference is cultivating a missionary spirit. It hasn't the full missionary spirit yet, but it is headed in that direction; is in fact making decided effort to develop the missionary spirit. It has arrived at this point: It can see beyond its own doors, and consciously realizes that after all there are souls worth saving and localities needing churches, beyond its immediate bounds and limitations. And this is much more than can be said of some of our conferences.

The conference now sees and deeply feels, that it has a wonderful opportunity, as well as a weighty responsibility, in North Alabama. So it is sending its preachers and building Christian Churches there. This is good and fraught with promise and power for the future. For a conference that can now lift up its eyes and stretch out its hand, to help and carry the Gospel to a people one hundred miles away, will after a while be able to lift up its eyes and see, stretch out its hands and help, people without the Gospel a thousand miles away, five thousand miles away. Where our Saviour's Gospel gets a sufficient grip on a people to make them want to share the glory of His life with brother-men a hundred miles away, it cannot be long till that same Gospel will make that same people want to share His life with brother-men even to the remotest parts of the earth. This conference is being led on step by step into the larger, richer fields of service year by year. One of these days it will come, by the grace of God, into the full light of its opportunity and saving power. And when it does, our whole Convention, if not the whole Church, will be surprised at its conquest and achievements for Christ.

Already the hand-writing is on the wall; or, to change the figure to a more patent one, a cloud the size of a man's hand has appeared on the horizon. Watch that cloud. For out of it, when it shall have had brief space in which to gather, there will come, God knows, abundance of rain.

First of all, the conference as a whole believes to a person in the principles and polity of the Christian Church. My! but these Alabama saints do glory (together) in the righteousness and ultimate triumph of our Christian principles.

In the second place, they believe their ministry, their sons and their daughters, must be educated at a Christian college. Hence their dear and beloved Bethlehem.

In the third place, they are teaching missions in their Sunday Schools, beginning to preach missions from their pulpits, and women's missionary organizations are springing up in their churches.

This year, for the first time, the women of the conference met in separate annual sessions, at a different time and place from that of the general conference.

Fourth and finally, the conference is loyal to the Convention and responds readily and liberally to every call of the Convention.

So with a united and delightful fellowship, with a growing spirit of liberality, with unbounded loyalty to the principles of the church, and with a constantly enlarging vision, kindled by a commendable mission spirit, this conference will arise and shine, and will one day show to the world what God can do with a few noble spirits surrendered to His will and wholly dedicated to His service.

It is a blessing and a benediction to be in such a conference and to have one's soul warmed by the glow of its holy and heavenly flame.

The conference this year was in its twenty-seventh annual session. The meeting place was good old Beulah Church, the home of that princely soul, Rev. G. D. Hunt, who has served the church as pastor time out of mind and was this year also president of the conference. The conference is blessed in having a painstaking and accurate secretary, Rev. E. M. Carter, and a careful and faithful treasurer in Brother J. W. Payne.

Prof. S. M. Lynam of Bethlehem College, delivered a great annual discourse on "The Rural Church," and the people were so edified by its deliverance that they wish the whole Church to read it through THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and so voted. Bro. Lynam, as was to be expected, is highly esteemed in the conference, and by his intelligent industry, is making for himself an enviable record, as preacher and as teacher in Bethlehem College. He and his good wife are in fine health and are rendering invaluable aid in building up a strong and worth-while curriculum in Bethlehem College.

The import of the School of Methods, held at Bethlehem this summer, on the conference was tremendous, and in a measure accounts for the worth, weight, and outbreak of the conference just held. The people are still talking of the great work on Stewardship and Church Methods, as presented by Dr. W. H. Denison. The subject of Stewardship is now a live one in this conference and was given prominent place and emphasis on the program. One session of the conference was given entirely to Stewardship and Missions, and the deepest interest was manifested in these vital themes.

Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor, and every phase of Christian Education were given careful and intelligent discussion and interest. Rev. J. H. Hughes is the spokesman and leader of Endeavor work in the conference. There are eleven societies in the twenty-odd churches of the conference, and with the enthusiasm now apparent in these societies, one realizes that many others will soon be functioning in the churches,

The church letters and ministerial reports were inspiring, and showed faithful service rendered, and material gains made in church membership the past year. The conference apportionments were greatly increased a year ago, as per schedule and request of the Convention, and the churches responded most nobly to the increase.

Under the Report on Home Missions, by the Board, Rev. G. D. Hunt, chairman, nearly $400 was raised by individual gifts and pledges to be added to the amounts sent up by the churches for Home Missions. The response to Bro. Hunt's eloquent plea was not only liberal, but willing and glorious.

Rev. E. M. Carter, chairman, made the report on Education, showing several young men of ability and consecration now in training for the ministry, and in highest terms commended the great work being done at Bethlehem College.

A wide awake layman, Bro. V. E. Kitchens of Roancke, made the report on Religious Literature, and in well chosen remarks called for a reading and distribution of our Christian Church Principles and an active interest in our church papers. Managing Editor P. J. Kernodle made a comprehensive address on our Christian Publications, and plead for the support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Rev. S. L. Beougher, President of Bethlehem College, moved the conference with his address on Education and his plea for the college to which he is giving his time, talent, and devoted energy. He and his fine family are doing splendid work for the college and in the conference, and their labors are greatly appreciated.

Rev. G. A. Veazey made the report for the Sunday School Board and Rev. J. D. Dollar that for Christian Endeavor.

On the last day, and in the closing hour of conference, Rev. H. W. Elder preached a powerful sermon on "Doing the Will of Christ," and the holy communion which followed, brought to a solemn climax and conclusion the best session yet of this growing and exceedingly promising conference. J. O. A.

THE ART OF CO-OPERATION.

PART SECOND.

In the plant world the lesson of co-operation is taught. The life germ that nature has incased in the seed shell lies helpless in the ground until the rain and the chemicals in the soil all co-operate to cause the seed to germinate and grow. Then the winds blow and carry the pollen from flower to flower, and from plant to plant, to pollinate for reproduction.

So it is that every function in society depends upon co-operation. Industry, for instance, could not survive without co-operation. The farmer co-operates with the miller in raising the wheat. The miller co-operates with the baker in making the flour. The baker co-operates with the eater in making the bread. And the eater co-operates with society and with God in using the strength, derived from the bread, in service to others. The miner co-operates with the railroad in mining the coal to furnish motive power for the engines; the railroads co-operate with the factories and homes in transporting the coal for fuel; the factories co-operate with the farmers and all who toil, by making tools and implements; and further, the factories co-operate with society in general, by making clothing, food products and conveniences of every kind. There could be no society of any sort without co-operation.

"Look out for Number One," though claiming to be a safeguard to the individual's interest, is an enemy to both the individual and to society. It is a path that leads to disappointment and remorse. It is a knife that severs the individual from social security and social usefulness. It is a poison that kills happiness within the heart. It is a disgrace to man, and an offense against God. When you find a person who does not co-operate with his fellowmen, you can know that he is out of harmony not only with man but with God.

Two pianos in the same room are in perfect tune. If you step to one of the pianos and strike any key on the keyboard, the corresponding key of the other piano will vibrate. So it is with the heart strings of lives that are in tune with God.

There is nothing that life will not give in response to worthy co-operation. The story of the co-operative effort of Nehemiah and his people in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem reads like thrilling romance. But the victory they experienced is duplicated by any group of people who are like minded, and united in a task, everyone having a mind to work.

When people refuse to co-operate, they have closed the door to benefits that they might have for the united asking. Many towns will remain forever an undesirable place to live in simply because the people refuse to co-operate, hence the people deny themselves advantages and conveniences that co-operative effort would bring. Many churches will forever remain small and unworthy, simply because the members refuse to practice the Christian Art of Co-operation. Browning expressed the position of every true Christian, and in fact of every worthy man and woman, when he said, "My task is to co-operate rather than to play the rival." Better schools, better churches, better roads, better communities and a better world are all conditioned upon co-operation. Likewise a stronger, larger, and more efficient Christian Denomination is conditional only upon a better co-operation.

Communities that have a co-operative spirit are always happy social centers. When such a community feels the need of a new hospital, it gets it. When such a community feels the need of a new school building, it gets it. When places of vice in such a community make known their presence, they are removed. When the advantages of religious instruction for the youth are realized and desired, such communities make such provision through co-operative Week Day Schools of Religion, and through a co-operative Daily Vacation Bible School.

What a tragedy that when a community can have absolutely anything it needs, if the people will co-operate, that any person would stand in the way! What a tragedy that, when the world can have universal peace if the people in places of authority will co-operate, any nation should refuse to do so!

The people that most displease God in your church or in your town, are the people who do not practice the art of co-operation. The most despicable person is the person who can co-operate, but who refuses to co-operate with his fellows in Kingdom service. It used to be that when someone mentioned "a mean man," one thought of the drunkard, the thief, the gambler, or the moral pervert. But today, though the meanness of such characters is in no way minimized or discounted, yet when "a mean person" is mentioned today, we instantly think of those who are meaner than those just referred to—the person who professes to be good and respectable, but who refuses to co-operate with his fellowmen in social service and in Kingdom building. The meanest person is the person who could render the largest service in co-operation with his fellows, but who refuses to co-operate.

No person who is truly interested in any movement can fail to co-operate with others in its interest. One might be able to co-operate without loving, but no one can love without co-operating. "The soul that is on fire, fires other souls." The soul that loves can but co-operate. When we meet God in judgment, He will not ask us what our creed was, nor what nice things we said about Him while we lived, but He will ask us, "How did you co-operate with your fellowmen?"

AN EMERGENCY MISSION FUND.

Because Men and Millions did not yield anticipated results and expected returns to our mission work, an Emergency Mission Fund is a necessity. The Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention has recommended to all our conferences that individuals and churches unite in an endeavor to raise in cash $25,000.00, for Missions before September 1, 1926. This is essential to meet obligations already incurred and to carry on work already planned and begun.

The Mission Board has done its best, exercised its wisest and weightiest judgment and discretion in carrying on the work of missions entrusted to it by the Church. If the Board has erred, it has done so in behalf of progress, growth and development in the Christian Church.

Members of the Board who have freely given of their time to the work of the Church, now purpose to give individually one tenth of the entire sum of $25,000, called for in the Emergency measure. One member of the Board gives one thousand dollars, the other members fifteen hundred dollars, a total from the Board members of $2,500.00, on condition that individuals and churches of the conferences in the Convention give a total of $22,500.00.

To this end, the Convention, through its Executive Committee, has called upon all our conferences to set aside some month prior to next April, to be designated as Missions Month, in all our churches, Sunday Schools, and Societies, and on Mission Sunday in said month, every member and friend of the church, society and school be given a chance, and urged, to make a liberal free-will offering to missions.

The Alabama Conference has already decided, by unanimous vote, to make March Missions Month in all of their churches and among their people, and to do its best in helping raise this Emergency Mission Fund. It is confidently hoped and desired that all our other conferences will do likewise and that this shall be the greatest for missions of any year in all our history.

It ought to be easy for 30,000 people to give $25,000.00 as a token of our determination to carry on a missions work so well begun and so successful in achievements thus far. J. O. A.

CONFUSING THE PEOPLE.

The numerous financial appeals which under our present system cannot be obviated are bound to confuse the people. For example,

There are the regular conference apportionments. These are on the right principle, being for all the enterprises of the Church and percentaged to the causes on an equitable or at least on an agreed basis. But these apportionments are lamentably insufficient to support adequately the enterprises they aspire to aid. So,

We must make other calls, campaigns, drives, etc., to say nothing of a great many special offerings. Right now:

1. The Christian Orphanage is appealing for funds for its new building to care for the fatherless and motherless children of the Church.

2. Elon College, in the name of the Southern Christian Convention, is endeavoring through Dr. W. T .Walters and Rev. W. T. Scott to raise money to pay the interest on bonds given the college in the name of the convention and to reduce the principle of the bonds themselves.

3. The Mission Board, through its field secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, is endeavoring to raise twenty-five thousand dollars on an emergency measure and must have it by April 1, 1926.

Everyone of these enterprises is worthy. The writer is subscribing to each of them and rejoices to be able to do his part for the Kingdom: But,

It is confusing the people to be approached from several angles. It would be far better for us to have a benevolent budget, fixed by the Southern Christian Convention itself, and for the various causes to share on an agreed percentage in the funds raised to satisfy it. Then no church would be visited for financial purposes oftener than once a year. Then every church, according as God had prospered it, would support every enterprise of the Kingdom. And so

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, has been asked to appoint a Financial Commission who will report after careful investigation a co-operative and unified financial policy to the approaching session of our General Body. Finally,

We ought not to confuse the people even in so good an undertaking as the financing of our Christian Church enterprises. W. A. H.

IS IT FOR HIGH SCHOOLS?

It is amusing to read the drivel which continues to follow in the wake of the defunct Scopes case. By perceptible degrees a twisted meaning is given the event, until now some writers are bewailing that Mr. Scopes was "prohibited from making scientific research" and that the children in his care were denied the privilege of delving deeply into biological problems. Mr. Scopes, of course, knows nothing of evolution except what he has read in the textbooks, and much of what he knows by that method he will have to discard in ten years, if he still follows the textbooks, because of the revisions which will ensue. The great difficulty in the educational aspect of the controversy is that there are no biologists teaching evolution in the high schools; there are merely teachers who are just one jump ahead of the pupils in the study of the textbooks.

A scientist who is a naturalist and an evolutionist, writes us a letter, one paragraph of which we lift from among other wise observations to share with our readers:

"Beyond doubt, evolution should not be taught in the common schools any more than higher mathematics or spectrum analysis of the stars, for the simple reason that it cannot be comprehended, except by specialists of long training. If 99 cut of 100 high school teachers of biology or science were asked what they knew about the gradual variations between species and genera of marked transitional character, they would be at sea."—The Dearborn Independent.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Nothing becomes easy and satisfactory until it becomes a habit. The greatest urge in human activity is habit. This is seen in dope-fiends, drunkards, cigarette smokers, and a thousand other human habits. The whole philosophy of a good life is the formation of good habits. The people who enjoy going to church are the people who go to church. One can remain away from church until the desire to go is almost gone from the mind and heart; yet church attendance is essential to the life of the church, and the hope of saving the world; and it is held by the Bible to be important in these words: "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is."—Heb. 10: 24-25.

The church must be the best Institution in the world, for it can do its work on poorer attendance than any other Institution.

Schools would die with no better attendance than the church; factories would fail with no better attendance than the church; stores would close; the army would perish in the same way. The biggest thing in all human enterprises is the habit of prompt attendance.

There is another thing to be considered, and that is, interest must be taken, work must be done, co-operation must unite all the forces to make success. If none worked in the school but the superintendents and teachers, graduation-day would never come. The whole school works in school and prepares for the work out of school. The factory people work together from the office to the waste pile. They work together. There is no conflict. There is harmony all the way down the line. In factories, in fields, in mills, in stores, on steamers and trains, in schools, all "work together." Man can do nothing by himself: "None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."—Rom. 14: 7. A man cannot serve God alone, for he serves God best when he serves his fellow man best. Asceticism was a failure. Religion demands association.

The religion of Jesus Christ proves its divinity by its growth and service with such poor attendance. The spiritual value of church attendance is beyond human calculation; yea, even of human belief. It not only has its value by the attendance of members, but, if all the community were regular in attendance at Sunday School and church, the question of Sabbath observance would settle itself. Such a community would make an impression for religion that nothing else can make. Again; if all the members of the church attended regularly, the unconverted would go, too. Decent people outside of the church will not go their way unless they can get church members to go with them. It is a conspicuous fact, that in all social activities, such as dances, card-parties, clubs, effort is made, and usually with success, to get prosperous and leading church people into these social groups. They would lose their social standing if it were not so. Functions would die if people did not attend and lend their support to them. The weakness of the church is in non-attendance, lack of real co-operation, lack of separation from the world, and non-support.

The church is the greatest social, financial, educational, and spiritual force in the world; and it could be made the successful agent of God in the salvation of the world, if members had the real habit of serving God.

ELON LETTER.

Dr. W. S. Long passed to his reward on August 3, 1924. The Board of Trustees of Elon College, in their next meeting, in May, 1925, decided to place a bronze tablet in the rotunda of the Alamance Building in Dr. Long's memory, and as soon as possible thereafter to erect a statue to him on the campus. I wish it were possible to erect a building to his memory, bearing his name, or to endow a professorship in his honor. His distinguished work in our Church and particularly in relation to Elon, deserves every consideration at our hands. Perhaps these things can come later. For the present the trustees have ordered the bronze tablet and are planning ere long to erect the statue.

The bronze tablet has just arrived and has been placed in the rotunda entrance to the Alamance Building. This tablet undertakes in a brief and succinct way to characterize Dr. Long's life and labors. It reads as follows:

REV. WILLIAM SAMUEL LONG, A. M., D. D.
Oct. 22, 1839—Aug. 3, 1924.
Founder and First President
OF ELON COLLEGE
Christian Minister Christian Educator
Christian Statesman Christian Gentleman
A man great in faith, whole hearted in consecration, consistently energetic, and possessed of rare personal charm and grace.

Dr. Long's nephew, Rev. McK. Robbins Long, Macon, Ga., has painted a portrait of his distinguished uncle and will shortly present it to the college. It will grace the wall of the office of the President and Board of Trustees.

In the destroyed building were portraits of Presidents Staley and Moffitt. We are hoping that these too will shortly be reproduced for us and be hung on the wall in the same office.

THE PREACHER AND HIS MESSAGE.

By Rev. J. H. Dollar,
Graduate Student of Vanderbilt University.

The Preacher—Who Is He?

The preacher is the "man called of God," with the divine command of the Saviour, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," with His eternal assurance, "Lo, I am with you even unto the end of the world." The business of the preacher is to preach. He is called unto an office as a spokesman and representative of the Master, the highest honor known to man. Preaching has the sanction of the Saviour and the promise of His power. The preacher is set apart, by His call, for the work, and he has no right to use his time for other works than those relative to his office as a preacher. He is The Herald of God. He is to proclaim the gospel.

Is the preacher like other men? Yes, and more, he is human like other men, but set apart by a divine calling to carry a divine message. This messenger with his message has the approval of the Son of God and the assurance of His presence. The preacher in his message, is to bring Jesus to men, and from the fruits of the message, to lead men unto Jesus.

In the likeness of Christ, standing in His stead, speaking in His behalf, sensible to the divine commission, persuaded that he is His ambassador; not by infalible sacredotal selection, nor by the market law or demand and supply, but by the immediate, internal and effectual call of God; persuaded to take the truths of the Holy Scriptures with God's revelation to him and unfold, illustrate, amplify, and if possible simplify them for enlightenment and persuasion, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, intensified by personal experience and conviction, direct from his own soul, pouring them out upon waiting ears and into hungry hearts from his spirit-touched lips, accompanied by every possible adjunct of effective posture, jesture, and voice. This is the preacher in action.

His Message—What Is It?

The message of the preacher is the Gospel—good news—good tidings. Of what nature must his message be? It must be both human and divine. A revelation of a divine Saviour of human kind. It must be a message that will command acknowledgement of God as the Saviour; the message of One who died to redeem fallen humanity; a message that will lift man and inspire him to higher plains of living; a message that will reveal Christ in His perfection and cause men to recognize in Him those qualitits which are vital to the soul of man.

The message—the Gospel—"Is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. The salvation of the world then, depends on the message, because salvation is found only in God, and the message is God's revelation to man. When the Gospel of the Son of God fails to save men, there is something wrong, and it isn't with the Gospel. It is either man's interpretation of it, or his ignorance of it. Good news, "especially an announcement of the salvation of men through the atoning death of Jesus Christ"—that is the message. What could be better than to tell lost men of a Saviour—One who is able to save their lives, if accepted in due time, but always ready and able to save the soul. The message has this assurance which is joy to any soul and surely can be enjoyed by the messenger.

The Preacher With His Message.

Many books have been written and much has been said of the Preacher and his Message, and their relative importance. The message is dependent upon the messenger, and the messenger is nothing without a message. The Master put the two together and they cannot be separaed. He recognized the importance of the one to the success of the other. He not only called disciples, but He gave them a message: "Go ye into all the world." What for? To preach the Gospel. He did not give the Gospel and leave it to its good fortune to get about among men. He gave the Gospel a messenger. Nor did He call the messenger and send him out without a message, for He knew he would be a failure. The messenger must carry a message always and on all occasions. He must be shod with the preparation of the Gospel. "Believe, and thou shalt be saved." "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" The Preacher and his Message are one and inseparable. What is more inspiring than a message from God? What is more glorious than to bear that message. The man with his message is the hope of the Church and of the world.

One has said that a man must be greater than his message, but if the message is from God—and it must be—it is greater than the man. Neither can be exhausted by the other. The message is of God and the messenger is called of God. The message is divine and the call is divine. They are not of themselves, but of God.

The preacher with a message is not enough. He must know his message. A workman is judged by his ability to use his tools. A preacher will also succeed in accordance to the degree he masters his message. For the progress of either, their knowledge of each other is imperative. The preacher must know his message. His message is from God, therefore he must know God.

The Character of the Message.

God is a spirit and man must worship Him in spirit and in truth. The message, therefore, must be a spiritual message. Any message from God must possess the Spirit of God. Not only must the message be of the Spirit, it must be clothed in the Spirit and delivered with the Spirit, and with authority. The Holy Scriptures are the authority of the Gospel, and for the message to be delivered with authority, the messenger must know the scriptures. "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me."

The message should attack sin; not in petty detail, but upon the great principles as given by the Master-preacher. The message should attack sin in such a way as to make man dread its consequences. Picture the sin rather than the person. One does not have to be told that he is a sinner. He knows it already. The business of the preacher is to bring Christ to men and to do it in such a way that man will be inspired to live in the likeness of Christ. It isn't sin that the preacher is to bring to the people, but Christ who is able to deliver from sin.

The Message Should Be Inspiring.

The message must lift men up, even more, it must move them, but still more, it must move them toward God. The message that moves men God-ward is the successful message. When this is done, the preacher with his message is filling the divine commission: to win men to Christ by lifting Him up before them; to build them up in Christ by feeding them the Bread of Life; to send them out for Christ, that the world might be brought into a saving knowledge of Him.

The character of the message must be such as will meet the needs of the day in which it is delivered. The Gospel is not for those who lived in the past, any more than it is for those who live today. It is a living Gospel, and must be preached to meet the needs of living people. It is the Gospel, not of a dead but, of a Living Christ.

The Delivery of the Message.

The preacher has a message, not to keep, but to deliver. The Gospel is effective only when it comes in contact with human life and experience. It is quite a dangerous thing for one to depend upon his personal power to put the message across. It isn't the delivery that counts, so much as what he has to deliver. Its delivery has, indeed, a lot of influence on the message, but the message only is vital to human hearts.

The message, as it falls from the lips of the messenger, must be wrapped in love, both for the message and its hearers. Christ saved men by giving them a loving message, with love. Lambasting and abuse have no place in the pulpit. God is love, and His message must be a mesage of love. He never abused one because of their sins. Love for Christ hateth sin, and to love Him supremely is enough to draw men from the depths of sin. The preacher can never drive a man out of sin. He must, like the Master, lead men from sin into righteousness.

The preacher must first put himself into the message with preparation and be its master. Then in its delivery, he must hide self, that the Master may be seen. Affectation is by no means to enter the messenger or his message. It has no place in either. Let the preacher stand upright in his pulpit, be neat in his dress, clear in his thought, pleasant in facial expression, letting his whole soul and body, under the power of the Holy Spirit, proclaim the message of Salvation to all the world.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

NUMBER TEN—CHRISTIANITY, A WORLD RELIGION.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

While there are many religions in the world, Christianity is destined to become the leading religion of the world. It is pointed out in some quarters that Christianity has failed; that it has become a prey and a plaything for materialism; that it has not been able to vouchsafe to humanity immunity from war; that it has been unable to control the thoughts and actions of the world; that it has not made the progress that it should have made. But the parasite of materialism, the apostasy of nations, the perplexity of the thought-life of the world, and the slow progress of the Christian religion, is explained solely upon the hypothesis of the absence of the spirit and practice of Christianity. Christianity has not failed in Europe or America. There is nothing wrong with the principles of Christianity, and because of this, Christianity will ultimately heal the ills of the world.

It is the unrefutable testimony of personal experience, responsible affirmation, and authoritative history that the first duty of Christianity is not the teaching of creeds, ethics, and doctrines, but the promotion and propagation of spiritual values. It must say to industry, commerce, and politics, that the reason their principles do not function is because they lack spiritual content and power. The progress of Christianity is slow, but sure. We need not be surprised that it makes slow progress. This is due largely to its spiritual content and high ideals. We are not surprised that any old trickster can organize a movement and command a following. We do not wonder that a clever conjurer in doctrine can beguile people and make them shout themselves hoarse for his cause. This is true because the thing requires no great amount of effort to understand it. It is without the vitalizing force of Christianity, and is based on very low and common ideals.

A great many people see only the progress of evil. They count the periods long in which there is a perceptible growth in Christianity. They see only the recessions—not the progressions. They are blinded by the fog of evil, struck by the achievements of the secular, but slow to acknowledge the gains of Christianity. People gather manna, eat to their satisfaction, sing a song and go out, and sin again. They cry unto heaven bounty, tremble around the base of Sinai and say a feeble prayer; but ere the shadow of the leader has passed away, they take their jewelry, make an idol and forget the Hand that saved them. But this receding tide of the unfaithful few prepares the way for others, and little by little, permanent gains are made. Just as the mother waits long months for the child to walk and learn the first sylable of her name, so God waits long years for men to learn of Him and His love. But he waits not in vain, for He has seen progress.

While all of humanity is not evangelized, the world is girdled with evangelizing agencies. From Greenland to Patagonia, from Norway to Good Hope, and throughout the isles of the sea, multitudes of Gospel messengers are proclaiming the principles of Christianity. And this has been made possible only because Christianity is the only religion that makes a man feel that he is his brother's keeper. It prepares man to meet the demands of humanity, the demands of our national and international life, and every crisis that may arise. No other religion has in it the power and ability to do this. There is no other religion that has the power to perpetuate itself. The Christian religion identifies man with God as the limb is identified with the trunk of the tree. No institution, city, or nation has such power. Babylon had wealth, Greece had schools and scholars, Rome had organized society, armies and law, Ephesus had her great temple of Diana, which challenged the supremacy of God, Demetrius made many images of unknown gods, but these things had no self-perpetuating powers. But Christianity goes on with its civilizing and Christianizing processes. Its charity is inclusive, its faith is more hopeful, and its victory is more assuring.

It is the testimony of the centuries that Christianity is serviceable. It works. It visits the fatherless and the widows; it makes more room at the table for the orphan; it brings comfort to hearts that have been made desolate; it supplies the desolate and sorrowing with a new song; it removes the clouds of doubt and depression from the minds and hearts of men; it lifts the heavy burdens from weary lives; it silences the wrecking storms that threaten the peace of men; it mitigates howling poverty, sharing its bounty and hospitality it leads the halt, the maimed, and the blind across the dangerous thoroughfares of life; it reconciles capital and labor; it makes employer and employee realize that they are brothers; it will make wars cease and cause peace to reign supreme. No other religion assumes to do this.

A movement so unselfish is destined to cover the earth. It must become world-wide in its scope. The claim is not based on fancy, but on fact. Under the general head, "A Pill for Pessimism," Dr. Frank Crane says that in 1890, the population of the United States was 63,000,000 and the church membership 21,000,000, while in 1922 the population had increased to 108,000,000 and the church membership to 47,000.000. On a percentage basis the population had increased 68 per cent, and the church membership 118.4 per cent. While the increase is greatest in this country, there is a marked increase in church membership in other nations.

Christianity is practical. A short time ago, while President Coolidge was addressing the World Missionary Convention, at Washington, he said, "Christianity is a highly practical as well as a profoundly spiritual mode of life. It loses nothing of its spiritual quality because of its practical helpfulness. Our confidence in it is justified by our knowledge of its accomplishments." Truly, Christianity is not a system of ethics that may be canned while nations fight and kill each other. Other religions may support such a theory, but not Christianity. It no more permits killing by nations than it permits killing by individuals. Its distinct message to the world is to the effect that warefare and Christianity cannot co-exist. When Christianity loses that element in its message, it should cease to lay claim to its right to live. There was a time when the ears of humanity were closed to the needs of men; but now we respond to the appeals of humanity, whether it be the stumbling endeavors of gigantic Russia, the frantic efforts of Germany to democratize herself, or our brother nearest home, who needs our help. Christianity has done it. There was a time when patriotism meant hate of other nations, but Christianity has and will substitute high ideals for third grade patriotism and restricted nationalism, and tells

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENNISON, Secretary.

A DENOMINATION-WIDE CANVASS

It will be a very helpful matter if our General Convention at its next session would plan for a denomination-wide Every Member Canvass annually on a given date. Such simultaneous effort and plan would be a real step in advance. There are no real obstacles or reasons why we could not and should not do so. It need not interfere with local church years or conference years in any way. Many other denominations with their conference, district, or presbytery meetings which are held at different times, have done this for years, such as both the Presbyterian Church, North, and the Presbyterian Church, South. These two denominations hold their canvass on the third Sunday in March. The United Brethren, who have summer and fall conferences as we do, voted at their last quadrennial conference, to hold just such an annual simultaneous E. M. C., instead of conducting the canvass, as formerly, in different conferences in different months. We congratulate them on this step, and we urge our General Convention to do likewise. They use the second Sunday in May. Most other leading denominations are doing it.

A BENEVOLENCE BUDGET.

With the growing work of the Christians, with our better organization, with the finer spirit of co-operation growing among all our people, with our young people enlisting by the hundreds in the activities and life of the church, with the enlarging vision of our people, we should now plan for a denominational benevolence budget. It is the scientific, scriptural, and practical method of church finance. We suggest to the General Board that it recommend the same to the next General Convention.

DECEMBER THIRTEENTH.

In a natural way the last half of December is given to Christmas matters in all churches. So in a practical way December 13th will in most cases close the active Stewardship period, though it need not do so. We now urge upon all churches and pastors to make that a great enrollment day for Christian stewards. Impressions without expression do not mean a great deal. We should enroll at least ten thousand tithers on December 13th, if all pastors and Stewardship secretaries will make that day a grand climax of their fall Stewardship program. We will furnish tithing cards and church wall charts free upon request. We will send to each enrolled tither a certificate of membership free.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION OFFERING.

Our churches should not fail to teach this year the $40,000 absolutely needed for our Christian Education work. If we do not support our colleges, from which comes our denominational leadership, we cripple our churches and the work of the Kingdom in a most critical time and way. We must train our young people in the work of the Kingdom and for leadership in our churches. Each of us personally should do his very best to make our personal gifts worthy of the work. Will you not help your church to do what it should do?

STEWARDSHIP NUMBERS.

The November issue of the Journal of Christian Education is a splendid Stewardship number. The list of writers on different phases of Stewardship is a most representative one and contains pastors, laymen, church officials, college graduates, and teachers. We wish every leader in all of our churches and Sunday Schools took this splendid magazine. Our workers who do not read it do not know what they are missing. We greatly appreciate this Stewardship number of the Journal and hope that all the articles may be carefully read.

The Herald of Gospel Liberty will have a Stewardship number on November 12th. These special issues indicate the increasing interest in Stewardship and will be of much help to our church's program for November and December.

ALABAMA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Woman's Missionary Conference in Alabama met in its first session this year separate from the general conference. It was really the third annual session, but the other two sessions were held during the sitting of the general conference and were wedged in between the sessions of that conference.

One year ago the women voted to have a conference all their own this year, and the session today proved the wisdom of that division. For the women had a whole day to themselves in which to lay plans and discuss their problems. It was a great and epoch making day in this conference, as results will show.

Mrs. E. M. Carter, Wadley, Ala., was president the past year, and is to serve the coming year. She is deeply interested in the work and makes a capable presiding officer.

Mrs. Lois Melton, Roanoke, Ala., is the efficient secretary. She read a fine paper on, "What Alabama Women Can do for Missions." Mrs. Annie Orr, of Lineville, Ala., is treasurer, and she certainly looks after collecting and reporting the funds. She reported that while the conference last year had six organized societies, this year there were nine, and while the amount of dues asked for was $75.00, there had been sent in over $100.00. And this did not include any "specials" or money raised outside of dues. The conference voted that all mission money raised by societies be sent to the conference treasurer, and that the goal for the coming year be $500.00. It was voted that Home Mission Specials this year go to the new church building fund of Roanoke, Ala., and the Foreign Mission Specials go to the support of a Bible woman or pastor in Japan. The conference voted to divide itself into four groups next spring and that a Mission Rally be held in each one of these four groups. The executive Committee is to prepare for the rallies and also elect the officers for each group.

It was also decided unanimously by the conference to make March, 1926, Missionary Month, and to do all it can in helping to raise money for our $25,000.00 Emergency Mission Fund.

The talks, discussions and papers by the women were intelligent, practical and inspiring. In addition to the one mentioned, Mrs. C. W. Carter, of Wadley, gave an exceedingly interesting and helpful address of welcome on behalf of the entertaining society,

The President, Mrs. E. M. Carter, gave in her annual message a paper of encouragement and of challenge to the entire conference. Mrs. Sion Lynam read a very thoughtfully and ably prepared paper on "What Missions can do for Alabama Women."

A very much appreciate paper, and helpful one to the conference, was read from Mrs. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va., President of our Woman's Southern Board.

Rev. G. D. Hunt made a telling plea for subscriptions to The Christian Missionary, and secured several subscriptions.

Managing Editor P. J. Kernodle, of THE SUN, was present and made some helpful and timely suggestions.

The next session of the conference is to be held at Cragford, and the time was left to the Executive Committee. The officers serving last year were all re-elected for the coming year.

Mrs. Vernon Carter led the morning devotionals and Miss Siddie Latham the afternoon devotionals.

The women of this conference are deeply interested in their work, and are determined, by God's help, to push forward until every church in the general conference has a wide awake, working Missionary Society.

It was a joy to be with them in this first separate session and to note the deep interest and the intense anxiety to carry forward the work of making our Saviour's name known in the world.

The luncheon which was served by the good women was beautiful, ample, abundant.

It was good to be there.

October 25th has been set apart as Prison Sunday. Churches are being asked to discuss on that day matters touching present prison conditions, the treatment of men following release from prison, and other vital points touching the subject. The Central Howard Association, 608 South Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., has prepared special material for the use of pastors.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Church mission secretaries, members of missionary societies, mission superintendents of Sunday Schools, and pastors in the Virginia Valley Central Conference, are hereby reminded of the School of Missions to be held at Mt. Olivet (R), on Saturday following Thanksgiving Day. All the above-mentioned persons are also urged to see to it that every church in the conference has one or more representatives at this missionary meeting. meeting.

The services are to begin at 10 A. M., and will continue only one day. Interesting speakers are to be present. No church or society can afford to miss this School of Missions.

MRS. B. F. FRANK, Secretary,
Woman's Mission Board.

A committee of chorus girls has called on the Salvation Army to ask that that organization build a home near Times Square, New York, for chorus girls out of work. They ask that if the home is built that it be called the "Merry, Merry Club.". The Army has taken the matter under serious advisement.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

November 1, 1925.

"The Fight Against Strong Drink."
(World's Temperance Sunday.)

Golden Text: "Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of His might."—Eph. 6: 10.

Lesson: Eph. 6: 1-20.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 94: 1-8.

Reference Material: Isa. 5: 1--14; 22; 23; 28: 1-8.

The Christian life is a war-fare. It is a fight to the finish, in which no quarter is asked and in which none is given. The better Christian a man would be, the more bitter the struggle. And there is no respite until the warrior is called home to rest. Paul realized all these things and he not only urges others to fight the good fight of faith, he fights a good fight himself. In fact he says that he has fought a good fight, when he writes to Timothy in later life. Those who emphasize the softer aspect of life would find no sympathy in Paul, for he realized all too well the sterner aspects of the struggle for character.

This war-fare or fight to the finish is all the more bitter because we have to fight against allied enemies. In the first place there are those impulses from within, many of them which surge up within us with insistent and powerful force. Some of them as the hunger for food, the hunger for companionship, especially with the other sex, the desire to achieve, and many others, are not bad in themselves. But unless they are guided and held in check, unless they are made allies of ourselves, they will manifest themselves as enemies to our moral and spiritual life in the form of intemperance in eating or drinking, immorality, undue ambition, and so on. In all of our lives there are certain forces, certain temptations —appetite, temper, ambition pride, selfishness, loose tongue, indifference, sloth, and many others—which are enemies of the higher life, and which must be recognized as common enemies and faced and fought accordingly. One need not write at length on this subject. Every reader of this article knows that there is in his own life that thing which must be fought to the death, if he is to be master of his life and destiny.

As if this were not enough, there are enemies from without. Evil takes organized form without, and always there is the danger that the subtile enemies from within will open the door and gate and let the enemies from without into the life. Here again there is no need to write at length, for every reader of this article knows that when he takes himself in hand and determines to fight the enemies within his own life, the battle is rendered more bitter and intense because of the forces from without which come with such powerful appeal to the forces that well up from within. As a matter of fact, Paul depicts the intensity and the almost hopelessness of the fight in the seventh chapter of Romans, where he cries in despair, "O wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from the body of this death." It is a bitter experience in life to be called upon to fight this implacable warfare. But there is something still worse. To be dull to spiritual things as not to feel the challenge of the fight; to submit to the reign of the enemy; to surrender after having made a half-hearted fight—it were better to be dead. Pity the man who has lost the zest for battle against evil out of his heart.

What shall we do in the face of the fight that awaits us? Paul suggests that we arm ourselves. He speaks in terms that his readers would understand, terms that no doubt were suggested by the garb of the soldiers who held him a prisoner even as he wrote his letter to the Ephesians. A man would not think of going out to fight an enemy without being prepared. How dare a Christian go out to fight the devil and the world-rulers of darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in high places, without arming himself for this bitter struggle.

The whole armor of God—there must be no vulnerable spots. (Perhaps Paul was familiar with the story of Achilles.) The loins must be girded with truth. The girdle was necessary to the garments of peace, for it kept the flowing robes from going awry, but it was much more necessary in armor, for it girded all together and gave a sense of stability and strength. Truth, integrity, honesty of purpose and genuineness of life—these were to be the girdles that gave the warrior compactness and strength.

The breastplate of righteousness—that covered not the vulnerable and vital spots of the chest, but of the back as well. A soldier was especially well guarded if he had a good breast-plate of heavy material, a woven coat of mail. Righteousness—a right inner life expressed in right conduct, a holy life, this was to be the breastplate of righteousness.

The feet were to be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Have you ever thought about how important it is that a soldier's feet be kept in good condition? The boys who went over-seas know how much attention was devoted to their feet. He who would make long marches over roads that were not only naturally rough, but which had been made dangerous by the enemy, must have his feet well shod and see to it that they are taken care of. Peace, the good will toward all men is the best preparation in the battle of life.

The shield of faith. Arrows were dipped in tar or other highly inflamable material, were set on fire, and then were hurled at an enemy. Soldiers therefore carried large shields made out of leather or other fire-proof material, and with these shields they warded off the fiery darts. So likewise the soldier of Christ is to carry as his shield, faith, a faith in the goodness of God, in the ultimate triumph of righteousness, a faith in the saving power of Jesus Christ.

The helmet of salvation—the helmet protected the head.

And, finally, the sword of the Spirit. It was not enough to fight a defensive battle, one must launch an offensive, and the Word of God is powerful even as a two-edged sword. The Christian who does not carry the Word of God in his mind and heart is not ready to meet the enemy.

There must be more than physical equipment; there must be moral courage. The soldier of Christ is to stand. There is to be no fear and no retreat. The source of that moral and spiritual courage is to be found in prayer, which brings the spirit of the Living God into the life. If God be for us who can be against us? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?

There is a far-flung battle line today. The army of Christ is called upon to wage a stern and uncompromising warfare against the forces of evil, both from without and from within. There is no place for slackers or for unarmed men. There is a call to arms. Be strong; quit you like men. Fight the good fight of faith. Lay hold of the life eternal. And unto him that is faithful unto the end, the Lord will give a crown of eternal life.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

November 1, 1925.

Consecration Meeting.

Topic: "Can We Live by the Golden Rule?"

Bible References: Matt. 7: 12; Lev. 19: 18; Gal. 6: 1.

Repeat in unison: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

Prayer (To be read): "O God, our Father, we know that Thou dost love all men. In Thy sight all of us here on earth are brothers and sisters in one great human family. Forgive us, our Father, if we put ourselves above any one in our thoughts. Only Thou dost know how much better or how much worse we are than other people. May we guard ourselves against the proud gratitude that makes us feel glad because we are better off than our brothers.

We are glad that each of us is one of many millions of men and women and children on this earth of Thine; that each is included in Thy plan for the world, and that each one of us shares in the good things that Thou hast given to the world. Help us to share joyfully with our fellowmen. We ask in Jesus' name. Amen.—Adapted from Manual for Training in Worship.

Roll call of members. Response with verse from scripture which Jesus said. (Announced ahead.)

Sentence prayers.

Consecration offering.

Song: "Have Thine Own Way Lord."

Plans for the Meeting.

The leader should pray and plan for this meeting and begin in time. It should be a real lesson in cuselfishness and living for others. Some of the following things may be suggested for the society to do as a whole, or for individual members to do, to live the Golden Rule:

1. Winning three people to Christ within the next two months. This may be by personal work or by confession in the meetings. What finer way can we live the Golden Rule?

2. Gaining two new members during the month of November.

3. Plans for Christmas giving to be discussed now, looking toward a Christmas tree, gifts for shut-ins; Christmas caroling, and so forth.

4. Letters to missionaries on the field. (For oddresses look in the Christian Missionary, or write Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C.)

Leader's Talk in Outline.

Jesus gave us the Golden Rule and many other rules for living with others and proving our Christianity. Read Matt. 5: 2-11. "But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment; and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council; but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire."

"Love your neighbor as yourself." "And whosoever shall compel thee to go with him a mile, go with him twain." "But I say unto you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

Why do we have Christian Endeavor? We had others in mind when the Society was organized, because our thoughts were for the young people of the church. Each member is an important part of the Society, because he is being helped and is helping others. How are we living outside of our meetings? In our homes? In school? In business? Are our discussions from week to week helping us to be more kind and courteous to others?

Make some suggestions as to things the Society can do to help others. A few are listed above.

Topics for Discussion.

1.—The Golden Rule in Business. Get the book, "The Golden Rule in Business," from your public library. Call attention to Ford and his treatment of employees. Mention the improvement of factory surroundings in certain cities. Discuss the child labor law.

2.—The Golden Rule in the Home. Unselfishness. Working together. Sharing pleasures. Observing birthdays.

3.—The Golden Rule and Keeping Friends. "The way to have a friend is to be one." "Remember your best friend was once a stranger."

Questions to be Answered in Meeting.

1.—How can living the Golden Rule make us happier?

2.—How may we have the Golden Rule applied in politics?

3.—How may nations live the Golden Rule?

4.—How will the Golden Rule help us to solve the racial problems in our country and others?

5.—How is living the Golden Rule like "Cheerful giving?"

TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The offering for the Board of Christian Education is to be taken Sunday, November 1st. The budget of the Board is $40,000 per year. Much of this money is spent in the South, and we should contribute at least $5,000 of this amount.

Many of our Sunday Schools sent in good offerings last year. Some failed to take the offering. We hope to have an offering from every school this year. Try to make your contribution average at least 25 cents per member for your total enrollment.

Send all contributions to Mr. C. H. Stephenson, 120 W. Martin Street, Raleigh, N. C., and please forward the offerings promptly.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew the great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

THE SOUL SUPREME.

"Be not afraid of them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."—Matt. 10: 28.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul."—Matt. 22: 37.

"May your spirit, soul and body be preserved entire, without blame at the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ."—I. Thess. 5: 23.

The soul is the supreme value of all things and must not be subordinated to the rights of property or personal gain. It is the origin of our thoughts, our desires, our reasonings. It is spiritual because it thinks, and immortal because it is spiritual. It is the power of the privilege of wisdom and understanding and the subject and object of future happiness. It is the divine in us—God's image and the object of God's love.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to realize that only by abiding in Thee shall we preserve our souls blameless. Help us to abide in Thee today and forever. Forgive us and save us, we ask in Christ's name. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE WILL AND THE MIND.

"If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin."—Jno. 1: 7.

The root of all evil is to be found in the human will. No one acts without first thinking. Action is the result of thought. One says, "I didn't think." Yes you did. You may not have thought what you think now, but you thought, or you would not have acted.

Therefore the will—the mind—the thought—must be surrendered to the high and holy will and thought of God. Christian ideas and ideals cannot save the world if they be separated from God. We cannot live right separated from God. We must abide in Him and He in us. It is He who must be our guide. There is no escaping this. The result of this union with God is perfect freedom in grace.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us daily to submit to Thy will and Thy thoughts. Help us to follow our own conscience and daily accept the responsibility of doing Thy will "on earth as it is in heaven." Forgive us all of our thoughtlessness and unworthiness and sins, and save us. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

DONNING DAILY DILIGENCE.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God."—II. Tim. 2: 15.

Revised version: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God."

We have our daily problems—individual problems and community problems. The solution of all of them depends upon individual approvedness unto God and everybody being right. We have to recognize these problems and understand that they cannot be solved by law nor by individual effort alone, but by all together exercising control over individual action every day.

Every soul must be so educated that he may be enabled to exercise Christian discernment in all things. This is done by study, communion with the saints, fellowship with godly people and by personal prayer, "growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord" so that we may apprehend the mind of Christ in all things.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to live the inspired life and daily to come to the throne of grace for succor, that we may live unto Thee until we are called from this dying world unto Thee to live with Thee forever. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"HE THAT SHOWETH MERCY."

LESSON: Luke 10: 25-37.

It isn't the victory that counts, lads,
It's the way that you put up the fight.
It isn't the path that you go, lads,
As long as you travel it right.

It isn't the goal at the top, boys,
That counts when the journey is through;
But the fellows you've helped on the road, lads,
That tip the scales for you.

It isn't the pace that you go, lads,
It's the way the fellow climbs, bit by bit,
Who plods when the others are first, lads,
Yet stays when the others have quit.

It isn't the smile of the victor,
That weaves golden stars for his crown,
But the twisted old grin that he gives, lads,
To the fellow who smiles when he's down.

It isn't defeat that will count, lads,
Or the things that we gain, you and I;
But the way that you shoulder your fight, lads,
And lived when you wanted to die.

It isn't the things that we do, lads,
If we win, or stumble, or fail,
But the heart we've brought all the way, lads,
That will count at the end of the trail.

—Edna Jaques in Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Prayer.—All join in the Lord's Prayer.

FRIDAY.

REMEMBER THE NEEDY.

LESSON: Leviticus 19: 9-10

"Thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field; thou shalt leave them for the poor and the stranger."

"The night was bitter. Sleet, driving in from the North, had overlaid the sidewalks with ice. On the corner stood a belated newsboy, swinging his hands against his sides, stamping his numbed feet, and blowing his warm breath upon his stiff fingers. From an office building came a man armored against the cold by a heavy fur coat. This man bought a paper from the boy, and observant persons saw that he searched through a handful of silver for the necessary two pennies, after which he turned back into the office building, having forgotten something. Then the rich man's chauffeur also bought a paper. There was this difference, however—the chauffeur brought forth the requisite two cents and then, after searching his pockets, added a dime. He gave the twelve cents to the newsboy with a smile, and the brightness of the boy's face was requital abundant.

"Trivial at first thought, the incident is an apt illustration of the text. Moses cautioned the Israelites against the too close reaping of the fields. 'Let there be something for the needy.' With the passage of years, this word of God became more insistent. Jesus raised it to the highest pitch, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.' We are to minister to others even as we would to the Lord Jesus if we saw Him in need. The ancient people were asked to leave the gleanings in the field; we are to do more—we must be on the lookout to find the needy."—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Prayer.—May our hearts be ever tender and compassionate toward the needy, the homeless, the sick and the stranger. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE MINISTRY OF LITTLE THINGS.

LESSON: I. Cor. 5: 6-8.

"Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?"

"This is the day of spectacular event and the theatrical appeal. Big names and deeds are thrown upon the horizon. Yet there are men and women in every community expressing themselves in the Christian life by helpful ministry and heroic endeavor without garish display or ostentation. Like leaven, working silently and efficiently, they are influencing their environments. Some of the greatest forces in the universe are silent. Christian living is not a matter of dimension of the task, but the comprehension of its need—not of location but of consecration."

—Rev. Richard Braunstein.

One of the greatest compliments ever given to anyone was the Master's "She hath done what she could." Jesus fed the multitude on the mountainside with the store of a lad's lunch-basket.

It may not be given to everyone to adorn the cathedral walls with angel faces and forms of Madonnas, but even the door-keeper in the house of the Lord is on the pay-roll of the Almighty. The army may be lost without its generals and captains, but it is nothing without its soldiers.

God Himself is not always in the big things, but in our homes, in mothers' hearts, in children's obedience, in father's work, in little deeds of helpfulness that are never heralded.

Prayer.—Our Father, may we, by faithful though humble service and continual well-doing, be able to win others to the Kingdom. For Christ's sake we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE THIRSTY SOUL'S CRY.

LESSON: Psalm 32: 1-7.

"My moisture is turned into the drought of summer."

"For this shall every one that is godly pray unto Thee."

"When Cowper in one of his disconsolate moments, wrote:

'But now I find an aching void
The world can never fill,'

he meant to express the same spiritual want as the Psalmist, when he said, 'My moisture is turned into the drought of summer,' only he used another bit of imagery. The one is speaking in the language of the West, the other in the language of the East. Each means the lost sense

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

My Dear Pollyanna:

You forgot me this week! Oh—it makes me feel queer as can be—but maybe you were busy, dear Polly, and maybe—oh, just maybe—you were too busy at school to remember to write your editor your Pollyanna letter. Someone did write a beautiful little letter to me, and its full of good things her Pollyanna did for her—and things she did for HER Pollyanna. But remember this week, dears, for it is important that you get the prize if you were the BEST Pollyanna playing. I'd write heaps and loads of letters, if I felt like a prize was coming my way—and the prize depended on the letter. This time, now, I will expect to get a great Auto-truck, packed full—up to the brim—of Kiddie Korner letters. THIS WEEK, too—and won't that be fun?

I am sorry to tell you that Peter Rabbit has been very, very sick. In fact, his Ma had to keep him in bed two weeks—isn't that too bad—and Dr. Wise Owl called every day one week. It was the week Peter was sneezing and coughing—oh, oh. And he had to have another mustard plaster too—poor, dear little Peter. So he had to miss his birthday party, Kiddies! But, My, the day that was his birthday, Mother Rabbit gave him his new presents and put pillows behind his back. And when he gets out of bed, Peter Rabbit has a brand-new man suit to wear, with long trousers, a vest with pockets, and a real shirt—yes, sir-ee—and a little-man coat, and shinny shoes and a cap—all to wear to Sunday School, as soon as he is able.

I almost forgot to say that Peter plays a Saxaphone in the orchestra every Sunday.

But that wasn't so bad for a sick little rabbit on his birthday, was it, Kiddies?

"The rain is raining all around,
It fall on fields and tree—
It rains on the umbrellas here
And on the ships at sea."

And THAT little verse makes me think of what I am going to write to my Kiddies next week. Its a little story about someone over the sea—a little country called "Little Russia"—and the story is a little old, old legend. But wait—I'll tell you next week all about it!

Get your umbrella, dears—and your overshoes, too—before you start to school. For you really want to go today and hear that lovely, rainy-day story Miss Jones will tell. I wish'd I wuz's little as you—so I could hear it. But I'm too big—now—and too grown up—

Your little, old, old editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

DAVID AND THE GIANT GOLIATH.

One day David's father asked him to take some bread and corn and cheese to his brothers, who were in a soldiers' camp. They were fighting for the king, and David's father wanted to know how they were getting along.

David was not old enough to be a soldier, but he was glad to go to the camp for his father. He got up early and left his sheep with another shepherd and started with the lunch for his brothers. It was quite a long way, but David hurried, and at last he heard the soldiers shouting and he knew he was almost there. Then he saw the brass coats of a great crowd of soldiers on the hill.

Quickly David ran to his brothers and told them all about their father and gave them their lunch. As they were talking, a great, tall man came up on another hill, and David's brothers and all the soldiers were afraid, because they said he was a giant.

He was the tallest man David had ever seen, and he was covered with a coat of brass from head to foot, and he carried a great shield so that no one could hurt him.

"Who will come to fight me?" called the giant in a very loud voice—but everyone was afraid. No one dared go near him. They told David how, every day, the giant had asked for someone to come and fight with him, but how everyone was afraid.

Then David went to the king and said: "I will go to fight the giant—I am not afraid."

The king said: "But you are only a boy, and the giant is a man, and he has been a soldier all his life."

David said: "I take care of my father's sheep, and I have killed a bear and a lion that would have taken my little lambs. God gave me strength to kill them and He will give me strength to kill the giant."

Then the king said: "Go, and God will be with you."

Then the king offered David the very best coat of brass that he had, but David refused to have it. He took his stick, and from the brook he picked up five smooth stones and put them in his shepherd's bag, took his sling in his hand and went to meet the giant.

When the giant saw David coming he was very angry. He saw he was only a boy instead of a soldier, and that he was not even dressed like a soldier. The giant talked very cross to David and said he would kill him.

David answered: "You come with a sword and a spear and a shield, but I come with God helping me."

And David ran toward the giant, and he put his hand in his bag and took out a stone, and with his sling he shot it. The stone hit the giant on the forehead and he fell to the ground. The soldiers shouted for joy, they had won, they were saved, for David had killed the giant.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

Could we with ink the ocean fill,
And of this earth a parchment make;
And every reed on earth a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade,
To tell the love of God alone
'Twould drain the mighty ocean dry,
And could the scroll contain the whole,
'Twould surely reach from earth to sky!

FAMILY ALTAR.

of the presence of God. The pleasures and luxuries of an Oriental court failed to revive and freshen the waste places of the Psalmist's soul. The foliage of his life had failed, and the flowers withered in the bud, because the true sap of life had run dry. He had forsaken God, but God had not forsaken him.

"We see a bit of the pearl of the dawn in today's echo of the cry of this singer in Israel. The spirit of heaviness is abroad. The 'moisture' of nations and individuals is being turned into the 'drought of summer.' From the churches we hear the pathetic cry of thirsty souls. When men suffer from the drought, they pray for the showers."—Rev. Alfred J. Reynolds.

Lord's Prayer.—All the Circle joining.

Closing Prayer (by one of the parents), asking that the prayers of God's people throughout our land, for a spiritual awakening and a moral cleansing may be abundantly answered, and that the supplications of the Christian Conscience Crusade may result in a revival that will reach the heart of the nation and win multitudes.

Dear Friends:

Just a few things we want to ask you not to forget.

First.—Winter is near. The children need shoes, clothing, wraps, etc. Send us a box from your church. It will help us and make us happy.

Second.—The work on our new building is moving on nicely and the contractor presents a bill on the first of each month for work done. If your church has not raised the amount asked for, will you not do so right away and write me? If you have made a subscription, and have not sent in the first payment, will you not do so now?

Third.—Thanksgiving will soon be here. We want every church and Sunday school to do its best this year to raise the largest offering it has ever raised. We need it. We have been in the dry belt this year and have made very poor crops indeed. Make your plans several weeks ahead and let it be known that you will receive this offering on a certain day, and ask everyone to help.

The following articles have been sent in since the last report:

men and nations to understand each other and they can live in peace. It is not going beyond the limits of reason to say that when Christianity fails to so apply its principles it unfits itself to fill its mission as a world religion. Just as science is unable to explain perfectly the frame of a soap-bubble, and philosophy is unable to explain perfectly the technique of music, so Christianity should not try to explain the niceties of faith, but apply its principles to the world's ills.

PRESENT CONDITIONS IN NIGERIA.

Nigeria is a British colony on the west coast of Africa. It is situated on the River Niger. The population is 18,000,000 Europeans and natives, their occupations being mostly agriculture, fishing and weaving. As in any other British colony, the chance for cultural education is favorable; this is especially true of its capital, Lagos.

Tillage operations are simple. They are as primitive as those of Babylonian days. With the hatchet and long knife usually spoken of by the natives as cutlass, the marmer sets out to cut the undergrowth of thickly covered forests, applies fire to it, and after the fire has died out digs holes in the burnt patch by means of a long stick and drops in his corn or beans, smooths the soil over, then, without any further labor waits patiently for Nature to bring the plants to the ripening stage. This practice holds true of certain sections. In some other sections tillage operations are on a higher standard. Nevertheless, even that standard is not to be commended. Here the hoe is used for digging up the soil and making mounds for crops, corn, beans and yams. Planting is done by digging holes in the mounds made, dropping three to six seeds into the hole, and then smoothing it over. Inter-cultivation is practiced. Farmers go out at various intervals to chop down weeds; the hoe is used for this purpose. Horses, though to be found in Nigeria, are not made use of in farming. The age of modern and scientific farming has not yet dawned there.—Southern Workman.

THE LOOKING GLASS.

A man was complaining of his neighbors. "Never saw such a wretched set of people," he said, "as are in this village. They are mean, greedy of gain, selfish, and careless of the needs of others. Worst of all, they are forever speaking evil one of another." "Is it really so?" said the angel who happened to be walking with him. "It is indeed," said the man. "Why, only look at this fellow coming toward us! I know his face, though I cannot just remember his name. See his little shark-like, cruel eyes darting here and there like a ferret's and the lines of covetousness about his mouth! Why, the very droop of his shoulders is mean and cringing, and he slinks along instead of walking." "It is very clever of you to tell all this," said the angel, "but there is just one thing which you did not perceive." "What is that?" asked the man. "That it is a looking glass we are approaching," said the angel.—Baptist World.

In many Italian villages bread is taken to the village bakery to be baked, for few homes have fires in them.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

The Prince Goes Home.—

Amidst the thundering of guns from saluting warships, the whirring of aeroplanes above, and a proverbial English haze over all, England, on Friday, October 16th, welcomed home his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, from his twenty-five thousand mile journey to South America and South Africa. The Prince standing on the bridge of his ship acknowledged the salutes and cheers of the seamen on the ships drawn up along the course of the Repulse.

Ochs Receives Degree.—

Thursday, October 16th, Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, received an honorary degree from the University of Chattanooga. The president, Arlo A. Brown, bestowed the degree, that of Doctor of Letters, in the presence of a very distinguished assemblage. Dr. Brown characterized Mr. Ochs as "the directing genius of the greatest newspaper in the world." Mr. Ochs said in his response that he had never been so proud as at this moment when his home people were conferring so high an honor upon him.

To Erect Memorial.—

The Louisiana Catholics, after all these years, are planning to erect a memorial to the French Catholic Acadians who came to Louisiana when they were driven from their country by the British. A fifty-acre park is to be developed on the banks of the Teche bayou, near St. Martinsville, which is said to be the identical spot where Evangeline planned her tryst with Gabriel as preserved in Longfellow's "Evangeline." Bishop Shaw, a leading Catholic has given the plan his approval and has made the first subscription to the money needed.

A La Francais.—

Austin Chamberlain, British Secretary of Foreign affairs, followed French official etiquette on October 19th, and Mrs. Chamberlain did likewise. They and Aristide Briand, French Foreign Secretary, were greeted by a large and enthusiastic crowd at the Gare de L'Est upon their arrival from Locarno where the Security Pact agreement was concluded. In token of his friendly feeling Secretary Chamberlain kissed M. Briand on both cheeks and the crowd cheered. Mrs. Chamberlain repeated the salute, and tumultuous were the cheers.

Hebrew University Moves Forward.—

Dr. Albert Einstein, the world famous author of the theory of relativity, has been elected chairman of the academic council of the Hebrew University at Jerusalem. This council will function until a permanent university senate can be formed. Dr. Judah L. Magnes has been chosen Chancellor of the university and Norman Bentwich has been crosen Vice-Chancellor. A department of Oriental studies has been decided upon. It will include departments of Oriental languages, culture, and archaeology. The university, as it is being planned, should be in a large way a contributor to the world's knowledge.

More New England Atmosphere.—

With the appointment Saturday, October 17th, of Dwight F. Davis as Secretary of War, President Coolidge brought a bit more New England spirit to Washington official and social circles. He brought also a very delightful and charming family. Mrs. Davis, who will have the honor of standing third "in the blue room line" from the "first lady" of the land at all White House receptions, was Miss Helen Brooks of Boston. With her three daughters, Mrs. Davis witnessed the ceremony which placed her husband in a very important position. She showed no signs of the wear and tear of an illness which has harrassed her for more than a year. Her friends hope that after her sojourn in Europe the past summer, she has regained her normal good health.

The new war minister, himself, comes from Missouri. He is the grandson of a pioneer merchant of St. Louis. He entered the war as a private and came out of it a Lieutenant Colonel. Twice he was cited for bravery. He has functioned in big business and stands strictly for efficiency. It is noteworthy that he is the youngest member of the cabinet, being only forty-six.

Yorktown Celebrates Again.—

Yorktown celebrated one hundred and forty-four years ago, when Lord Cornwallis gave his sword in surrender to General George Washington. But Yorktown held the biggest celebration that this place has ever seen since that first momentuous one, on October 19th. Virginia, official and unofficial, the United States Government, representatives of many of the States, and diplomats of several foreign countries joined in the demonstration which began with a concert by the thirty-fourth United States Infantry band at the old customs house, the first on the American continent. The exercises included a military display, a salute to the flag, band concerts, and addresses by several prominent persons. Besides marking the one hundred and forty-fourth anniversary of the great American victory, this day also marked the material beginning of the Yorktown World Forum. Practically every democratic country in the world has pledged its support to this Forum and is sending important historical documents which bear upon the establishment of democratic governments to this shrine. Many historical libraries have also been given.

Plan Real Study.—

The United Church of Canada is planning real study of worth-while books for its members. Study groups are being organized in all parts of the church, and some have been tried out with marked success. The books to be studied are interesting. They fall into nine groups. The first group concerns itself with biography and includes Porritt's "Life of Jowett," Glover's new book on Paul, The Autobiography of Visecount Grey, and Dr. Harvey Cushing's two-volume life of Sir William Osler. The second group treats of the Bible. It is composed of Fosdick's famous "Modern Use of the Bible," a study of the Fourth Gospel by William Manson entitled "The Incarnate Glory"; "Songs of Service and Sacrifice," by W. G. Jordan, dealing with Isaiah 40 to 55; "Through the Eternal Spirit," J. E. McFayden's book on Hebrews, James and Peter; and "The Local Color of the Bible," by Budden and Hastings.

In a third group dealing with the ministry, there are "Principles of Preaching," by Ozora S. Davis, and "Conversion: Christian and Non-Christian," by A. C. Underwood. The group on theology, includes "The Inner Life," a series of studies by members of the Church of England, and "Honest Liberty in the Church," the report of last year's American Church Congress.

In another group there are four volumes of sermons. Those selected are, "Best Sermons of 1924." edited by Joseph Fort Newton; "There They Crucified Him," by John A. Hutton; "The East Window," by Halford E. Luccock, and "The Inner Circle," by Trevor H. Davies. Social studies, another group, includes "The Story of Social Christianity by F. H. Stead; "The Abolition of War," by Sherwood Eddy and Kirby Page, and "Race and Race Relations," by Robert E. Speer. To a group on the church are assigned, "Essays on Christian Unity," by William Robinson; "The Church's Debt to Heretics," by Rufus M. Jones; "The Early Church and the World," by Cecil J. Cadoux, and the "Mystery of Religions and Christianity," by S. Angus. The only book on missions is "The World's Living Religions," by R. I. Hume. Five books of fiction are included in this book list of the United Church, all of which have to do with religious themes. These are: "Settlers of the Marsh," by F. P. Grove; "The Laughing Buddha," by Jas. Livingston Stewart; "One Increasing Purpose," by A. S. M. Hutchinson; the "Coombe of St. Mary's," by Maude Diver, and "Faith of Our Fathers," by Dorothy W. Carman.

This list of books will be suggestive for a winter's reading for many in our church. It would mean much if we could bring together study groups with a definite purpose.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. H. Dollar writes in this issue of a very timely and important matter. What can be done about it?

There is more of God in the peaceful beauty of this little wood-violet than in all the angry disputations of the sects.—Henry van Dyke.

As yet, the severest critic of the Church has never been able to offer the world a more competent instrument of human progress—Pickett.

That is indeed a fine report from First Church, Norfolk, Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor. It is very inspiring to read a report like that and realize what a real live wide-awake church can accomplish in a year.

We find the following in the weekly "Bulletin" of the Richmond (Va.) Church: "The pastor and his wife wish to thank the members and friends of the church for the very 'substantial' reception tendered them last Thursday evening."

The following is greatfully acknowledged: "Mrs. Joseph Oliver Lancaster requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Rosa Mae, to Mr. William Leslie Ball, on Saturday afternoon, October 31, 1925, at five o'clock, Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va." Our very best wishes are extended.

A Christian Endeavor Society was organized at Happy Home Church, Rev. L. L. Wyrick, pastor, on October 11th, with Miss Ruth Stephens, president, and Miss Clarice Gunn, R. 3, Reidsville, N. C., recording secretary. Proper committees were appointed, capable officers were elected, and the society begins its work under favorable auspices.

Under date of October 15th, Dr. D. A. Long writes: "Franklinton, N. C. I will close the protracted meeting here tonight. Rev. J. Alston Boyd has been with me from the beginning. He preaches and sings remarkably well. We have had a number of reconsecrations and ten or twelve conversions. A few will unite with the Christian Church here next Sunday."

Anything is bad which raises a suspicion as to the value of our existence. Anything is bad that would lead us to disparage the human enterprise. Anything is bad that would make us let our hands fall and our knees shake, face to face, with our elemental duties and responsibilities, and face to face with our own ignorance and the darkness that lies about us. Anything is bad that makes us regret life.—John A. Hutton.

It is noted with sorrow that Deacon W. G. Farrar, of our Suffolk church, has passed away. His death occured at his home in Suffolk, on the morning of October 16th. Bro. Farrar was a good man, a faithful and devout Christian. He was a son-in-law of the late Rev. Edwin Beale, of sainted memory, he having married Miss Lena Beale, a former teacher in Elon College. The bereaved wife and daughter have our sympathy in their grief.

Brother M. J. Carlton feels that the time has arrived when a Christian Church should be established at Cary, N. C. Writing under date of October 14th, he says: "We have fifty or more members of the Christian Church here." Surely this number of Christian Church members can easily begin a work, and without doubt will do so if properly encouraged. The Eastern North Carolina Conference, at its forthcoming session, can well afford to give heed to the importance and the prospect of building a Christian Church at Cary.

Dr. C. C. Ryan, the new pastor of the First Church, Richmond, Va., preached to his smallest audience since he came here on the first of the month, on last Sunday morning. At first thought this statement might seem poor material for the "Notes and Personals" column. Richmond faced on that morning the hardest rain storm that has been seen here during either summer or fall of this year. The rain came down in sheets all of the morning. Churches of the city with memberships of 500 to 1,000 members reported from less than seventy-five to 200 present. With a membership of a hundred, the First Church had forty-six present. We call that a record. Someone said, "It's the biggest crowd we ever had." And it was, in spirit.

One of our contemporaries raises the following question: "Did William Jennings Bryan learn the charm of beautiful words from the oft singing of his father's favorite hymn, 'Kind Words'? It must at least be the secret of his belief in clear, cheerful words that contained no sting to the heart, nor color of uncleanness to be distilled upon the soul like a fog of death.

"Some words are like knives—they gash and bring blood; others are like the sting of scorpions —they inject the poison and venom that tortures and kills; but kind words are like balm on broken hearts, or water to the thirsty, or like the new life that blooms out with brightness and beauty in an old drab world. We think we can see how all Mr. Bryan's fine oratory came out of his father's favorite hymn, 'Kind Words.' "

Due to trouble with machinery last week, some of the papers of the October 22d issue were very greatly delayed. The Richmond papers were in this list, not getting in the mail until Friday evening. Evidently the post office of this city was also somewhat remiss, as one of the first questions to greet the writer of this note on Sunday morning, was as to the whereabouts of the SUN. Deacon J. W. Price was the inquirer, and it does us good to know that the paper is missed by some of our readers when it is late. Brother Price is not only an earnest supporter of his church paper, but is a regular attendant at his church and a consistent giver, as well. It usually is a fact that the man who supports and is interested in his church paper, is interested in the other activities of his church, both local and general.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, NORFOLK.

It was the common belief of the large number of members of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, who attended our annual church conference last night, that the past year was one of the very best in the church's seventy-eight years of history. This was expressed officially in several different written reports, and was heard from the lips of many at the close of the session. There were eighteen written reports from different organizations and boards of the church. All organizations reported an increase in attendance, interest, and finances, and a bright outlook for the future.

Brother Wade H. Parron, a deacon beloved and honored for his fine Christian character, and long years of service as a deacon, Sunday School teacher, and member of the Official Board of the church, was made glad in that he saw two of our younger men whom he had taught as boys Sunday after Sunday in our church, elevated to the high position of deacons. They are Edward H. Everton, Superintendent of our Sunday School, and church clerk, and V. Lee Hanbury, second assistant Superintendent of our Sunday School. Brother Hanbury also becomes treasurer of the church to succeed Brother Guy R. Beale, resigned. Brother Beale's resignation was very reluctantly accepted, as he is one of our finest and most faithful officials.

The conference reached its highest peak of enthusiasm when money was placed on our altar for the first time in the history of the church as a special and voluntary offering to our foreign mission work. This was a fund of two hundred and fifty dollars, written into our budget at the beginning of the closing year for the first time as a start toward becoming a really missionary church. This is over and above the five hundred dollars raised by our church from various other individuals and organizations annually for missions, and this is to be increased twenty per cent this year.

Reports showed that ten ministers had preached in our pulpit during the year; that eighty-four sermons had been preached from our pulpit by the pastor, besides twenty-six children's sermons; that including classes taught, addresses and lectures made, our pastor had delivered two hundred and forty-six messages; that thirty new members were received and that seven thousand, two hundred, sixty-five dollars had been raised by the church. It was agreed by all that while the church had been bereft of three of its best women during the year, it had known in a fuller measure the love of our Lord Jesus Christ.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE GEORGIA AND ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

The annual session of this body convened with Oak Grove Church, not far from Chipley, Ga., on the evening of October 20th. Rev. H. M. Gray, our consecrated and wide-awake pastor at Lanett, Ala., was the president last year, and was re-elected for the coming year. He is held in high esteem in the conference and throws his whole soul and strength into the good work he is doing. He gave the annual address at the opening session which was a passionate plea that we give ear and heed to the summons and challenge of our Lord. The audience was much moved by the discourse and all seemed to enjoy the service very much. There was general regret at the absence of the recording secretary, Miss Aylmer Goodwin, and in her absence, Rev. H. W. Elder was elected recording secretary. The remainder of the first session was given to miscellaneous business, selection of committees, and assignment of homes.

At 8:30 o'clock on the second day, Rev. P. L. Dukes, one of the beloved ministers of the conference, led the devotional service. Because of greatly impaired health, Brother Dukes is not able to carry the responsibilities of the pastorate any longer, but devotes his strength and time to meditation, to prayer, and to the devotional life of his community and nearby places. Rev. W. T. Crowder presented the report on Religious Literature and urged in this report that our people give more time to the reading of the Bible, which is our only rule of faith and practice, and which is also the only creed that our church has. The report also urged a careful reading of our church papers and particularly THE CHRISTIAN SUN, which is dependent upon us for its support. The report was discussed by Managing Editor P. J. Kernodle and others, and was adopted.

The Ministerial and Church reports showed faithful service the past year and gave evidences of progress along many lines. The president called attention to the marked improvement during the year in the matter of collecting conference apportionments. Brother Gray is deeply interested in the work of all the churches and is zealous for good reports from each. Miss Aylmer Goodwin, though absent, sent in the report on Christian Endeavor, which report showed some progress along this line of church work during the past year and appealed to the delegates for more aggressive effort in behalf of Christian Endeavor the coming year. The report was interestingly discussed and adopted.

Rev. C. W. Hanson, our loyal and devoted pastor at La Grange, closed the morning session with a very fervent plea that the brethren and sisters obey the injunction which Paul gave to the Ephesian Church, "Rejoice in the Lord." The minister feels that if we would seek to get our joy in devoted service to God, that joy would be more abiding and would give us courage and energy for more faithful service in church and throughout the Kingdom of God.

The people of Oak Grove spread a bountiful dinner and a great throng gathered under the far-spreading trees and enjoyed the bountiful repast and the delightful fellowship of an hour.

Rev. A. H. Sheppard, another one of our faithful ministers, led the devotional service in the afternoon, and the conference became engaged in committee reports. It was decided to hold the next session of conference at Richland, Ga. Rev. A. B. Mann, one of our consecrated young ministers, presented the report of the Committee on Sunday Schools, in which he exalted the place of Sunday Schools in our Christian activities and called upon the pastors and delegates to take a more lively interest in Sunday School work. The report also urged that all Sunday Schools of the conference take one offering a month for Missions and one offering a month for the Christian Orphanage. Rev. H. W. Elder and others discussed the report, which was helpful to all present.

THE SUN'S Editor was placed on the program and spoke of the oneness of our aim in all church activities and sought to lay before the conference the fact that the Church has enterprises and institutions growing out of it which, however, have the same end in view as the Church itself, namely, to make Christ known to the world and to extend the Kingdom of our Lord among men and women everywhere.

Brother Gray presented the report on Moral Reform, which made a plea for a higher moral tone in society, and called upon Rev. P. L. Dukes to discuss the same. This was done with much interest to the entire conference.

The report on Foreign Missions was presented by Rev. P. L. Dukes and emphasized the facts that we are neither giving to Foreign Missions as we should nor are we sending out missionaries as we ought. There are 70,000 souls in Porto Rica and a million souls in Japan, whom the other churches on the mission field have assigned to us Christians to reach for Christ, and unless we do this they will not be reached. This report also urged that all Sunday Schools take a missionary offering once a month, and that March, 1926, be made Mission Month in all churches, Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies of the conference, and that during that month special effort be made to secure just as large offerings as possible from every member, to aid in raising the $25,000 Emergency Mission Fund.

Rev. H. W. Elder presented the report on Home Missions, which dealt with the work of church extension within the bounds of the conference the past year. Especial attention was called to the churches at Rose Hill and at East La Grange, and the impending need of immediate funds for their relief. It was pointed out that Richland had built and dedicated a new Christian Church during the past year and that there were several points in the conference now needing church buildings.

At the evening session, the second day, the Christian Missionary Association was held and nearly $100.00 in dues was collected. It was voted to pay all dues collected from the Association and all back dues that might be collected, to help liquidate the debt on the parsonage at Rose Hill, Columbus, Ga.

Miss Mary Talley, of Lanett, Ala., was elected secretary and treasurer, and she with the president, Rev. H. W. Elder, and the vice-president, Rev. A. H. Sheppard, constitute the Executive Committee of the Association.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the La Grange Church presented to the delight of the entire audience the missionary playlet, "How to Conduct a Society." The audience was so delighted at this that a vote of thanks was given them by the conference.

Supt. Chas. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage then delivered a very pointed, practical and helpful address on "Our Orphanage." Bro. Johnston had the rapt attention of the entire conference, and if the people present were not very deeply impressed with the great work the orphanage is doing, the writer is unable to read the mind of an audience. A liberal offering was immediately taken for the orphanage.

Prof. Sion M. Lynam, in the absence of President Beougher of Bethlehem College, then delivered a very able and eloquent address on "Our Colleges." Brother Lynam showed the importance both of supporting and patronizing our colleges, Bethlehem in particular, and that here the Christian character and leadership of our churches were being created and developed. Prof. Lynam made a deep impression upon his audience and had the closest attention throughout his address.

The writer was not privileged to be at the closing session on the morning of the third day.

The people of Oak Grove community entertained the conference in right royal fashion. There was abundance and to spare of homes and hospitality. J. O. A.

THE EASTERN VIRGINIA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Reports have come from various sources to THE SUN'S Editor, of the wonderful conference the women of the Eastern Virginia Missionary Societies held at Liberty Spring on October 16th. The President, Mrs. M. L. Bryant, it is reported, presided with great grace and dignity and carried forward the work of the conference with tact and skill. In speaking of the conference, Mrs. Bryant says:

"To me the conference was wonderful, and I never have in my life heard so many words of appreciation of the work we women are trying to do. Liberty Spring Church was full to overflowing; on the grounds there were 116 automobiles and a few horses and buggies. Chairs had to be placed in the aisles to accommodate the people, and the ministers all sat in the choir, and nearly all of the ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference were there, and in their places from the beginning. Everyone on the program was prepared and prepared well. The conference did not lag a minute and the day's work was done and adjournment had at 4:05 P. M., after one full and busy day."

The president, in her annual message, spoke on "Looking Backward." We are advised that her paper was excellent and it has been requested for publication in THE SUN. Dr. L. E. Smith delivered an excellent address on "Looking Forward."

The conference seemed to be in a mood to take stock of its assets and liabilities. It has reached the stage in its organization and activities when it is conscious of its accumulated assets and also of its multiplying responsibilities and obligations. It has achieved much which makes it imperative to count up its holdings, realize upon them, and launch out for greater things in Kingdom's service. The Woman's work now has such a hold upon the Christian activities of the conference and is so well organized that it can be a mighty factor for righteousness in carrying the missionary idea, aim, and motive into all the church activities of the conference.

The conference more than reached its goal of $6,000.00 for the year, and this gave great impetus to the work being done and inspiration for the coming year.

The women of our Eastern Virginia Conference are blazing the way for the women of the other conferences, and their faithful work and great achievements are sources of gratification and inspiration to the entire church. J. O. A.

FIVE YEARS OF PROGRESS.

On Sunday, October 4th, 1925, The People's Christian Church, Dover, Delaware, celebrated the Fifth Anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein. An eight-page folder was issued, carrying the order of services for the occasion, and also many valuable and inspiring facts. It is a record of consecrated energy and splendid achievement, revealing, as it does, what the well directed energy of a competent pastor and a co-operating constituency can accomplish.

Five years ago, when the present pastor began, the church had a total membership of 225. The present membership is given as 628. During the five-year period 552 members were received into the fellowship of the church and only 75 members were lost by death or removal. Five years ago the church budget was less than $4,000 per year. The budget for the present year is some over $8,000, which is provided for through the Duplex Envelope System of weekly pledges.

Five years ago, the church plant had a valuation of something less than $25,000. The present plant, with equipment and grounds second to none in the State of Delaware, has a valuation of $250,000. The church and community building has thirty-four spacious and well-equipped rooms, including a large auditorium, a large dining room which will accommodate over 300 guests at a sitting, and a large community hall booth, a standard gymnasium, bowling alleys and shower baths. The church is now declared to be a seven-day-a-week church, open every day and evening, with the happiest group of people one can hope to find anywhere, enjoying the splendid advantages that the church affords, for worship, for social activities, and for recreation. The church is not only providing the gospel message at home, but also desire that it be given in Papan, through a foreign pastor. The slogan for the coming year of the church is, "The Whole Church at Work and Every Member Doing His Part."

We congratulate Dr. Helfenstein and his enthusiastic body of co-laborers in building up such a stronghold for righteousness in the Capital City of their State. J. O. A.

IS BISHOP BRENT A FOOL?

"If I am a fool, I am God's fool," were the closing words of Bishop Brent's challenging address at Stockholm on the Churches and war. Let me give his closing paragraph in full.

"It is because I believe in the sanctity of the nation and the magnificence of patriotism; it is because I believe youth can best serve the nation and mankind by living for duty than by dying for it, that I reaffirm my belief that the Christian Church if it be so minded can, in the name of Christ rule out war and rule in peace within a generation. I may be a fool, but if so I am God's fool!"

With these significant words Bishop Brent closed his appeal to the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work to plant itself squarely against war.

Nor did he appeal in vain. Before adjournment, the Conference agreed upon a message in which the horrors of military conflict were deplored and the futility of war as a means of settling international disputes was set forth in a way never to be forgotten. Agreement upon this momentous decision was by no means an easy task, as the Conference found itself in the grip of conflicting ideas.

Do the Churches of the world have any duty in regard to war? Is not war an essential part of God's plan for men? Is not the program to abolish war essentially political? And how can an institution like the Church, whose sole duty is religious, have anything to say or to do about war? It is indeed remarkable that the Churchmen assembled in Stockholm were able to arrive at any unanimity.

The responsibility now devolves upon the Churches of America to strengthen and fortify the newly developed attitude of the Church at large on the major problem of the modern world. The Churches of America are preparing to shoulder that responsibility. The Peace Commissions of a score of these Churches began plans last spring to hold in Washington, D. C., on December 1st, 2d, and 3d, a National Study Conference on the Churches and World Peace.

Questions pertinent to the peace of the world will be frankly discussed. What, for instance, is the relation of the Church to patriotism? Are Christian ideals and thoroughgoing patriotism mutually consistent? If not, which has priority and authority? Can a Christian be one hundred per cent patriotic? In regard to war and peace, has the Church a distinctive message of its own? If so, what is it? Is the Christian attitude to war based on principles of expediency and economic advantage? Or are there higher and deeper principles for the Church to proclaim?

The plans of the Washington Conference provide for three days' intensive study of these very questions by outstanding leaders and thinkers.—N. L.

THE LOST ART OF WALKING.

Walking is gradually becoming a lost art in the sense of being practiced as a true health-giving exercise.

The original purpose of walking was for locomotion. The majority of us use it for only this purpose. But walking may be utilized as a means for other purposes. One may walk for exercise, for pleasure, for thought—but not in this day for safety. A young woman once asked a doctor for a receipt for a good complexion. He replied: "Get one pot of rouge, any kind of rouge, and one rabbit's foot, not necessarily a left hind foot. Bury them two miles from home and walk out and back every day, in every kind of weather so as to be sure these articles are still where you buried them."

Walking is indeed the best all-round exercise. It develops health, grace, and beauty of rythm. It brings one out in the open air. It increases respiration, thereby bringing pure oxygen to the tissues which stimulates every organ in the body. It increases the action of the skin, which tends to clear the body of its waste material and poisons. It makes the heart firmer. It clears the mind. Thoughts come more readily. One's thinking power is increased. There is a feeling of exhilaration, a sense of well-being which is only appreciated by the habitual walker.

The decrease in the amount of walking done has already begun to show itself in several ways. The number of persons who are consulting their physicians regarding foot trouble is on the increase. Why should this be? Our children are better cared for than ever. The medical profession understands the scientific principles of the feet better. Shoes and boots are more sensibly made to fit the foot. There is one exception. This exception is rather a delicate one to mention and pertains to some of the shoes with high heels worn by ladies. In attempting to argue on this question, I have usually found that "argument" falls defeated to whatever is "Style" at that time. Then why is foot trouble on the increase? The answer is found in the fact that walking is on the decrease. The use of the feet for their original purpose, that of walking, is Nature's means of keeping the feet strong and efficient to carry the weight of the body.

The North American Indian was noted for the amount of walking he did. He walked miles and miles following the lone trail. Foot trouble among the Indian tribes was practically unknown. The early settlers in America could readily distinguish the difference between the tread of the Indian and that of the white man. The Indian walked with his toes turned in, while the white man walked with his toes turned out. Walking with the toes turned out tends to favor the foot to rotate outward and to cause the arch of the foot to fall. One should endeavor to walk with the feet as near parallel as possible.

To compensate for the exercise lost by the decreased amount of walking done, the "Daily Dozen" has come into vogue. However, these exercises are not an adequate substitute. For those who do sedentary work, the physical exercise taken should be equivalent to a five-mile walk.

To walk correctly is an art. It is more highly developed in the Oriental races than in the Western races. One has only to observe the smooth, rhythmical glide of the Oriental as compared to the jerky gait of our own race fully to appreciate it.

Let us consider for a moment the right way to walk. The shoulders should be thrown back, military fashion. The head is held erect. The chest is expanded. Breathing should be regular and deep. The mouth is kept closed, except when talking. All breathing is done through the nostrils. The arms should swing by the sides, not like a windmill, but just naturally to give balance and momentum to the body. The legs swing straight forward from the hips, not thrown outward in a circle. The knees bend sufficiently to clear the feet from the ground. The feet are held as nearly parallel as possible. Boots should not cramp the foot, especially the toes should be free, but should fit snugly to the arch. The heels should be flat and have a wide base to prevent the foot from wabbling and to increase its stability.

If one tires readily when walking and has no organic disease to account for it, it is certain that he is not walking correctly. True it is an art. We are all apprentices. With a little thought and practice we shall be able to prevent it becoming a lost art.

One is well repaid for his time spent walking. It gives a mental relaxation from the strain of modern life. It exercises every muscle in the body.—Exchange.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Woman's Missionary Conference of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference held its annual meeting at Liberty Spring Church on October 16th. Viewed from every angle, it was the finest meeting the conference has ever held. its growth in the twelve years of its history has been full of demonstration and inspiration. It has demonstrated the latent capacity of the women, both in business-like management and financial success. The women have proved to themselves, and to others, that they have working ability and they have used it wisely. Now they know what they have time and can do the work of the Lord wisely and successfully. Mrs. M. L. Bryant is president, Mrs. F. A. Stagg is secretary, and Mrs. Leathers is treasurer.

During the twelve years of its history, they have raised more than $50,000.00, which demonstrates the value of organized effort for missionary service and the cumulative results of systematic contributions. The women are proud, in a thankful sense of their success and are none the poorer because they have prayed, labored, and contributed to this primark work of the Kingdom—missions.

Their history is not only a demonstration of its value, but an inspiration for the future. They will never be satisfied nor let up in their efforts, until every church in the conference has a Woman's Missionary Society, A Young People's Society, a Willing Worker's Society, and a Cradle Roll. They are moving forward greatly, persistently, hopefully, toward this goal; and they crave the co-operation of the pastors in this good work. There never was a time in the history of the church when ministers had so much to do and the increase in organizations and organized activities has had much to do with this demand upon the time, the judgment, and the energy of the pastor. The time is not far in the future when the pastor who does not co-operate with the women in religious, practical endeavor, will lose his reputation and place in the church.

There were more than three hundred in attendance at Liberty Spring. Pastor I. W. Johnson and the congregation were exemplary hosts, with a real dinner, thirteen preachers were present, the day was ideal, and earnestness seemed to possess the great audience. The addresses were suggestive, appealing and effective, and the feeling throughout the day was that we ought to build on the past and do larger things for the church in the future. Withal, it was the best meeting the Woman's Missionary Conference has ever held; and it will meet next year as the guest of Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, which has enlarged its building by the addition of Sunday School rooms; and Liberty Spring has plans and is collecting material on the ground for a seven thousand dollar addition to their church. Live, consecrated pastors and a Woman's Missionary Society will put new ideas and new activities in a church.

Banners were won as follows: Franklin, Woman's Society; Holland, Young People's Society and Willing Workers; Suffolk, Cradle Roll; First Church, Norfolk, Young People's Society; five banners in all.

The money raised the past year was over $6,400.00; and the goal set for the coming year was ten per cent increase, or $6,600.00, and they will reach it. And if the women in the churches that have no societies will organize and co-operate with the societies already in existence, this goal will be easily won.

ELON LETTER.

What constitutes a college education these latter days is a varied program of studies, activities, and entertainments. Education formerly was a simple life of plain living and high thinking. An unfriendly critic not long since declared that modern colleges have reversed the process and that higher education today is an opportunity for high living and plain thinking. The simplicity had passed out of it he insisted and an entangling complexity had taken its place. This critic had not visited Elon, it should be added.

However Elon is not the simple place it was in the early 90's, when some D. D.'s, M. D.'s, Ph. D.'s, Lit. D.'s, and LL. D.'s, were studying Hebrew, Latin, Greek, and Mathematics here. Nobody studies Hebrew now. You have to force even ministerial students to study Greek these days. Latin is almost eliminated. Mathematics is held to be only for certain persons a study of any practical value. Modern languages, the natural sciences, the social sciences, and Biblical and Religious Education are the subjects that are popular now.

Thirty years ago college days were looked upon as a preparation for life. Now they are regarded as real life, and students expect everything that the big world outside has to offer, they should have provided for them while they are in college. Some of them are even irreverent to the point of saying that the professors teach the courses, but the students educate themselves. I can't imagine one of those plodders after Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and Mathematics of a generation ago even having such a thought. Certainly they would have feared expulsion to have given expression to it. The professor is not the whole show by any means these days. He is a cog in the wheel, but only that.

Far more attention is given in present day colleges to athletics than is wholesome. The Alumni are largely to be credited with this. They want to see their college win in the sports, and there is do denying that this is the cheapest advertising a college can have. The people at home too are to blame. They go crazy over their town or high school teams. I have known even college professors to lose their heads at an athletic contest, and one recently was found pounding a neighbor on his back when his team had scored a point. It is also related that he jumped twenty feet and was about to kiss an old maid, thinking she was his wife, that is if a man can be credited with thinking under such moments of tense excitement.

But there is one feature of the modern college life that we can certainly commend, and that too without qualification. It is the arranging for the cultural life of the faculty and students through high grade music. Elon is proud of her efforts in this direction. Her Vesper Services given on each second Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock by Prof. Velie are being recognized by music lovers as occasions of real spiritual refreshment. And her concert courses which usually include four numbers, introduce the college community at a minimum of cost to the very best in the musical world. This year Kathryn Meisle, of the Chicago Civic Opera, has given the initial concert. Helen Ware, Thurlow Lieurance, and Irene Williams are yet to come. It is an education as well as an inspiration to hear these great musicians. A college must teach its students how to use their liesure as well as how to work. One of the tragedies of our modern world is to find a man succeeding in his profession or trade and unable to appreciate the cultural things of the spirit. What will he do in Heaven?

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Rev. R. G. English.

In the program of Christian Education, the Christian Endeavor, Society has a large and important place to fill. It may be well counted as the Church's training school for he young people. It has been said that the Sunday School is for impression and the Christian Endeavor is for expression. While both organizations include the two elements, the Sunday School emphasis has been more on the side of instruction, and the Christian Endeavor emphasis has been strong in the line of active practical service, with a deeply devotional background.

Christian Education is not limited to the support of our schools and colleges, and the program of instruction in the Sunday and week-day schools of religious education. It has to do also with the development of trained Christian workers for the various departments of Christian activity. This development is brought about through following the old adage, "We learn to do by doing." Here Christian Endeavor steps in and lends a hand, and through her program of varied Christian service, helps to train leaders among the youth of today for the church of tomorrow.

The Church, it is recognized, needs a training department for the young people, where the program of development will have a special appeal to the boys and girls of the teen age. This is provided by the Christian Endeavor Society, and, at a time when so many life decisions are made, the proper atmosphere is created by the spirit of the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting of the model type and the challenge of the many committee activities which are suggested to the young people.

The Christian Education Department of the Christian Church has realized the need of just such a training organization as Christian Endeavor for the working out of her full program, and so commends the Christian Endeavor, with its interdenominational spirit and challenging service to all our churches as one means of attaining success in the training and education of our young people.

Reports indicate that during 1924, Christian Endeavor had in the Christian Church its largest growth ever, and we shall count on a fine record for 1925. The graded system which provides for the Junior, Intermediate, Senior and Alumni departments, is having a peculiar appeal as church leaders see herein great opportunities for the training best suited to the different ages, and thus this system is partly responsible for the increased interest in Christian Endeavor.

The recent International Christian Endeavor Convention at Portland, Oregon, will go down in history as a great event in the realm of Christian Education, with its challenging service plans which are now placed before the youth of today for fulfillment. Father Endeavor Clark, founder of the great Christian Endeavor movement, has made a large contribution during the past four decades and more to the program of Christian Education. Though he is now President emeritus of the great Christian Endeavor organization, and no longer the active president, the program of Christian Education will go on under the leadership of Dr. Daniel Poling, who has been from childhood trained in the principles of Christian Endeavor. Under the influence of these two great men of God, many young men and young women have received a vision of their duty and have sought that training or education necessary for the doing of the work which their vision pointed out to them. And they have ever been loyal to the motto: "For Christ and the Church."

Thankful should we be for the leadership of Dr. Clark and Dr. Poling and all of the trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, among whom we may count our own beloved Dr. Kendall. They are promoting in the Christian Endeavor organization an enterprise which is helping the Church in a very vital way in her effort to build for the future through an extensive program of Christian Education.

Youth is full of life and is eager to show action. To direct the energy and the enthusiasm of youth is the privilege—yea the duty—of our pastors and older church leaders. They must often take the initiative and give sane advice without offense to the inexperienced young people. We are often reminded that sometimes it is harder to help others do things than to do those same things ourselves. But we must be willing to give the help for the sake of the potential leaders of the future who need the experience. It is counted as one of the important parts of the business of the church to develop leadership among the young people. Leadership training is most certainly a part of the task of Christian Education, and Christian Endeavor provides a fitting field for that training. The Christian Endeavor service is commended to any church that desires to solve wholly the problem of Christian Education.

THE NAME OF OUR CHURCH.

My Dear SUN's Editor:

Is it right? Since I raise the question, let me explain: My short stay in Vanderbilt has brought occasion for many explanations. Some have been satisfactory, while some have been entirely otherwise. Some are so, because of my lack of ability to explain in so many details, and some, I am persuaded to say, are for lack of acquaintance with the principles and government of the individual's own church.

As you know, there are no churches of our denomination in this section of the country. The questions above mentioned are those which naturally arise in a great school of this kind, namely, "What is your denomination?" I have explained by giving without hesitation, the name "Christian Church." Almost without exception, I find it necessary to quote our principles, origin, founder, and give details; and then, sometimes it is without fruit. Often the answer comes back, "Well, I belong to that church," when as a matter of fact, they belong to the Disciples of Christ, but have taken upon themselves, with no right whatsoever, the name of our own Christian Church.

I do not blame them for coveting the name which, after all, is "the only name of the Church," but I cannot appreciate their wearing it unworthily, so far as a denomination is concerned. God hasten the day when there will be no need of an explanation between the followers of Christ so far as denominations are concerned; but as long as we have such, under whose name we separate ourselves, I feel that we should have each branch wear its own name. Sometimes when I say "Christian Church," in giving my connection, the question next to follow is, "What branch, the Conservatives, or the Progressives?"

You can see with this explanation, how the people are mislead and how the name of our Church is being misaprehended. You know of it in other places, but never have I known the situation to be so misleading as it is here. There are twelve denominations and thirteen States represented here, and I think one should be able to explain more satisfactorily his church relation. It is indeed enough to wear worthily, the name which carries the name of the Founder of the Church, which is commissioned and destined to save the world, but until all who represent His Church are willing to wear that name and that alone, I believe that the denomination which alone has the right to wear it as such, should do so, and allow no other to use it. If there are those who like our name better than their own, and like it well enough, I would highly favor receiving them into the Christian Church as a body and let them wear the name. But as matters stand now, I am opposed to the name being worn by any save those who actually belong to it as a denomination.

I am sure you understand that the reference I make is to the church which has given us so much concern in our Northern conferences in years past. I believe the time is ripe when we should take some steps to get and keep our Church, with its simplicity and liberality, before the eyes of the world. We should at least have our just deserts.

Most earnestly,

J. H. DOLLAR.

PORTRAITS UNVEILED.

The portraits of the late Rev. Isaac Mooney of Eldorado, Kansas, in whose memory the Mooney Christian Education Building of Elon College was erected, and of M. Orban, Jr., Whittier, California, donor of this building, were unveiled at an appropriate and inspiring service at the chapel services on the morning of October 20th.

The exercoses were held in the Christian Education Building, Dean A. L. Hook presiding. Dr. J. U. Newman, of the Bible Department, read the scripture and offered prayer. Professor S. A. Bennett, Director of Christian Education, addressed the students and faculty in regard to the lives of these two men, and commended their work and contributions to the cause of Christian Education.

In addition to the portraits, oil paintings by Miss Lila C. Newman, of the Elon College Art Department, which hang on either side of the rostrum facing the audience, two bronze tablets have been erected at the entrance of the building attesting the worth of the lives of these men in the fields of their labor.

It was the anniversary of the death of Rev. Isaac Mooney, October 20, 1902. The audience stood while the portraits were being unveiled, and as the Christian and American flags which covered each were drawn back, Professor Bennett read the inscriptions appearing on the bronze tablets, following which, Professor Bennett outlined briefly the lives of these men and paid high tribute to them for their contributions toward the present status of the study of Religious Education.

Professor Bennett, having spent several years in the middle West himself, was acquainted with the work of Rev. Isaac Mooney, and told of his life as a Christian minister and educator, the pioneer Christian minister of Illinois and Kansas, founder and first president of the South Kansas Conference and of the Kansas State Conference. He was also one of the founders of the Kansas Christian, Weaubleau and Palmer Colleges. Professor Bennett spoke of him as a minister of passionate devotion, and as a Christian example and a benediction to the Christian Church. The Mooney Christian Education Building was erected to his memory here , by M. Orban, Jr., his son-in-law and an Elon trustee, in 1923.

"Mr. Orban is a Christian layman whose consecration to the Kingdom of God has been an inspiration to a host," Professor Bennett said. He told of him as a modest, consecrated, generous man who preferred to live the simple life that he might be of greater service to his church, and that the building which he had erected in memory of his father-in-law also stood as a tribute to his and his wife's generosity.

ALIENS AND THE PROHIBITION LAW.

Declaring that "we have found something at last that will put teeth into prohibition enforcement," District Attorney Emory Buckner of New York announced recently that he would hereafter seek the deportion of all aliens found guilty of violating the prohibition law. The aid of the department of labor will be asked, he said, in making the plan effective. Deportation of these foreigners will be sought under the conspiracy clause of the prohibition act, the prosecutor explained. The federal statute provides that aliens who have lived in the United States less than five years may be deported upon conviction of a crime involving "moral turpitude" with sentence of more than one year, and aliens who have lived in the country for more than five years may be deported after two convictions that result in sentences of more than a year each. Aliens once convicted and later found guilty under the conspiracy clause of the prohibition law may be imprisoned for two or more years, which would subject them to deportation proceedings. Under the new system, aliens to be deported will be turned over to the department of labor, Mr. Buckner said, to be sent out of the country, and they will have the same status as Chinese in the eyes of the government. "In some cases," said Mr. Buckner, "these men will be liable to a year in jail as well as deportation." A man so convicted can never return to this country. Mr. Buckner is to be commended for his zeal in apprehending and punishing prohibition law offenders of foreign blood. We hope he will likewise work out some kind of a St. Helena scheme for the very large number of Simon-pure Americans who think nothing of flouting the law. Aliens are by no means the only persons who threaten the welfare of the republic.—Zion's Herald.

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

NOVEMBER FIRST—$40,000.00

This Sunday closes the special Educational period of our church year, and the annual offering is to be made. Brethren, the $40,000 to be raised then is the least amount that the Board of Christian Education and the General Board of the Convention feel necessary, absolutely necessary, to carry on our educational work. This will take personal gifts from all of us, also generous giving by our particular church. Each church, each Sunday School, each Christian Endeavor Society, each class and group, will be happy to have a worthy part. Our Colleges, our Sunday School literature, our Christian Endeavor, and our field activities must be cared for. We need to make extra and sacrificial gifts to our Christian Education work Sunday.

STEWARDSHIP PERIOD ON!

With November 1st begins the Stewardship period of our Christian Church annual program. It continues through both November and December. We trust that it shall mean a rich spiritual vision, a real study of this greatly neglected subject, an improvement in the financial methods, a new sense of personal and congregational Stewardship in all our churches. We are pleased with the large number of pastors and stewardship secretaries who are planning to make these two months a time of real study and instruction, as well as of inspiration in their churches. We desire to serve as we can. Write us your plans.

STEWARDSHIP BOOKS.

One great need is for a real understanding of the subject of Christian Stewardship. This week one person purchased eleven carefully chosen stewardship books and put them in a Sunday School library. Was not that a most commendable thing to do? They were books for adults, business men, young people, junior workers, women, covering every type of need in the average church. This was done at a cost of $5.65. Think what an investment for richer, better informed lives that small investment is capable of making.

CONFERENCE STEWARDSHIP SECRETARIES.

Rev. Cecil Leek was elected Stewardship Secretary of the Western Michigan and Northern Indiana conference; and Mrs. Frieda Kirkendale Morrill of the York and Cumberland conference; Rev. R. F. Brown, of the Miami, Ohio conference; N. H. Weber, of the Southern Kansas conference; Mrs. Wm. Harris, of Richland Union conference. We are anxious to have the name and address of every new conference setwardship secretary as soon as elected.

TITHING ENROLLMENT CARDS.

Tithing enrollment cards have been received from the Pullman, Michigan, Church, and from the Olive Chapel, Indiana, Church. There are many tithers in our churches and many people ready to enroll, if the matter is presented faithfully. Will you see about it in your church?

A WORTHY OBJECT FOR A "SPECIAL."

We are advised by Rev. M. T. Sorrell, pastor, that it will require fourteen pews, costing $15.00 each, to seat the auditorium of our Rocky Ford Church, Carroll County, Va. The pews on which this estimate is based are of a high type of workmanship, are substantial and are attractive.

Is there a Christian Endeavor, a Church, a Sunday School, or a Missionary Society in the family of Christian Sun readers who will take this as their "special"? Our church is now nearly completed. It is essential that we place the order for the pews at an early date. If any organization, through its president or secretary, will write us that it will undertake this work and see it through, either the Mission Secretary, or Rev. M. T. Sorrell, will borrow the money from the bank when the pews are placed in the church and will pay for the same until the organization or individuals undertaking to raise the money shall have repaid the same.

This is certainly a very deserving and worthy cause and is exceedingly important. We trust that some organization will volunteer now to seat our Rocky Ford Church. If any organization is at all interested, a letter of inquiry about particulars and details, either to Brother Sorrell or the writer, will be answered promptly and will be very greatly appreciated.

J. O. Atkinson,
Elon College, N. C. Secretary.

OUR NEW CHURCH.

We have completed our Rocky Ford Church. We find that our bills are all due, and no money to pay. It is rather a hard situation, yet we are praying that God will take care of us at this time. We have a good building and one that is a credit to the Church; and all that have given to it can certainly feel glad that they have done so. A good friend of ours sends the following:

"My Dear Mr. Sorrell:

"Enclosed you will find check for Twenty-Five Dollars, to be used for the purpose it is needed most in the building of your church at Fancy Gap.

"A Friend."

If we had just a few people that could send us letters of this kind, we would be able to dedicate our church at once. Any one desiring to help us at this time can send money to Dr. Atkinson, or directly to me. It will be turned over and promptly applied to paying the money we owe at this time.

M. T. Sorrell,
Fancy Gap, Va.

THE SIGN OF THE TIMES.

Any watchman, who would be faithful, has need to note the sign of the times. One will see there is little, if any doubt, that great evil is in the land. During the last few years it has developed at an abnormal rate. It is known as "Modernism." We hear on every hand, that we must be modern, up-to-date, in every thing, or we are a back number.

Amusement for the people is the leading subject discussed. Some are so filled and thrilled with worldly amusements that they have no desire or time for Christian service. In fact there are those in this modern age who class amusement as a form of Christian work. Providing amusement for the people is in direct opposition to the teaching and life of Christ and His apostles. Our Lord taught strict separation, and no hint ever passed His lips of winning the world by pleasing it. We realize more and more each day that the majority of people want that which is pleasing to the flesh. Let us remember that if we work to please the flesh, we cannot please God. (Gal. 6: 19-21.)

There are at least three important things, that much stress is being laid upon. Each one should be carefully noted.

First, Education. We are endeavoring to give our children the best education possible—this we should do; and we are advocating that it requires more training and a better education for this modern age, than we older ones needed. The greatest ambition with almost everyone is, to educate my child, and place him or her in a high position socially, in order that he or she may be able to compete with the best people. Yes it is our duty as well as a privilege to apply our hearts unto wisdom; and the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom. How much time are we using to educate and train the heart for God? Education is fine when used for God's glory. So may we work to educate our boys and girls. To have them prepared for the best in this life, and the life to come, we need to be careful about what they study. To be prepared, they need a course in sixty-six volumes, known as the Bible, with the Holy Spirit as the great teacher. If they study under His direction, and are able to stand the examination, they will be prepared to compete with the best, "the children of God."

The next thing is Dress. It seems that the supreme thought with many is, to see how gay and attractive their dress may be. We need to spend much time in prayer on this subject, after which, we may be able to teach by example and precept, the lesson set forth in I. Timothy 2: 9-10. Thus may we receive praise from God, rather than uncomplimentary remarks from men.

The last subject is "Go." People are living in a restless age, not satisfied unless they are going somewhere—so often to questionable places of amusement. Many are restless during the thirty-minute sermon from God's messenger, looking for something more amusing than the gospel. That class, Jesus pitied. He plead with them, sighed over them, warned them, and wept over them, but He never sought to amuse them.

When He received His holy ministry, He found comfort and sweet solace in the thought, "I have given them the word." There is no gospel of amusement, but it is set forth as the power of God unto the salvation of the world. The same voice that said, "Come out from among them, be ye separate," is still calling for separation. "Be not conformed to the things of this world, but be ye transformed," is the trumpet call today. May we wake up and realize that if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For the friendship of the world is enmity with God. In the face of the teachings of the Book, what do we see and hear? A friendly compromise between the church and the world.

So often the church is willing to plan and put on a program of amusement, that grieves the Lord, in order that they may please the people. The pure gospel is rejected, the messenger perhaps considered old fashioned and out of date, not suited for this modern age.

What means all this? What is the sign of the times? The Word says, "This know also, that in the last days, perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affections, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. From such turn away."—II. Timothy 3: 1-5.

How aptly this describes the present condition of the times. People who profess to be Christians, now deny the inspiration of the scripture, deny the creation of man as perfect, and substitute evolution instead, deny his fall, and therefore, deny the blood of Jesus Christ that purchased mankind. They are called Modernists. They are up-to-date with the times, but have turned away from the faith once delivered to the saints, as scripture foretold it would be at this time. II. Peter 3: 3-4.

"Come out," is the call today. Put away the evil from among you. Decline to accept it. Grasp the Word of God. Trust the Spirit who wrote its pages. Fight with this weapon only and always. Cease to amuse and seek to arouse. Give up trying to please men and work to please God. Jesus said all of these things would come before He came again. Therefore to those firm in the faith, it gives joy and hope of a speedy return of our Lord.

So may we lay much stress on "Go." Go to God in real prayer. Go under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Go back to the old time religion. Go out and tell the old, old story of Jesus and His love.

Go forth prepared to meet the Bridegroom, having your robe washed in the blood of the Lamb.

A WORLD OF ISLANDS.

Pago Pago, American Samoa, is on the island of Tutuila. Two islands of Western Samoa, under New Zealand administration, are greater in extent than Tutuila, but the native of Tutuila won't believe it. His island is thirty-five miles around the coast and is the biggest island of all! Of what use would it be to have it any larger, he inquires. New Zealanders who come up to Western Samoa admit that they come from islands, says the Samoan. Occasional Australians brag that their place is larger than New Zealand, but admit it is an island. The British, whether they be English, Scotch, or Irish, admit they come from islands. They bar out the Japanese, whom they say live in islands far to the north. Of all people, only the American lays claim to coming from a place that is so big it isn't an island at all, but a continent. "Let them brag," says the Samoan to himself. "He can't fool me." —Exchange.

Methodists are already beginning to agitate for the election of Francis Asbury, their first bishop on this side of the Atlantic, to be nominated to the Hall of Fame. The next election takes place in 1930. There are already five preachers among these immortals, including Jonathan Edwards, Roger Williams, William E. Channing, Henry Ward Beecher, and Phillips Brooks. President Coolidge unveiled an equestrian statue to Bishop Asbury in Washington last year.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

November 8, 1925.

Subject: "Paul's Farewell at Miletus."

Golden Text: "Ye ought to help the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that he himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20: 35.

Lesson: Acts 20: 17-38.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 126: 1-6.

Reference Material: John 14: 27-31; Eph. 1: 15-16; 2: 1-13.

Time: A. D. 57.

Place: Miletus.

Almost immediately after the riot in Ephesus, Paul left that city and went to Macedonia. From there he went to Greece, where he spent three months, some of this time being in Corinth. During all this time collections were being taken up in all the churches to send to the poor Christians at Jerusalem by Paul. On this journey Paul was accompanied by representatives from the leading churches in Macedonia and Asia Minor.

Paul had intended going to Jerusalem from this point by water, but a plot against him by the Jews, caused him to have to change his plans. The party went by land to Philippi, and then by water to Troas. At Troas he lingered a short while and preached on the "first day of the week."

It is significant, says Rev. Edgar DeWitt Jones, that Luke not only "records the assembling of the Christians 'upon the first day of the week,' but indicates that the prime purpose of the coming together was 'to break bread,' and that Paul's sermon was incidental and secondary to the celebration of the Lord's supper."

Get out your Bible and read here the incident in regard to Eutychus, who slept while Paul preached. Then remember that Christian sleepiness means spiritual death. O, for more modern Pauls to bring the Church of Christ to life.

After the incidents at Troas, Paul continued by land to Assos, where he again joined his companions who had gone on ahead, and continued his voyage along the coast to Miletus.

The City of Miletus was an ancient seaport—more than a thousand years old—and at one time a very important one, but it had gradually become eclipsed by the younger but faster growing City of Ephesus. Today both cities are in ruins and the place where was once a seaport is eight miles inland, due to the action of the rivers and the seas.

It must have been hard for Paul to have passed by Ephesus without stopping, but he was hastening to Jerusalem for the Passover and did not have the time, so he sent for the elders of the church to meet him at Miletus.

The lesson text as printed in your quarterly starts at this point.

When the elders had come to Paul from Ephesus, he began by reviewing for them, his three years at that city, how he taught publicly and privately, how earnestly he dealt with each one of them, how he had had to meet persecution, and how in spite of it all and through it all he had testified "both to Jews and to Greeks repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." Christ himself said: "Repent ye, and believe in the gospel." "Repentence and faith are the two saving graces of the Christian character."—James McCosh. "A short creed and a simple, but enough for an earnest man to rest upon it his immortal soul and his efforts to save his perishing brethren."—Rev. W. S. Swanson.

Paul then went on to speak of his errand at Jerusalem and of his conviction that some unknown trial there awaited him. Time and again he had been forewarned that bonds and imprisonment awaited him there. Nevertheless, he was following the path which he believed God had marked out for. "Like the Master whom he served, Paul's face is set to go to Jerusalem, though, unlike his Master, he knoweth not the things that will befall him there. No force can hinder him, not hatred menacing in front, nor friendship calling from behind."—Lewis Campbell.

After telling them of his fixed purpose to go the way God pointed out, he said: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, . . . I know that after my departing grievous wolves shall enter in among you. . . Wherefore watch ye!"

How Paul had watched over them and shepherded them for the three years he was with them. How well he had carried out that command that his Lord had given to Peter, that he "Feed my lambs." Now that he must leave them forever, he admonishes these elders of the church at Ephesus to be to the members of the church what he had been to them. He knew that there would enter in "wolves" that would bring dissension in the church. And he sounded the warning for us today as well as for those ancient saints.

"And from among your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things," twisting God's own truth into vilest falsehood, even as they do unto this day. The wolf in the fold can do more damage than a hundred on the outside.

"And now I commend you to God." I go, but the Heavenly Shepherd remains. He is watching ever those who wish His tender care. I have endeavored to show you God's way, I hear Paul say, and while with you I have been no burden upon you but a help at all times, even as Christ has been my helper. I am not boasting when I set myself as an example for you to follow, for my example has been Jesus Christ himself. How many of us can say the same? Then he follows with the words of our Golden Text.

"And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled and prayed with them all." Then, as was the Eastern custom they fell on his neck and kissed him, and brought him down to the ship. It was a sad farewell for them as well as for him.

Some Thoughts for Today.

1. We know not what is before us, but can commit our whole future to God's wise and loving care.

2. No Christian should do his daily work chiefly for himself, but in order that he may support those dependent on him, and may give to the poor, and spread the gospel of our Lord. It is this which makes the commonest work noble.

3. Blessed are those who follow in Paul's footsteps and can look back upon such a past.

4. God's church is very precious to him.

5. The way to guard against spiritual dangers is by watching, praying, laboring, following the examples of the good, trusting in God, and being built up by his word.

6. God's children inherit his character, his care, his happiness, his home.

7. The most blessed part of life is the giving forth of what we have, not merely money, but knowledge, sympathy, help, character, hope, faith and love.—A. H. McKinney, D. D.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

November 8, 1925.

Topic: "What Can Young People do for International Friendship."

Scripture References: Matt. 28: 19-20; Acts 17: 22-31; Gal. 3: 26-29.

Plans for the Meeting.

It will be a fine thing to divide the society into groups to represent the different nations, with a leader for each group. Each group will tell in any way they may choose just what the nation they represent does for the world at large, and why other nations should respect it. If arranged ahead of time, much valuable information can be found and everyone concerned will be interested.

Program.

Repeat in unison: "We are all one in Christ Jesus."

Song: "We've a Story to Tell the Nations."

Sentence prayers, closing with the following prayer by the leader: "We rejoice, O God, that the disciples of Christ obeyed his command to go into all the world and preach the gospel, so that we live in a Christian country. Give courage to the missionaries who, in all lands, are preaching the gospel. Through our gifts and prayers may many people hear the story of Jesus. Amen."—From Worship and Song.

Scripture: Each selection read by some member of the society.

Song: "O Zion, Haste."

Leader's Talk.

If nations are to be more friendly with each other, this friendliness must be felt and practiced among the young people everywhere. Young people in America have an opportunity to practice this friendliness when they meet young people of other nations in college, business and elsewhere. If boys and girls grow up with hatred for other nations in their hearts, it will necessarily result in war. Friendliness, sympathy, and understanding between the young people of the world will abolish war forever. Perhaps the best way to appreciate other young people of the world is to learn more about them.

Christ said: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." It is the friendly spirit of Christ, the Jesus way, which will make the world a brotherhood.

Young people may pray for more sympathy and understanding of other young people of the world; some of them may spend their lives teaching the gospel of Christ to the world; others may send their gifts, and all young people may determine to feel and practice the friendly spirit toward all men everywhere.

The leader should call for discussions by the groups representing the different nations.

Some Christian Church Young People Who Are Helping Establish International Friendship.

Miss Marguerite Youmans, who went to school at Elon and Defiance Christian colleges, working among the foreigners in Haverhill, Mass., to teach the spirit of Christ and Americanism.

Miss Angie Crew, a kindergarten teacher in Japan.

Miss Elizabeth Howsare, among the Indians at Fort Alpache, Ariz.

Victor Reviere, in Porto Rico, working among his own people after graduating from Elon in 1923.

The numerous young people in our churches and colleges who are studying about the young people of other nations and giving their prayers and money to spread the gospel.

Education and World Friendliness.

Education of the broader type will eliminate petty ill feelings and awaken a deeper feeling of respect for young people all over the world. When we study about the achievements of other nations, we must necessarily take into account the keen intellects back of these. We must know that they have a great deal in common with us and that after all we are not so very different. The interchange of students among the colleges of the various nations gives close contact with other countries and peoples.

The Fellowship of Youth for Peace.

"To our generation comes the challenge to abolish war. The Fellowship of Youth for Peace is a part of the world-wide movement of the youth of all classes, nations, and races, who recognize the unity of the human family and wish to live in this spirit of fellowship. . . Standing together the rising generation can build a new world in which suspicion, hatred, and war will be replaced by mutual trust, goodwill, and fellowship."—World Peace Pamphlet.

A statement from the English "No More War Movement": "It is well for the future that youth has imagination enough to conceive of a war-free world, and faith and courage to work for its realization. Youth says war is not inevitable. Youth says war can be abolished. . . We must not cease until youth proclaims, individually, nationally, and internationally—for no more war."

A statement from German Youth: "It is determined to combat with speech and pen, also with passive resistence any attempt at military servitude, especially by objection to war service and by aid and assistance to such objectors."

Young people from Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Germany, France, Finland, Great Britain, Holland, India, Italy, Norway, Austria, Poland, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, United States of America, taking part in the conference of the International Fellowship of Reconciliation at Kyborg, Denmark, in July, 1924, made the following statement: "We have arrived at a mutual understanding in the spirit of comradeship and confidence, which unites races, peoples, confessions and classes. We shall endeavor to realize this spirit in our lives, to stand up for justice and to renounce all use of violence."

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew the great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

ALL THAT IS REQUIRED.

"And what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy Lord."—Micha 6: 8.

"Any one can carry the burden, however heavy, until night-fall. Any one can do his work, however hard, for one day. Any one can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly, purely, till the sun goes down." —isn't this all that Christ requires of us? Isn't this what life —your life and mine—means.

Prayer.—Our Father, forgive us all of our sins. Give us humility, sweetness of spirit. Help us to love everybody as our Saviour does. Help us to do good every day, and to make the world better for having lived in it. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD HEARS AND ANSWERS PRAYER.
LESSON: Isaiah 65: 23-24.

"And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer."

Several times I had observed a parishoner clearing up a field of virgin soil. He was a man who had already reached the autumnal of life. The land was swampy and the turf deep, and the whole task seemed a thing of drudgery. One day, in answer to my question, he said: "The day my son was leaving for over seas, he began to say something, but his voice choaked and he was not able to finish. Later he wrote me and said: 'Father, if I never come back, I want you to plant some trees on the lot of land I bought from Uncle Joe, and make it into a cultivated field. Nothing seems so fitting to perpetuate the memory of the dead as something that has life and growth and will go on living.'" The young man never came back, and the father found great solace for his bereaved heart in carrying out in every detail his son's last wish.

The Divine Father said to His servant, the prophet Isaiah: "Before they call, I will answer." He is speaking of Israel and their blessings in the "new earth." But the promise is not limited to the purified remnant. God's promises are illimitable. All of God's people, of every age and clime are His children. If an earthly father is so desirous of fulfilling the wish of his child, how much more our Father in heaven! God even makes provision for an answer to the expected call. "Thou preventest me with the blessings of goodness," said the Psalmist, meaning that God was always anticipating his need. In the Parable of the Prodigal, that picture of the father running to meet the son and embracing him with the kiss of a full forgiveness—even before the son had time to present to the father his request—is the eternal likeness of the heart of God. May this be our encouragement and our hope, for "He is faithful that promised."

—Rev. Alfred J. Reynolds.

Prayer.—When we lift our hearts to the Hearer and Answerer of prayer, may we feel the assurance that He desires not only our salvation, but our entire well-being. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WASTED OPPORTUNITIES.
LESSON: Acts 24: 24-27.

"Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time."

The great evil with so many of us who mean to do well is not that we do not know what we ought to do, but that we are so wretchedly slow to do the good that we know. We all agree that evil habits ought to be corrected, yet how slow we are to bring this to pass! We all agree that the poor ought to be helped, the sick visited, the erring admonished—yet how slow we are to do these things! We all agree that there is no time like the present to lead the Christian life, yet how often, like Augustus of old, do we not catch ourselves praying and saying, in substance at least: "Lord, make me pure, but not just yet for a while."

Some one has said: Good intentions are like eggs. You must hatch them into actions without too much delay, or they will spoil." Here is homely but good advice. Beware of bad impulses, yes; but, be sure to act on the good ones when they come, and act without delay.

—Rev. G. E. Lenski.

Prayer.—Our Father, may we realize the danger of delay, and be led to take Christ as our Saviour an Redeemer, now. And may we faithfully serve Him, we ask. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE UNSEEN GUARDIAN.
LESSON: Psalm 3: 2-8.

"I laid me down and slept; I awaked, for the Lord sustained me."

Passing through China on one of his missionary journeys, the beloved Bishop J. W. Bashford arrived one night at a village. The hotel, however was crowded. The hotel-keeper offered the Bishop a cot on which he might sleep in "God's out-of-doors," under the trees. The guest was warned that robbers and bandits had been rather active in the community, and that information was not conducive to selep.

The Bishop lay awake for quite a while. Then he thought of the familiar words, "Behold, He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper." And he said: "Dear Lord, there's no use of both of us being awake." Soon he was soundly sleeping.

When he awoke in the morning, he was surprised to see a native standing near, ready to sound the note of warning if robbers should approach. God was his guardian, his sure protection, and the human agent, in the form of an unconverted Chinaman, was standing near the distinguished guest, when the latter did not know that he had any help of man available.

A happy sense of security sustains the children of God. More sure are they of His protection than any child can be of the protecting presence of father or mother. God is our guardian, and watches over us with tenderest solicitude.

—Rev. William J. Hart.

Have one of the older children pray that we may learn of the goodness of our Heavenly Father in guarding us, whether asleep or awake; and that we may fully trust Him who will never fail us.

FRIDAY.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

"His promises are, yea and amen in Christ Jesus."—II. Cor. 1: 20.

When we appropriate ourselves to God's work and His way of prayer, He cannot fail. If failure results, we are responsible. Think of the mighty works He has done that you know about and attribute to Him. All of them have been wrought through prayer.

We are facing terrible perils these days—the wave of crime and godlessness sweeping everywhere—a pleasure loving and pleasure mad people—secular perils that desecrate the very altars of God—temptations meeting us with a lure to which feeble minds succumb. Only looking back to God, and deep prayer life will save us.

Prayer.—Our Father, let us get back to the great and mighty things of God. That we may not be lured away, flash thou before our eyes the source of true power, and lead us in that pathway. Forgive us, Lord, and save us. In Christ's name. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE BLESSING OF THE BURDEN.
LESSON: Galatians 6 2-7.

"Let every man prove his own work."

If we consider this statement carefully, we will see that it does not impose a hardship on anybody. It states the conditions of a blessing. The best thing to do with a burden is to bear it. If you have a load to carry, carry it. If you have a task to perform, perform it. You will never get a blessing by dropping it, or by shifting it to the shoulders of somebody else, or by trading it off for some other person's load. Carry it!

There are two blessings at least that come to us out of bearing our burdens. The first one is to be found in the fact that the longer we bear the burden, the easier it becomes. Not because the burden is lighter, but because we become stronger. Burden-bearing brings strength. In the second place, there is a hidden blessing in the very burden itself. It helps to keep life from being meaningless.—Rev. E. V. Cole.

Prayer.—Our Father, may learn to realize that faith in Thee and the spirit of helpfulness toward our fellow men will make our own load lighter and give us strength to bear it. We ask it in Jesus' name. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GROWTH IN GRACE.
LESSON: II. Peter 3: 14-18.

"Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

The word "Christ" is the Messiah. It denotes the prophesied one and postulates deity. Very God and very man, He and He alone was qualified to be our Saviour. "Who his own self bare our sins—that we should live unto righteousness." By virtue of what He is and what He has done He is my rightful Lord. The Lord of glory, the King of love is my Shepherd.

Now I am to make progress in the superlative growth. It is first in the knowledge of my Lord. This knowledge is immediate. "He is my light." It is also mediate by prayer and by the Word. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask, and it shall be given." "I have more understanding than my teachers, for Thy testimonies are my dedication." Also this knowledge is personal.

Further, our progress is in grace. Dr. Warfield used to say that grace is love at white heat. The grace that characterizes my Lord is to be my increasing possession, not only to fill me with joy that is full of glory, but also to empower me with enabing energy. "To them gave He power." "He giveth grace to the humble." "The Lord is my strength."—Rev. Chas. C. McIntire.

Lord's Prayer—all the Circle joining.

Closing Prayer (by one of the parents) that our whole household may be divinely strengthened, and made fitting instruments for loyal Christian service.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Czechoslovakia Week!

What on earth does that word spell? Tell Mother to look on the map of Europe, dears, and find a little country called Czechoslovakia. On before-the-war maps it is called Bohemia. This little country is full of little boys and little girls, that make all kinds of beautiful things, like

A pop eyed monk, all green and sweet
From beady tail to beady feet—

and another little Czechic boy made this

A timid chap, poor pale giraffe
You'll hurt his feelings if you laugh—

A bug is easier to do; I'd do him first if I were you—Kiddies!

All made by clever Czechic hand

For you to copy Jills and Jacks
With wire—and beads—and sealing wax.

These Czechic people make such beautiful things with beads and sealing wax—and lately your editor has been wondering about these little folks in the Czechic land and wondering if the Kiddies in this Korner couldn't make something like the little Czechish children—I wonder—now couldn't we dears?

Oh, not very long ago those boys and girls were laughing over a real American Movey—Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna"—and, Oh!—we have just been playing that game ourselves.

How nice to feel that we all belong to our Loving Heavenly Father—us and the little Czech children too.

Oh—wouldn't it be fun to know a story about their little country? Read this one then—about the Castle of the Cats—it's a real legend of Czechoslovakia—

Mile Deti (That's "Dear Children" in Czech): Read the story and then try to make a pop-eyed monk—or a poor pale giraffe—or a big old bug out of sealing wax. Then write me about it.

Next week—you will know who gets the Pollyanna prize. Yes, dears, the letters are coming in all the time. I adore you all—

YOUR EDITOR.

THE CASTLE OF THE CATS.

Once upon a time, in an old castle-fort near the Black Hill, there lived a rich King and his daughter. Eleven fair maidens waited upon the Princess, but she was herself so fair and so good that she shone among them like the sun in the heavens. And all in the Castle were happy and God blessed them, because they were kind to the poor.

But one day a Witch and her ugly son came to live on the Black Hill above the Dark Valley, and they were jealous of all happiness and plotted evil against the Castle. But every day the Princess and her maidens went walking in the sunshine, for they were safe as long as they did not climb Black Hill nor wander into the Dark Valley. And as they went, they blew sweetly upon little horns of gold, so the sight was fair to see.

Now the Witch's ugly son saw the sweet sight and heard the sweet sound and he followed the Princess at a distance, until his ugly heart nearly shriveled up with love, and he ran home to his mother and teased and whined and gave her no peace until she promised to get the King's daughter into her power.

So the Witch turned herself into a strange and beautiful bird, and flew ahead of the maidens above the Dark Valley. But the Princess did not follow. Then she turned into a strange and beautiful beast, and ran ahead in the underbrush. But the Princess did not follow. Finally she hid in the woods and played such strange and beautiful music as was never before heard by human ear. But the Princess only laughed, and returned to the Castle with her maids in safety.

How the old Witch shook with rage, and her ugly son grew uglier and uglier and more shriveled day by day!

One afternoon, as the Princess and her eleven maidens rode forth upon their twelve beautiful steeds, in the sunshine above the Dark Valley, they heard far below a pitiful sound of weeping as of some poor soul in distress. Their hearts were touched; they forgot all danger and galloped down to the rescue.

Suddenly, dark shadows began to close about them, and one of the maidens cried in terror: "Alas, we are in the Dark Valley. It is the Witch who led us here!"

Back they turned, and rode at breakneck speed, but it was too late. Close on their heels came the old Witch, while her ugly son galloped grinning behind.

Then the frightened Princess remembered a holy man living near by, who might be able to save them. "To the hermit's cave!" she called, and madly they rode, till the sparks hissed under their horses' hoofs. But ever closer came the Witch.

That was a wild race! Hearing the clatter of hoofs, the old hermit ran from his cave. He saw the terrible danger of the Princess, but he had no power to set her free, but only to lighten the spell, when it should fall.

Now the Witch had caught up with the maidens and raised her black wand to strike. Suddenly the Princess sprang from her horse, turned, and fell headlong down the steep cliff into the valley below. Before the Witch could speak, the hermit had cried in a loud voice: "She shall turn into a pillar of rock and stand until there comes this way a youth of generous heart and pure soul, who is worthy to set her free."

How the Witch's ugly son shrieked and yelled, and how his mother stamped her big feet with rage! The Witch turned and fiercely she struck the eleven maidens with her wand; they vanished, and eleven pretty little cats ran mewing and meowing to the Castle. Since that day, it has been called the Castle of the Cats, and always at midnight may be heard a loud mewing and meowing. The Witch herself became a bird of prey, and each night she circles over the Castle of the Cats, shrieking hideously. As for her ugly son, no doubt he shriveled up completely. But the pillar of rock still stands in the valley, waiting for the youth of generous heart and pure soul worthy to set her free—The Little Delineator.

THE WONDER CLOCK OF PRAGUE.

On a tower in Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia, stands a wonderful clock, hundreds of years old. This clock not only tells the hour, but the season and the month of the year as well. Figures on it move whenever the hour strikes, a bell rings, the cock crows, two doors open and the figures of Christ and His Apostles go by. The machinery inside is so complicated that when it got out of order no one knew how to make it go, and the Wonder Clock was still for two hundred years, until at last a clever clockmaker started it again. At all hours during the day, in the street before the clock-tower, people stand waiting to watch the hour strike.

The Emperor Vespacian, being sick with the disease whereof he died, when reproached by his physician for continuing to carry on matters of state, said: "An emperor should die standing." So much for an heathen emperor. Every boy and girl in our whole Christian land should both live and die "standing" for Jesus Christ and His Kingdom. We are certainly better than a heathen king.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We can do no better than to repeat what we said last week, and we ask each of you to consider the facts carefully.

First.—Winter is near. The children need shoes, clothing, wraps, etc. Send us a box from your church. It will help us and make us happy.

Second.—The work on our new building is moving on nicely and the contractor presents a bill on the first of each month for work done. If your church has not raised the amount asked for, will you not do so right away and write me? If you have made a subscription, and have not sent in the first payment, will you not do so now?

Third.—Thanksgiving will soon be here. We want every church and Sunday school to do its best this year to raise the largest offering it has ever raised. We need it. We have been in the dry belt this year and have made very poor crops indeed. Make your plans several weeks ahead and let it be known that you will receive this offering on a certain day, and ask everyone to help.

Remember that this is your orphanage, the children are yours to keep for the Master, who promises that whatsoever you may give to them will be given unto Him.

LIFE'S RENDEZVOUS.

"I have a rendezvous with Life,"
And I must surely meet it when
E'en Death seems easier to greet
In mountain glade or dangerous glen;
"I have a rendezvous with Life,"
Its hardships and its sin.

It may be it will leave me scarred,
And broken down, and worn and marred,
And take away my sweet desires,
It may be I shall lose my way
When I shall meet its fiercest fires,
But when Life calls me, I'll obey,
When autumn comes with all its haze
And the old forests are ablaze.

God knows 'twere better to be deep
Pilliwed in death and laid to rest
When Life is o'er, no trysts to keep,
All sorrow stilled and all the strife,
God's hand in mine to lead me on,
His angels hovering very near,
But I've a rendezvous with Life,
At any time, in any place,
When winter comes, or summer clear.
So while I have Life's work to do
I shall not fail that rendezvous.

—Isabel Godsey.

The House of Bishops of the Protestant-Episcopal Church, which has been holding its forty-eighth triennial General Convention in New Orleans, has voted by 95 to 11 to sustain the verdict of the trial court and the court of review which found Bishop William Montgomery Brown, retired, guilty of heretical teachings. Bishop Brown was planning an appeal to the Federal Courts to prevent his deposition.

LASSITER.

On October 9, 1925, the death angel called for the spirit of Deacon Thomas W. Lassiter. He was born April 10, 1851, being 74 years and six months old the day of the funeral.

Bro. Lassiter was married to Miss Sarah W. Edwards in the year 1881, and unto this union God gave seven children. Five of these preceded him to the great beyond. His wife and youngest daughter, Mrs. Frank Vaughan, preceded him just a short while before, on Sept. 27, 1924. The double funeral caused him severe strain, but he bore his sorrow beautifully, believing in God's promises.

He had been in declining health for some time, but was only confined to his bed a few days. On Oct. 4th, he was taken to Maria Parham Hospital, Henderson, N. C., where he had every attention possible..

Bro. Lassiter had been a member of Liberty (Vance) Christian Church for about 40 years, and a deacon for the greater part of that time. He was a true Christian, a loyal citizen, a devoted husband, a loving father and a friend to all. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks, being prevented from reaching here, the funeral service was conducted by Rev. Frank Edwards..

He leaves to mourn their loss, one daughter, Mrs. Frank Frazier, one son, Hugh M. Lassiter, eighteen grand-children, six great-grand-children, many relatives and a host of friends. The body was laid to rest in the church cemetery. The large crowd that attended the funeral, despite the inclement weather, and the beautiful floral tribute, were evidence that he was loved by those who knew him. May his life be an example for others to follow in serving Jesus.

Mrs. R. J. NEWTON.

ARNOLD.

Sister Bettie Arnold passed to her heavenly home, as we believe, Tuesday night at twenty-five minutes to one o'clock, in Raleigh, at her son's home. She was buried in her home cemetery, Wednesday, at 4:00 P. M. She was an unusual woman. She gave to this world fifteen children, eleven of whom survive her. They are: Mrs. E. D. Tippet, Mrs. A. J. Toney, Mrs. J. G. Pearce, Mrs. Pruitt, Aaron L., David R., Jarvis V., Otis I., Grover C., and Brooks Arnold. She was a faithful mother and wife. She leaves behind to mourn their loss, a husband, six sons, five daughters, three sisters and a host of friends, who honored her by their presence. The flowers were beautiful, given by her devoted children and friends. Her death was a sad experience to her children.

Mother thou hast left them,
Here their loss they deeply feel.
But it is God who bereft them,
He can all their sorrows heal.

The funeral and burial services were conducted by the writer.

P. T. KLAPP.

Independent Church for Poland.—

The orthodox Greek Catholic Church of Poland has been declared independent of the Patriarchate of Moscow by the Patriarch of Constantinople. This will free the Polish church from the position taken in politics by the Russian branch of the church in reference to the Soviet policy. The Polish church may now pursue an independent course so far as Russia is concerned.

A Step to Consider.—

The Congregationalists of Massachusetts have taken a rather unusual step. The Second Congregational Church of Andover has had its pulpit filled for some time by Mr. William Barclay, a business man. The church decided to ask for his ordination. They did. The board met and received a paper based on academic studies and personal study. They did not consider this sufficient educational requirements, and gave a limited ordination by which the minister was given full power until 1928. At that time, if he has followed satisfactorily the outlined studies, he will automatically become a permanently ordained minister.

To Study Prohibition Education.—

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has secured a good deal of publicity by its report on the Prohibition situation. Resulting from that study are three questions for the answering of which a committee has been appointed. The questions arise on the value of impartial research, the unequivocal advocacy of prohibition, and the need of a vigorous effort to secure observance of law and better temperance education. The answers to the questions promise to be as interesting as the report has been. Serving on the committee are: S. Parks Cadman, John A. Marquis, John M. Moore, Frank Mason North, Robert E. Speer, J. Ross Stevenson, Charles L. White, Robert L. Kelly, John W. Langdale, Charles E. Burton, William Adams Brown, E. M. Bowman, Hellen A. Davis, Mrs. John Ferguson, and Miss Ella MacLaurin.

A Remarkable Ministry.—

In the little fields of work all over this country there are remarkable ministers and remarkable ministries. One of these came to the notice of the public not long ago when the Lime Hill Presbyterian Church, in the open country near Camptown, Pa., released from its pulpit the Rev. M. L. Cook who for forty years has been its pastor. Mr. Cook succeeded his father in that pulpit, who served the church thirty years before him. During the father-son ministry, extending over a period of seventy years, the church has sent out missionaries, preachers, college presidents, teachers, lawyers, doctors, and other eminent people. Rev. W. T. Cook, a son of the retiring minister, has been for sixteen yeasr a missionary in China, and a daughter of the retiring minister, Dr. Alice Cook, is on the medical staff of the Rockefeller Foundation in Peking, China. This remarkable family illustrates as is being done so frequently nowadays that the old story of the minister's son is all a myth.

Argentine Reciprocates.—

Several years ago, the United States gave the Argentine a statue of George Washington. That sister republic on the south of us is now reciprocating with a gift of a statue of her great national hero Jose de San Martin, who a century ago led Argentine, as well as Peru and Chile, to independence from Spain. The statue will stand within a stone's throw of the Capitol in Judiciary square. Everything used in the erection of the statue was shipped here from Argentine, even to the sand in the base. It is in every way a gift from that country. The statue was unveiled on October 28th, and was accepted by President Coolidge. The speech of presentation was made by Dr. Honorio Pueyrredon, the Ambassador from Argentine. This statue will be the only statue of a foreign hero to stand in the National Capital, with the exception of those fighting with us in the Revolutionary War, and that of Joan of Arc. Such a gift will strengthen the strong bond of friendship now existing between Argentine and our own republic.

Young "Bob" Elected.—

It seems to be the fashion these latter days to keep political offices in the family. A number of women have succeeded to the positions of their deceased husbands. Now young "Bob" La Follette has been selected by the voters of Wisconsin to his father's place in the Senate. In being elected to the Senate of the United States, the son of Robert Marion La Follette has fulfilled his father's fondest wish. Among the last words of that veteran of many political battles was "Carry on." There is nothing extraordinary about the young Robert Marion La Follette. He was educated in one of the Washington High Schools, where he was neither a good nor a poor student. He attended the University of Wisconsin for three years, and did as thousands of others have done. Then he was needed in his father's office to take over the detail work which was growing heavy for tired hands. Since that time he has been in his father's constant tutelage, and he must have learned pretty well, but time in the Senate will reveal the justice of that judgment.

Carmel by the Sea.—

One of the interesting places in the world is the little village of Carmel by the Sea, not so very far from Monterey, California. This little village, unlike most others, was deliberately founded. A group of artists, writers, and other folk who desired to escape the progress of the world, moved there and settled down to live. They tried to do something different, and this attracted people. Real estate promoters came, and property went up. Then there came a desire for progress. The real estate men and their clientele wanted asphalt sidewalks and paved streets, better plumbing and such things. The founders didn't. The other day the thing came to a show down. Both sides worked hard before the voting came on, and the founders, fundamentalists, they are called, won, and there will be no sidewalks, no paved streets, no plumbing, nothing that will look like a big city. There is to be one place on the earth where one isn't to be ditsurbed with the progress of the world as it is being made today. The people of Carmel by the Sea are to lead the simple life. We wonder what the real estate folk will do.

Americans to Grow Rubber.—

The world's supply of rubber has proved inadequate. Great Britain has also limited the exportation of rubber. In America, the situation is a serious one, since Americans own a majority of the cars now running in the world. It has been announced recently that Harvey S. Firestone, remembered as the great Ackron, Ohio, tire magnate and the friend of Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, and the late John Burroughs, has leased a million acres of land in Liberia for the purpose of rubber growing. Thirty-five thousand acres have also been leased in Mexico. In Mexico there may be trouble from bandits and revolutionists, but not so in Liberia. That little African country is not America, but it owes much to America. The climate is not suitable for white laborers, but among the two million Liberians there will probably be enough labor. Mr. Firestone is backing the project in Liberia with one hundred million dollars, and he will send doctors, sanitary officers, builders, and workmen to his new field at once. The harbor of Monrovia is to be improved. It will take ten years for the rubber trees to come to full fruition, but at the end of that time Mr. Firestone figures that America will control about one-third of the world's rubber supply. The question has arisen as to the probable attitude England will take to this enterprise. Holland and England now control about ninety per cent of the world's rubber, and this new venture, if successful, will strike her heavily. It has been suggested that she may develop the cotton growing industry in India and Egypt, and so destroy the South's most lucrative business. This would be retaliation with a vengence, but we do not believe it is to be feared.

NOTES-PERSONALS

There is more life in one grain of wheat than there is in a bushel of chaff.

Stewardship was emphasized at the Eastern Virginia Conference this year.

Rev. M. W. Sutcliffe, of Havre de Grace, Md., was a welcome visitor to Richmond and THE SUN'S home, this week.

While in Alabama, the Editor and Mission Secretary, and the Managing Editor, attended the Woman's Missionary Conference at Wadley.

By his request the Eastern Virginia Conference in session last week granted a letter of transfer to Rev. W. L. Wells to join the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Rev. J. F. Morgan, till recently pastor at Winchester, Va., has received over forty members into the Rosemont Church since he became pastor there some six or eight weeks ago.

The Georgia and Alabama Christian Conference decided to have published at once 300 copies of its minutes for free distribution, in addition to taking the usual number of copies of the Christian Annual.

Rev. Floyd D. Ballard, Elon College, N. C., who was licensed to preach by the Eastern Virginia Conference, at Franklin, last week, has accepted the pastorate of the Henderson, N. C. Christian Church.

While at the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, the Managing Editor was entertained at the hospitable home of Mr. J. B. Gay. Dr. W. H. Dennison, Dr. W. T. Walters, and Mr. R. B. Odom and wife, were likewise guests at this home.

The Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, At Franklin, Va., last week, was well attended. The officers for the coming year are: Dr. W. D. Harward, president; Dr. N. G. Newman, vice-president; Dr. I. W. Johnson, secretary, and Mr. H. Woodward, treasurer.

Rev. H. Biscoe Hall, formerly of our Palm Street Church, Greensboro, North Carolina, has been extended a unanimous call to, and has accepted the pastorate of Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, Virginia. He began his work with his new charge on Sunday, November 1st.

The report of the Home Mission Committee, read before the Eastern Virginia Conference by Lieutenant Governor J. E. West, chairman, was especially to be noted. The report will appear in the Christian Annual, and is worthy of the study of every member of the church.

Sam Davis and wife were guests last week of the Eastern Virginia Conference and rendered several musical numbers which were highly enjoyable. The conference showed its esteem for these good people in presenting them a purse of nearly ninety dollars. Our churches would profit by keeping these workers busy in their chosen field of music for evangelistic services.

The Franklin Christian Church was organized on April 29, 1883, by Rev. M. L. Hurley, assisted by Revs. W. W. Staley, D. D., and Robert A. Ricks. From thirteen charter members, it has grown to more than 250 members, who support an all-time pastor. Only three of the charter members are now living. The present handsome brick building is the second the congregation has occupied.

Dr. W. W. Staley, though an emeritus pastor, is in no sense an emeritus worker. He is now deeply concerned in building up a pastorate for some worthy and capable pastor in Gates County, N. C., with Sunbury as a suitable and convenient center. He feels with many others, that if Damascus, Eures, Sarem, and Oak Grove churches would unite their forces, and locate a pastor in their midst, a real service would be rendered in strengthening all these churches and in building up our Christian cause in Gates County. It indeed seems a most fitting and worthwhile thing to do.

Dover, Delaware, Church, and Webster Community Church, Maryland, though far removed from the meeting place, Franklin, Va., of their conference this year, were well represented in the conference and captured and carried it their way for its next annual session. The conference was called upon to "vote as it would go," and by rising vote decided to meet at Havre de Grace next session. It is useless to say that Brother Sutcliffe and his people were most happy over the decision. And the Eastern Virginia people will go. This conference does what it undertakes to do.

"Dr. Daniel Albright Long preached his last sermon as pastor of the Franklinton Christian Church last Sunday night in the school auditorium, pastors Davis and Blanton assisting in the service. The sermon was uniquely typical of Dr. Long, rich in rhetoric, fluent in reminiscence, sparkling in scholarly expression as he held up the Cross of Christ as the emblem of the power that ras revolutionized the world and created a new civilization.

"Franklinton gives up Dr. Long with deep regret. His stay in our midst has been one continuous blessing of bright optimism which radiates from him as natural as sunshine and as aromatic as the dewy rose of spring."

"Say it with flowers" really means what it says in the new flower program adopted by the First Christian Church of Richmond. Until recently, the flowers used for the Sunday services were furnished by contract with a local florist. On the first Sunday in November, the flower committee of the church, Mrs. A. E. Pierce and Mrs. F. S. Gardner, put into operation the program which the church adopted at its last business meeting. On each Sunday members have been asked to furnish flowers in memory of some loved one or ones, either living or having gone to the home beyond. Already the members have taken hold of the idea and it promises to be a great success. Dr. and Mrs Ryan furnished Chrysanthemums last Sunday in memory of their youngest daughter's birthday. Supt. Kelley of the Sunday School has asked for next Sunday in memory of his son Walter, who before his death was a faithful member of the Richmond church.

ROANOKE, ALABAMA.

We have just closed the most profitable session of the Alabama Conference. We plan to do larger things for the Kingdom next year. We look forward to a most successful time in our Master's work.

Our little band at Roanoke, Alabama, has adopted the budget plan and the every-member canvass for next year. We are anxious to pay for our church lot next third Sunday, and we cordially ask everyone who will and can to lend us a little aid just now, for we need it as never before.

If we can just finish paying our debt on the lot now, we are going to begin our building at an early date. This will surely mean more to our cause than anything we can do now.

If every reader of THE SUN will help us a little right now, we can get over in good shape—but if you will pray for us and then send a contribution also, it will be so nice. God help us all to do our best.

Dr. Atkinson preached for us on the third Sunday, morning and evening, and we had fine services. We also have a fine Sunday School and Woman's Missionary Society, both of which are doing excellent work. Come to see us at the "City Hall" every third Sunday and at night. We will try to make you feel welcome.

God bless our cause and prosper it in our hands.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The Franklin, Virginia, saints, sires, sons and sisters, put on a program of sacrificial service and holy hospitality in their entertainment of the Christian Conference last week, that made all hearts glad and caused all delegates and visitors to acclaim "It is good indeed to be here." It does not require great reports, great addresses, great sermons to make an Eastern Virginia Conference great. The fine fellowship that always prevails, and that marvelous hospitality whose superior, if whose equal, is not to be found elsewhere on earth, simply makes a conference of Christian workers great here, even before the president's gavel falls calling the body together. If anyone surmises that Southern hospitality, especially of the Virginia brand, is on the wane, that one needs to come to our Eastern Virginia Christian Conference and see. Hospitality is not a pastime or a profession with these people, it is a passion.

Our Franklin church is beautifully and bountifully equipped from office to auditorium, from kitchen to choir, and from cellar to committee rooms, for entertaining and accommodating a conference. And the good folks who worship there are as glorious and gracious in their homes as they are in their place of praise and prayer.

The conference met at 10:30 A. M., October 27th, and at that hour, when the gavel of President W. D. Howard called the body to order, a large delegation from practically all the churches and all the ministers of the conference answered to the roll call.

The very popular and capable pastor, Rev. F. C. Lester, gave a welcome address that welcomed, and Dr. I. W. Johnson gave a response that responded and corresponded. In his annual address, Dr. Harward pleaded earnestly and eloquently for a deeper spiritual life as the one safe and sure source of the salvation of all our sacred and secular problems and propositions. Following the sermon a sweet and solemn service was witnessed as Dr. W. T. Walters, assisted by a sufficient bevy of ministers and deacons, administered the holy communion.

In the afternoon, Home Missions, Religious Literature and Stewardship, a trinity of great themes, engaged the individual attention of the great congregation that filled the ample auditorium to capacity. Lieutenant Governor J. E. West reported for Home Missions, Rev H. S. Hardcastle for Religious Literature, and Rev F. C. Lester for Stewardship. By last year's report the churches of this conference have a membership of considerably more than ten thousand souls, who gave for church and benevolences during the year over $360,000.00, and hold property in church buildings, grounds and equipment, valued at more than a million, one hundred thousand dollars. While it did not this year add a congregation or a church to its enrollment, it did improve its property holdings and strengthen its stakes by adding to the equipment and capacity of some of its buildings and by increasing the total membership in the churches already established. Oakland Church has greatly enlarged and improved its plant and is soon to be rededicated. Cypress Chapel is now rebuilding and grettly enlarging its plant at heavy cost. And South Norfolk is soon to have one of the very best and most ample buildings in the conference, a house to cost $75,000.00 more or less. There is a feeling, nevertheless, that the Home Missions program of the conference is far too restricted and is far from adequate to the impact of such a numerous body, controlling as it does, such abundance of wealth. Some one aptly remarked that such a body might well have as tis goal a field worker giving full time to work in and for the conference, and the addition of at least two churches and congregations each year. Surely the conference is able, numerically and financially, to undertake such a program, or even a larger one, if and when it shall deem it wise and worth while to so undertake.

Bro Hardcastle, for the Committee on Literature, feels that a persistent and systematic endeavor should be made in the conference to increase the interest in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and our other church publications, and that the pastors, if they would, could render the church invaluable aid along this line.

This conference is showing a commendable and increasing interest in Stewardship, as was evidenced by the fine and elaborate report brought in and by the Stewardship institutes and other activities held in the churches during the past year.

At the evening hour of conference, Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, Secretary of Stewardship for the General Convention, made a very strong and engaging address on Stewardship, setting forth the fact that the proper handling of money is, or should be regarded a sacred trust. Tithing is not only a law of God, but a law of love, from which practice one may and will derive spiritual power and progress.

Under the direction of Mrs. M. L. Bryant, the Young People's Society of First Church, Norfolk, presented a most striking and memorable pageant on "Stewardship." It would add impetus and interest to the work of Stewardship in all of our churches could this pageant be presented to each and every congregation.

On the second day of the session, a splendid hour was further devoted to the discussion of Stewardship and a most lively and wholesome debate of this fruitful topic was indulged.

Rev. L. E. Smith, Chairman, presented the report on Evangelism, which called for emphasis and progress in this vital program of the church. Rev. Jas. H. Lightbourne, Chairman, ably presented and effectually emphasized the work of the Christian Missionary Association. Under Brother Lightbourne's capable leadership, this association is developing into a great factor in this conference and is increasing rapidly in interest and in results.

"Jesus, Our Advocate," was the theme of Rev. J. F. Morgan in leading the devotional half-hour of the conference at this session. "Jesus, Our Sacrifice," was his theme the first day; and "Jesus, Our Coming King," was his theme the third day. These services were sacred, and their tone was deeply spiritual and sublime.

Mrs. M. L. Bryant's report of the Woman's Conference at Liberty Spring, was inspirational in its presentation of the great and good work of the women in their organized missionary endeavor in the past year.

Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D., presented the report on Foreign Missions. This report emphasized the need of missionary study and activity, if the conference is going to live up to its obligations to those who are not blessed as we are to enjoy the power and share the blessings God has for us in seeking to carry out His commands and His program. This report joined with that on Home Missions in setting aside next February as Missions Month. In that month, they seek to secure an offering from every member of all our churches, Sunday Schools, Endeavor and Missionary Societies, for our Emergency Missionary Fund of $25,000.00. This is in approval of an action by the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention, and of the Mission Board, urging all conferences to adopt and put into operation such action. There is a feeling that the whole church should be brought to a more lively interest in and concern for missions, and that thus far we have not given sufficient emphasis to this vital and fundamental business of the church.

Dr. W. W. Staley, Chairman, presented a printed report on Education, the body of which, being of general interest and import, is printed elsewhere in THE SUN this week. The committee holds assets for this department now of $9,754.27, and this year has two students in Elon College preparing for the ministry. It was voted that Floyd D. Ballard of Mt. Carmel church, and who is now in his senior year in Elon College, be licensed to preach. At a later hour of the Conference, by request of the president, Dr. Staley licensed Bro. Ballard, and set him apart to this high calling and privilege.

Rev. John G. Truitt, of the committee, delivered a truly eloquent address, most timely and appropriate to the committee's work, on "Be Ye Not Servants of Men."

At the evening session, Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., President of the Southern Christian Convention, set forth the different types of Evangelism, and moved the audience mightily in his passionate plea for systematic and insistent evangelism.

By vote of the conference earlier in the day, an offering was taken at this time for the Emergency Mission Fund. The amount given was $52.17. Superintendent C. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage brought the evening service to a happy climax in a graphic presentation of the status and needs of the institution he so faithfully and efficiently represents.

The third day of the conference, scheduled to close at noon, but running far into the afternoon, was filled with lively and absorbing discussion of reports of special committees, election of delegates, forty in number, to the Southern Christian Convention, selection of the place for the next session of conference, which is to be the Webster Community Church, Havre de Grace, Md., Rev. M. W. Sutcliffe, pastor, and the adoption of reports on Moral Reform and Religious Education.

The closing exercises were led by Dr. W. W. Staley, and were characterized by a sense of reverence, worship, prayer, and praise.

It was a great and good conference; and the writer of this realizes how wholly inadequate these lines are in seeking to portray to SUN readers the spirit and manifold features of the sessions of this body of Christian workers and stewards of our Lord. J. O. A.

SOME DIFFERENCES.

A great many people are not able to understand that there is any difference between the aims and objectives of the religious press and those of the daily press. They are inclined to think that the daily press gives religious news as well as other news and, therefore, it covers the whole of life. In this they are mistaken. For instance, recently a survey was made of one of the outstanding newspapers of America. Out of eighty-four columns, exclusive of advertising, a little over a single column had to do with the church or with religion. A few months later another great daily pubilshed a complete list of its staff, occupying no less than four columns. There appeared in the list of the staff, men or women assigned to cover politics, sports, literature, drama, finance, military affairs, science, fashions, the courts, and almost every conceivable human interest except religion. Not a single man was assigned to religion and the churches. Therefore, when men conclude there is no field for the religious press, they are drawing unfounded conclusions from an insecure basis of facts. Men will continue to read their daily papers, but Christian men must also read their religious papers.

The daily press gives men the information which they want, but the religious press gives them what they ought to have.

The daily press pictures things as they are. The religious press strives to make things what they should be.

The daily press concerns itself with news, but the religious press publishes "good news," which is another name for the Gospel.

It is also fair to say that the daily press concerns itself with materialism, but the religious press devotes itself to the spiritual interests of mankind.

The contrasts between these two types of literature given above by no means exhaust the subject, but they do indicate that there is a wide field of usefulness open for the religious press, provided, of course, that religion is regarded as a vital human interest.

The daily press consists of two kinds of papers, what we may call general organs and special organs. The same is true of the church and the religious press. For example, the Christian Church maintains two general organs: THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the Herald of Gospel Liberty. It also maintains two special organs: the Christian Missionary and the Journal of Christian Education, and just as the wise business man will take a general paper and then his special paper for his trade or profession, so the members of the Christian Church in the South should take THE CHRISTIAN SUN and, if possible, the Herald of Gospel Liberty, but certainly, along with the one or both of these, the Christian Missionary and the Journal of Christian Education.

The church is different from the world, and we cannot with safety ignore these differences, even in the realms of publications. We wish to be fair to the daily press, but we must also be fair in our thought and our plans to the Kingdom of God and the religious press which stands for that Kingdom through legitimate publicity.

THREE CONFERENCES HAVE SPOKEN.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention, in session at the Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., October 2, 1925, voted that "The Mission Board be authorized to request the conferences of the convention to designate a mission month for offerings from all the churches in the conferences of the convention, which month is to be not later than April, 1926, for an Emergency Mission Fund of $25,000.00."

Since that resolution was passed, three conferences have held their annual sessions, and these all unanimously adopted and approved the action of the convention's committee. The Alabama Conference discussed the matter as to the best month to be set aside as Missions Month and decided on March. The Georgia and Alabama Conference did likewise and also decided on March. The Eastern Virginia Conference decided that February would be the best month for their churches to stress missions and take the offering.

Our Mission Board, like that of every denomination that is trying to do anything in Kingdom service so far as we know, is in debt. There are obligations to be met, or the work even now being done, is to stop and be deplorably hampered.

It all comes to this: The Mission Board, with its hands tied will not and can not begin work at any new places, however needy, until present obligations are discharged; and, moreover, is now curtailing and must curtail its appropriations to work already begun and most needy, until funds are available. Further than this, it was no fault of the Board that such impediments have been fastened upon it. Appropriations were made, and obligations were entered into, that seemed both conservative and reasonable, and essential to our opportunity and in keeping with our resources. But there was a slump in resources, unforeseen, unexpected, and unavoidable. Men and Millions, while doing more than we had ever done before, has not yielded the resources promised, pledged, and reasonably anticipated.

And now, right this day and hour, the Mission Board needs, and should have, a minimum of $25,000.00 as an Emergency Fund, to discharge most pressing obligations and carry forward the work of building churches at home and supporting God's messengers of the Gospel abroad.

If every member of our churches, Sunday Schools, Endeavor Societies, Missionary Societies, can be given a chance to make a free will offering to this Emergency Fund, we have the faith to believe the full amount will be contributed.

To this end the Executive Committee of our Convention has acted, and the three conferences named have spoken for themselves and their churches. It is reasonable to suppose that all conferences will speak in similar tone and terms, and that this shall be made the most potent year in all our churches in their endeavor to build up our Christian cause and make known our Christ to the world. CHRISTMAS SEALS.

Tuberculosis Christmas seals are again for sale on the candy counters, cigar stands and hotel desks of the country. Millions of them, too, are pouring into our homes by mail, with the request that we purchase the little stickers and so further strengthen the campaign against one of the world's greatest scourges.

This year the Christmas seal comes of age. It is just twenty-one years since an obscure postal clerk in Denmark conceived the idea of a decorative stamp to be placed on Christmas mail as a means of raising funds for a hospital for tuberculous children. A few years later the first Christmas seals that were sold in the United States raised $3,000 for the pucrhase of a sanatorium site in Delaware. Last year, 1,250,000,000 seals were printed for the National Tuberculosis Association, and their sales brought approximately $4,500,000 into the coffers of the 1,500 organizations affiliated with the national body.

During these years the Christmas seal has helped to finance hundreds of local, State and National campaigns to secure hospitals, sanatoria, clinics and dispensaries. At least 20,000 public heatlh nurses are at work in the schools and homes to educate children and parents in the rules of healthful living. In this way minor physical defects are detected and, because of early treatment a physical breakdown in later life, with tuberculosis or some other serious disease, is often prevented. Every large city nowadays has its open air schools, preventoria and nutrition classes where the children of tuberculous parents and others below par are brought to normal weight and strength. Approximately 3,000 such institutions are in this country at present. The Christmas seal has made possible the modern health crusade, the largest child health movement in the world, through which, 8,000,000 school children have been taught daily habits of cleanliness, diet, exercise and rest so that they may develop into robust men and women.

Participation in the annual Christmas seal sale is an investment in individual and community health. More than that, we become a part of the message of hope which the seal carries to the many thousands who otherwise become victims of a preventable and cureable disease. In all truth, the mission of the Christmas seal is joyous health. M. G.

REPORT ON EDUCATION.

The Report of the Educational Committee, presented to the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, at Franklin, Va., last week, is so full of facts and fraught with such might and meaning, that THE SUN'S Editor deems it worth reading by the whole Church. The committee is composed of Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. I. W. Johnson, and Rev. John G. Truitt. Dr. Harper has thought so much of the report that he has made it the subject of the Elon Letter this week, and has included it almost bodily.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Belief in the immotrality of the soul is so universal that when people die, the living say: "He passed away last night," or some other fixed time. If death ended all, the dead would not "pass away"; they would just die.

Another man has passed away whose life deserves mention in the printed page, because of its sincerety, faith, and Christian activity. He came to Suffolk thirty-three years ago, and in that third of a century built a Christian reputation on such solid ground that the whole city and that still larger circle of friends say in their minds if not with their lips, "He was a good man"; and Solomon said: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches"; and that is the one possession that all men could win; but many do not. Even bad people would like to bare a good name. They want it, if they do not strive after it. Here is one who won that desirable reputation.

William Garland Farrar was born in Nashville, Tennessee, sixty-five years ago. His family came to Scottsville, Virginia, where he and his father conducted a newspaper for a period. Mr. Farrar went into the music business, came to Suffolk, where he has lived for a third of a century selling pianos, tuning and repairing, organs and pianos, and making friends among those who love harmony.

On June 14, 1893, he was married to Miss Lena B. Beale, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Edwin W. Beale, the charm of whose ministry lingers in the hearts of so many devoted souls. On December 20, 1895, they buried Virginia H., their first born; on November 17, 1904, they buried Edwin William, a darling boy. One daughter, Garland, is now Mrs. Jerome Costen.

His companion in service, in sorrow, in worship, and a happy home, now says in her heart, "Thy will be done"; while Jesus says to her, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter."

He is also survived by a brother, Fred H. Farrar, a married sister, Mrs. Anna Farrar Lewis, and another sister Miss Rose Farrar, all of Richmond, Virginia. Another sister, Miss Ellen Farrar, died in Richmond the day before he passed away, on Friday October 16, 1925. She could not come to him and he could not go to her, but they both met in heaven.

Deacon Farrar was identified with the work of the church as president of the Christian Endeavor Society, as a Sunday School teacher, and in the regular church services. Regular, punctual, liberal, faithful, his example impressed all with his work as a Christian. He stood foursquare on all moral questions, was honest in business, pure in social relations, loyal as a citizen, and devout as a Christian. His memory is precious.

Deacon Farrar was buried from the Suffolk Christian Church at three o'clock Sunday afternoon, October 18th. On the platform were Revs. H. S. Hardcastle, N. G. Newman, D. D., J. M. Roberts, and Dr. R. H. Crossfield, pastor of a Disciples Church in Norfolk. The choir sang, "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "Abide with Me," and a quartette sang "The Heart of God." The casket and pulpit were covered with beautiful floral designs, the congregation was large, the Deacons of the church were honorary pallbearers, and their was a charm about the church that seemed a foretaste of the temple above, "that house not made with hands."

The flowers will fade, their fragrance will vanish, but the memory and influence of Deacon Farrar's faithful life will continue forever.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

I had the pleasure of attending the Eastern Virginia Conference last week and of listening to the report of the Committee on Education, of which for many years Dr. W. W. Staley has been chairman.

I have had in mind for sometime to go back through the Christian Annuals for these years and to collect the statements of this committee in regard to the educational situation. It is remarkable to me how a man who has given himself to the ministry as Dr. Staley has, keeps so thoroughly up-to-date on matters of education. The utterances of this committee have in almost every case reflected the growing sentiment and teachings of educators, and this is certainly so this year. I quote from the report as follows:

"Education holds the most prominent place in the thought of the nation and the church. There is danger of divorcing education from Christianity, which has given this nation the public school. The removal of the Bible from the public school is a danger to the church and state. 'The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword,' and needs only to be read, not expounded, in the school. It would improve the judgment, conscience and conduct of teachers, as well as lead the student into the 'path of the just which is a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.'

"That the Church College should try to be a 'Character First and Always' institution, is a task all the more difficult while the public schools, from which students come, have had no place in their management for the word of God. Cooks cannot make good bread out of flour from bad mills; and colleges work only upon lives from public schools.

"Ministerial Education is a vital factor in the life of the Church. Very few pews go beyond the pulpit in faith, character, and support. Too many young men listen to men, or make their own choice of the ministry, rather than listen to the call of God and His command, 'Follow me,' and 'Go thou and preach the Kingdom of God.'—Luke 9: 59-60. The drop-outs and failures in the ministry from lack of a divine call, or lack of surrender to such a call, or to the ministry, are tragic histories that need correction by education.

"Elon College with its fine buildings and adequate equipment, and its full number of 400 students this year, deserves the thoughtful, prayerful, financial, and student support of the conference, and the families composing the conference."

I wish to call your attention briefly in this letter to the third sentence in the first paragraph, where it is stated: "There is danger of divorcing education from Christianity." It is even worse than this. There is danger of opposing education to Christianity. There can be no doubt in the world on the part of the observing educator that education is in most cases crassly materialistic. Christianity on the other hand is intensely spiritual. Christian Education is a sincere effort on the part of the church to conserve the development of knowledge and learning and to wed it to the spiritual conception of life. That is what we mean when we say that Christian Education is the hope of the world and the fate of the church. We shall not be able to save the world by materialism. We can only save it by spirituality.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

We are planning to enter the field at once in order to raise the interest on the $100,000 in bonds given to the college by the Southern Christian Convention. The bonds will not be sold as was originally intended, but will be held by the college as an asset or endowment, and we will endeavor to raise the interest on them which will amount to $6,000 annually.

Bethlehem College is a child of the Southern Christian Convention and is worthy of the best support of the whole convention, and it needs it now, and we do not feel that we will be disappointed in our appeal. The college is being run at a great sacrifice, as expenses are much lower for work taken here than anywhere else, and our the other high schools around that get State funds while we do not get any. The young folks want to come to Bethlehem, and we must have the funds to take care of them. We are making a strong appeal to those who expect to send their sons and daughters to school next year, as well as those who are sending now. No doubt you are already counting the cost. You will find it rather expensive if you send them away, but you need not do this, as you have your own school. And you should support it with your boys and girls, your prayers and your money.

Education costs money, but it also means money. In Massachusetts the average person goes to school seven years; in Tennessee the average person goes to school three years. In Massachusetts the average income is $200 a person; in Tennessee it is $116. In the United States as a whole the average college graduate earns $2,000 a year, the average high school graduate $1,000, and the average elementary school graduate only $500.

Each day spent in high school is worth $25.00 to each pupil, each day spent in college, $55.55. Only one in every hundred of our population has been a college graduate, yet 50 per cent of our Presidents, 54 per cent of our Vice-Presidents, 69 per cent of our Supreme Court Judges, and 87 per cent of our Attorney Generals have had college degrees.

The person who cannot read and write, has one chance in 150,000 to get his name in the book called "Who's Who in America"; the grammar school graduate has one chance in 4,250; the high school graduate one in 1,600; the college graduate one in 180; the honor student one in three. Does education pay?

It is expensive, but it is worth vastly more than it costs.

S. L. Beougher.

OUR BURDEN BEARER.

Have you ever tried casting all your care upon Him who careth for you, or have you cast some of your burdens upon Him while you struggle along with others yourself? Our Lord does not want us to carry the load at all. There is not a single burden which we cannot lay at the feet of Jesus and leave there. When we come to the end of our resources, and we ask anything in His name, if we are giving Him faithful, obedient, God-fearing service, He will hear and help us.

The trouble is we bring our burdens to Him and do not leave them there, but take them away with us again. When our Lord told us to cast our burdens upon Him, He meant for us to leave them there and let Him take care of them for us. He lets the cares and anxieties come, but by faith we can put them over upon Him. They may come more and more often, heavier and heavier, but that only means we may draw more and more upon His never-failing power, and have a freer and fuller intercourse with our Lord than we have ever been privileged to have before. It is just another opportunity to trust Him. When the Word tells us to "commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him," we are to commit all our way unto Him, and trust our all to Him, then He delivers us out of all our trials and lightens all our burdens, or better still, takes all upon Himself.

His strength and grace is all we need in our weakness, or to meet any trial. When we feel our weakness so completely that we rely wholly upon the Lord, is when we are really strong. When the power of Christ rests upon us is when we accomplish the worth-while things in His service. In sorrow, He is our comfort, not for ourselves alone, but "that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God."

In the hour of temptation, we turn to Him, knowing He is able to deliver us, because He won the victory over the tempter. There is not a trial, a need, a difficulty, there is not a circumstance, not a sorrow, distress or weakness which He cannot, does not want to meet for us. Our trials are only our opportunities, they are Jesus' loving invitations to draw upon His power, which never has failed, which never will fail those who trust Him completely.

THE VALUE OF COLLEGE EDUCATION.

"I count the economic and social values of a college education as wholly incidental," declared Dr. A. T. Allen, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, of North Carolina, in an address before the students of Elon College on October 30th. Dr. Allen's subject was, "The Values of a College Education," and it was thoroughly refreshing to have the head of the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction place the values of the spirit above those of economic and social advantage.

Dr. Allen spoke of the two schools of thought that are contending with each other for the mastery in North Carolina education at this time. The first of these schools he characterized as economic, according to which there is a definite propaganda to limit the courses of instruction in the public school system and also by various tests and measurements to limit the number of pupils which shall take advantage of the State's educational system. Dr. Allen clearly indicated that he had scant sympathy with this school of thought.

The other school he characterized as the spiritual, which believes that the ultimate thing of value in the social order is not the almighty dollar but the human personality, freely and fully developed. This school has set before its face the high aspiration, according to Dr. Allen, to provide not only an enriched curriculum for the secondary school, but the extension of the privilege of higher education in the colleges of the church and the State, until every young man and young woman in the State who is ambitious shall have the opportunity to go to college and enjoy every advantage that a great and rich State can offer.

Dr. Allen gave five values which he considered permanent and abiding as necessarily arising out of a true college education.

The first of these he described as an increased power to understand oneself with the consequent ability of adjusting oneself to service in the world.

The second advantage and permanent value which he saw in college education was an increased understanding of the world itself and the ability to use the forces and environment of the world to contribute to one's happiness and the happiness of others.

The third advantage he described as increased power to maintain attention. The ability to do work, and harder work, and more of it is certainly to be expected as one of the abiding benefits, according to Dr. Allen, of higher education.

Co-operation with others with the preservation at the same time of one's own individuality was the fourth abiding value ascribed by the speaker to higher education.

"But the greatest good, after all," declared Dr. Allen, "is to be found in the increased power of moral self direction." If the college fails to motivate its students in terms of a noble idealism of life and purpose; if it fails to give them attitudes of moral and ethical import, which shall be as self operative and self directive in the moral and spiritual realm as the force of gravity is in the physical realm, college education is a miserable failure.

This is the State Superintendent's first visit to Elon since the completion of the new plant, of which he expressed deep appreciation.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

The American Tract Society, which has printed and distributed in all 815,669,200 pieces of Christian literature, celebrates its centennial this year by appealing to the public for $200,000 with which to start its second century of service.

For one hundred years this historic institution has been one of the principal agencies in this country for the spread of the Gospel through the printed page. In all the literature it has published there is no reference to denominational differences, for the American Tract Society stresses the great essential principles of Christianity as they are seen in the life and death of Christ, which are common to all denominations. For this reason its publications are appropriate for use in many fields where strictly denominational literature would not be acceptable, and for this reason the work of the American Tract Society alone can meet certain needs in this country. By converts in the foreign mission field, whose hard-won faith needs the support of the Christian message in their own language, by missionaries who work among them, by our own foreign population whose natural desire is to worship in their own language, by the lonely people of the world in lumber camps, in mines, in the wilderness; in prisons, in hospitals and in homes, the publications of the society are read and cherished.

The present work of the society stresses particularly the Christian Americanization of the thousands of foreigners who come to America each year. Through its colporter at Ellis Island, Rev. John A. Birseneek, it gives out Christian books and tracts and books on Americanization in many languages, and it distributes in the great foreign centres of America, tracts and books in twenty-seven languages, and hymnals in ten languages. In addition to the work among foreigners in this country, the American Tract Society has contributed largely to the support of several well-known societies which exist for the distribution of Christian literature in foreign lands.

That this important work may continue and expand to meet an ever increasing need for evangelization through the printed page, the historic American Tract Society asks for increased support to mark one hundred years of consecrated and competent service and to start its second century with abundant life.

The sum of $200,000 which is the goal of the Centennial Fund Campaign of the American Tract Society is to be used to develop and increase colporter service among the foreign groups in New England; to endow the Spanish Sunday School periodical, Manzanas de Oro, which the American Thact Society is at present furnishing to the number of 25,000 subscriptions a week at less than manufacturing cost; to re-publish the Self-Explaining Bible with notes and the pocket Bible; to print new tracts in English, more books in foreign languages, and foreign hymnals in five different languages, and to publish Spanish books imperatively needed for the training of the native ministry.

The Centennial Fund Campaign Committee is under the national chairmanship of J. Frederick Talcott of New York. Many distinguished and worthy laymen and Christian ministers are on the Executive Committee of the Society and among its Honorary Vice-Presidents, and it deserves the support of all Christians of whatever denomination.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

A VOICE FROM JAPAN.

Dr. A. D. Woodworth, our senior missionary to Japan, a bible student and teacher, sends us this tithing message. Hundreds of our people are beginning to see its value and importance, but thinking of its importance will not make one a tither. Enrollment starts you on the way. Dr. Woodworth says:

"At an evening gathering recently, one of our missionary friends told us of a woman in his American parish who refused to tithe because, if she did, she would not have enough to live on. This friend made up his mind to watch that lady and see how her financial plans worked out. He noticed that misfortune after misfortune seemed to follow her. He was sure she was not among the blessed of God.

"Another lady whom he knew had received $20,000 when her husband died. She took $2,000 of it to her pastor and told him she wanted him to use it for the Lord. But he said, 'You are a poor widow. I do not think the Lord wants you to give so much to him. Better invest it and live on the income!' She took his advice and invested it in what seemed to be good securities, but in a year her securities became worthless and she lost all she had.

"It is not true that all who do not tithe fail in their financial plans, for there are many wicked people who are rich, but it adds so much to the richness and sweetness of life to feel that God is your great Partner in all you do. While many have practiced tithing as a duty enjoined by the scriptures, it has always seemed to me the loving Father saw a great channel of grace and love and power which He might bestow on those who walk with Him and do all their business in fellowship with him.

"With me the constant question is, what does the Senior Partner want me to do? How will this expenditure add to the glory of God and the happiness of men? It has seemed to me that such questions help very much to protect one from the great sin of covetousness and from the many financial mistakes.

"Of course the New Testament idea is that all we possess is God's and we are but stewards of his bounty. It is not the tithe which impoverishes but the waste on unnecessary and harmful pleasures. In Japan, the people are always complaining of poverty and hard times, but spend eleven hundred million yen on alcoholic drinks, two hundred and sixty-seven hundred yen on tobacco every year. It is very sure that the road to poverty is not along the line of obedience to God's rules for the game."

YOUR STEWARDSHIP PROGRAM.

A splendid number of our pastors and workers are writing us of the Stewardship program they are starting with November.

The most of our conferences recognized the great subject in their annual sessions this year.

Our church papers are publishing splendid articles to help the churches and pastors.

Conference and local church stewardship secretaries are recognizing their privilege and responsibility.

Now we would urge parents to teach it to their children in their homes and to practice it for themselves; and we urge it for all programs of our young people's congresses.

AT WESTERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA CONFERENCES.

Your Secretary had full opportunity to present various phases of Christian Stewardship at this conference at the annual session at Olive Chapel Church.

As soon as the Board Meetings close (October 24th) he is off to the Eastern Virginia Conference at Franklin, Va., and the North Carolina Conference Woman's and Young People's Missionary meeting at Greensboro, N. C., and an institute at our new church at Lynchburg, Va. At all of these places Stewardship is given prominent place.

Secure a good Stewardship book and read it for yourself during the Stewardship period. Give this subject your honest consideration.

Mr. Leland E. Brigham, Portsmouth, N. H., is the new Stewardship Secretary of the Rockingham Conference.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

November 15, 1925.

Subject: "Paul's Arrest in Jerusalem."

Golden Text: "If a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed."—I. Peter 4: 16.

Lesson: Acts 21: 17 to 22: 30.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 125: 1-5.

Reference Material: Matthew 5: 10-12; 23: 37-38.

Jesus has said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow me." Paul had been a good follower of the Master and like Jesus, he set his face to go to Jerusalem. He may not have known the specific details of what awaited him, but he knew in a general way, for he had been warned as he waited at Caesarea. If he had known, it would not have made any difference to Paul, for he said that he was ready not only to be bound at Jerusalem, but also to die for the name of the Lord Jesus. And Paul was not the kind of man to make extravagant statements. He meant what he said. We need more of his spirit of courage and devotion.

The late Professor Kent, in his book, "The Work and Teachings of the Apostles," suggests that Paul had several reasons for going to Jerusalem. The first was his desire to fulfill the injunction of the pillar apostles in their last interview at Jerusalem, when they urged him to remember the poor. Evidence shows that Paul had this offering with him. In the second place, the fact that he had this offering with him prompted him to see to it that he discharge the trust which the Gentile churches had thus placed in his hands. In the third place Paul desired to vindicate his work among the Gentiles. In fact he urges the Christians in his letter to the Romans to pray that his mission to Jerusalem may prove acceptable to the saints. Finally, above all, Paul ardently hoped by his visit to establish the unity of the "Body of Christ." This was to be the crown of his life work. Whether it was any or all of these reasons that prompted Paul to go to Jerusalem, the fact is that he went. And thereby hangs a tale.

It is difficult, if not impossible, for people to outgrow their prejudices. The Jewish Christians at Jerusalem were no exception. Luke makes no reference in the lesson to any expression of gratitude on the part of the mother church at Jerusalem for the offering of the Gentile churches—an offering that represented good-will and sacrifice. The thing that loomed largest in the thinking of the mother church was the matter of Christians and the Jewish law. They reminded Paul that there were thousands of Jews which believed in Jerusalem at that time—it was the time of the Passover—and they suggested that inasmuch as it had been rumored that Paul had been teaching the Jews which were among the Gentiles that they were free from the law of Moses, it would be a good thing for him to show his regard for the law by taking upon himself a vow, and also to pay the charges—a considerable sum—for four men who had also taken the vow. Inasmuch as there was no principle involved—it was a concession rather than a compromise—Paul agreed to take upon himself the vow. The plot begins to thicken.

Certain Jews from Asia, when they saw Paul in the temple, stirred up the people and laid hold upon Paul. They charged Paul with teaching against the law and the temple, and simply because they had seen Paul with Trophimus an Ephesian, in the city, they charged him with polluting the temple by bringing a Greek—no Gentile was allowed to enter the inner court, the court of the Israelites—into the holy place. It was the rallying cry of the mob, and within a few minutes Paul was the center of a mad crowd that was not only in a wild uproar, but which was bent on doing him to death. Fortunately the chief captain heard of the affair and he delivered Paul from the hands of the mob and from certain death. It was then that Paul made his "defense" before the multitude, a speech that is a worthy model of oratorical art. Before attempting to teach this lesson, every teacher should read and re-read that speech as recorded in Acts 22.

Beginning with the salutation, "Men, brethren, and fathers," and speaking in the Hebrew tongue, Paul reminded his hearers that he himself was a Jew, and that although he had been born in Tarsus, he had come to Jerusalem for his education and had studied at the feet of the great Gamaliel. He reminds his hearers, too, that he had been as zealous toward God and for the law as they were, perhaps even more so, for he had persecuted the Christians even unto foreign cities. Then he recounts the dramatic story of his conversion, and now goes on to say that it was in that very temple where he had received his further orders or commission from God. So far so good. But when he went on to say that he had been sent to the Gentiles, it was too much for his hearers. They cried out in blind prejudice and mad desperation, "Away with such a fellow from the earth; for it is not fit that he should live." How easily does prejudice make people deaf!

Paul was ready to suffer for Christ, but he was not willing to do it unnecessarily, and when they made ready to scourge him, he succintly asked them if it was lawful to scourge a Roman citizen, especially when he had not been condemned. He was kept in bond, however, and the next day he was hailed before the Sanhedrin to face charges which had been brought against him. It was practically a matter of jumping out of the frying pan into the fire. The events crowded rapidly upon one another, and it was only delaying the inevitable. Paul was a bond-slave for Jesus Christ in a double sense from this time on.

The lesson is full of teaching points. Here are a few of them:

1. One may make concessions without making compromises.

2. It is so easy to emphasize trivial matters to the exclusion of weightier things.

3. An ounce of testimony from personal experience is worth more than a pound of theological argument.

4. One should be sure of the facts before he makes an accusation.

5. Many people will fight for their religion who will not live it.

6. Men will do collectively what they do not have the courage to do individually.

7. Members of a group are morally responsible for what a group does.

8. Bigotry and prejudice are among the worst of sins.

9. Citizenship involves great privileges; but it also involves great responsibilities.

10. A man who would be proud of his city should try to make that city worthy of his pride.

11. The man who follows God must have moral courage.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

November 15, 1925.

Topics "How Can We Overcome the Spirit of Lawlessness?"

Scripture: Romans 13: 1-8.

Program.

Song—"O Beautiful for Spacious Skies."

Prayer—For the officials of the town, State, and country—that America may take the part in the affairs of the world which will make her a Christian example.

Scripture—To be read responsively.

Song—"Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," (Worship and Song, No. 209). or "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory."

Plans for the Meeting.

This will be a fine opportunity to get a Christian lawyer or some official of your town to speak to the Society on Law Enforcement. After the speech the members should be given a chance to ask the speaker questions.

Leader's Talk.

Laws are often made for the few rather than for the majority, but they are made for the good of all and should be enforced for this reason. There are many people who so thoroughly respect the rights of others and live so peacefully together that they need no laws. But they need protection from people who have no principle or respect for others. No law is passed until it is thoroughly weighed in the minds of those whom we have selected to be our representatives in law-making. A thorough study of a majority of the laws of our land will reveal their worth and benefit to the country. Every young man and young woman should make it their business to know the most important laws of their country—to know something of the Constitution and to prepare himself or herself to vote intelligently later.

Obedience and Law.

Obedience in the home and in the school room prepares children and young people for obedience to the laws of the country. A child who is allowed to have his way always in the home, will suddenly find himself confronted with laws which he must obey, and he will have no training for it. Some boys think they must run whenever a policeman is seen coming. This is because they are not taught the proper respect for the law and those who enforce it.

The Eighteenth Amendment.

Have some member prepare a paper on "The Eighteenth Amendment and Its Enforcement." The W. C. T. U. and its work should be included, especially its work in teaching temperance to children and young people.

Questions for the Meeting.

1. Why do we need laws in any organization?

2. How may anyone lend his or her support to the making of laws?

3. What should be done in case an unjust law is passed?

4. Is compulsory school attendance for children under sixteen years of age advisable? Why?

5. Should the country regulate the working hours of women and children? How?

6. How may speed laws preserve life?

7. What may Christian Endeavorers do to enforce Prohibition?

8. How may Prohibition better business conditions?

Bible References.

Keep the Law: Matt. 19: 16-22; 17: 27.

Uphold Authority: I. Peter 2: 13-17; Matt. 22: 21; Titus 3: 1.

SUFFICIENT GRACE.

"My grace is sufficient for thee." St Paul was by no means the only one in need of the assurance contained in the promise given here. Every day the saints of God are in need of the divine aid, especially in these days when it seems that the pressure from the powers of darkness is greater than ever. The Holy Spirit recorded that assurance in the Bible that it might stand for all time as a constant reminder of the nearness and readiness of God to meet our every need. A minister in England tells how the Holy Spirit impressed this passage upon his mind in a time of particular need, and made it ever after personally his. He said:

"The other evening I was riding home after a heavy day's work; I felt very wearied, and sore depressed, when swiftly, and suddenly as a flash of lightening, that text came to me: 'My grace is sufficient for thee.' I reached home and looked it up in the original, and at last it came to me in this way, 'My grace is sufficient for thee,' and I said, 'I should think it is, Lord'; and burst out laughing. I never fully understood what the holy laughter of Abraham was until then. It seemed to make unbelief so absurd. It was as though some little fish, being very thirsty, was troubled about drinking the river dry, and the River Thames might say, 'Drink away, little fish, my stream is sufficient for thee.' Or, it seemed like a little mouse in the granaries of Egypt, after the seven years of plenty, fearing it might die of famine; Joseph might say, "Cheer up, little mouse, my granaries are sufficient for thee.' Again, I imagined a man away up yonder on a lofty mountain, saying to himself, 'I breath so many cubic feet of air every year, I fear I shall exhaust the oxygen of the atmosphere,' but the earth might say, 'Breathe away, O man, and fill the lungs ever, my atmosphere is sufficient for thee.' Oh, brethren, be great believers! Little faith will bring your souls to heaven, but great faith will bring heaven to your souls.—Exchange.

"The prayer that is an experiment is no more than a mockery. It is impossible to pray if there is no hold upon God, if there is not an inspired urgency as of the Holy Ghost within us that will have an answer."—Sir W. Robertson Nicoll.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew the great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

WHEN GOD ANSWERS PRAYER.

Nearly seven months have passed since the organization of the Christian Conscience Crusade.

When it came into existence, its sole program was prayer—the earnest cry of believing souls to the Omnipotent One, whose ear is ever open to those that pray in faith, nothing doubting. All over the land little Praying Circles were formed, and their prayers were offered unceasingly. They had a definite program which was spread before them from week to week. Churches joined in offering the same prayers, for they dealt with conditions which were seemingly beyond human power to change. There were among them many small groups and some good-sized assemblages.

What has resulted from these months of supplication? We have already the evidence that their prayers, in several notable instances have been heard, and that our Heavenly Father, in His own chosen way, is answering them at the present moment.

What were these prayers? We prayed that the Crime Wave might be controlled, that the widespread violation of law might cease, and that those in authority might be obeyed. We were simple petitioners who looked to the Divine wisdom for a plan.

The answer came when the whole nation was stirred, and the National Crime Commission was formed, to which many State organizations have since pledged their hearty co-operation. If the new organization is God-led, and officered by men of faith, who believe in and stand ready to serve Him, we believe it will be able to cope with the situation.

Next, the Crusade and its allies prayed for weeks and months that Prohibition might be energized until the curse of alcohol was permanently lifted, and that we might become in very truth "a sober nation."

These prayers, too, have been answered—not yet wholly, but very helpfully—in the reorganization of the methods of Prohibition enforcement, which had proved inadequate. Let us hope and pray that the reorganization may be what is needed. If it does so prove, it will be a great blessing to the American people!

Then we have prayed unceasingly for a nation-wide revival, pleading that the churches might put aside their differences and unite in supplication for a spiritual reawakening. Weeks passed, and the churches, with few exceptions remained silent. Within the past two months, however, indications have appeared of a sincere desire for revival, and a number of churches are making preparations.

As in the case of the Crime Wave and the war against Prohibition, so with the revival. God's way always proves to be infinitely better than man can plan. We believe that our highest hopes will be realized only if we continue to pray that all three campaigns indicated be definitely under Divine guidance, and that they be the subject of our continued prayers.

While Aaron and Hur kept the hands of Moses upraised in prayer, the battle went well with Israel; but when the hands fell, the prayer ceased and the enemy triumphed.

To win the battles against crime, drunkenness, and forgetfulness of God, the members of the Christian Conscience Crusade and Christian people in all the States must continue in prayer without ceasing, until the victory is accomplished.—Christian Herald.

TUESDAY.

STRUGGLING TO "GET ON" OR LIVING FOR SOMETHING.

"All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them; for this is the law of the prophets."—Matt. 7: 12.

We are not at all charmed with the ideal of life held out by some that the normal state of mankind is that of struggling to "get on." We cannot understand that this trampling, elbowing, struggling against one another, treading against one another, fighting, destroying the other in order to rise, is the intended nor the most desirable lot of mankind. It is nothing but disagreeable symptoms of the depravity of man—of wrong heart-life and wrong conceptions of life's ideals.

The scriptures teach that the other fellow shall have comfort, peace and prosperity as well as me (Deut. 5: 14), and that we shall love the other fellow as well as ourselves (Lev. 19: 18), and that the supreme motive for living is the good we may do (Luke 10: 30-36), and the things to work for first are the treasures of heaven (Matt. 6: 20-32), and that it is worth all to suffer anything to attain it (II. Cor. 4: 17), for we are to build a condition with us incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away (I. Peter 1: 4).

Prayer.—Our Father, We want to live according to Thy divine purpose. We want to get away from the sordid things of life and live for righteousness and happiness. Grant unto us the soul and the power to do this. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LETTING OUT THE REINS.

LESSON: I. Cor. 13.

Every year I live I am more convinced that the waste, discords, troubles and sufferings of life lie in the love we have not given, the powers we have not used, and the selfishness that risks nothing.

"No one ever yet was the poorer in the long run for having once in a lifetime let out all the length of the reins" of his passions and powers to love and sacrifice an (not live) give life.

Prayer.—Our Father, Make us think—think Thy thoughts and live for Thee. We thank Thee that Thou hast not cut us off in our weakness, sins and unworthiness. Forgive us. We thank Thee for this day. We plan to spend it nobly. God help us. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

TOO MUCH QUARREL.

"If it be possible, as much as in you lieth, be at peace with all men."—Rom. 12: 18.

"For where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed."—Jas. 3: 16.

" . . . Stand fast in one spirit, with one soul striving for the faith of the Gospel."—Phil. 1: 27.

"The leaves were beginning to come on the big elm at the south end of the house, and a great fluttering of wings there attracted attention to it. Two robins were attempting to settle a difference in the prevalent European fashion, and most vigorously. Now one was the aggressor, now the other, assault and counter-assault; then a pause of a moment or two when they perched apart; then the contest was on again.

"Suddenly a third bird came in like a flash, near enough in size to be taken for another robin. He attacked one of the belligerents; there was a brief but animated struggle, and the newcommer was well started before the onlooker realized that he was a hawk actually carrying off the struggling robin. In a minute they disappeared over the hill, and one springtime quarrel had ended in impressive tragedy. Too busy quarrelling to be aware of an ever-vigilent enemy.

"No need to point the moral."—John Irons.

Prayer.—Our Father, We realize that temptations to strife will come, and without Christ we will strive against one another. Give us Christ today and through life, that we may stand fast together in love and contend only for the faith and His righteousness. We thank Thee for all Thy loving care and forgiveness. Forgive us now and make us whole. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SOMETHING TO DO.

"A doer of the work shall be blessed."—Jas. 1: 25.

Every man's work shall be made manifest."—I. Cor. 3: 13.

Carlyle preached the gospel of work as the panacea for human ills; but he did so with the air of a parent who mixes a disagreeable medicine for a child, insisting on its wholesome effects in order to take the attention from its bad taste.

Work is a law of man's life. We must eat to live and we must work to eat, and he who will not work should not eat. A man's work in his own little world in which he contrives, fashions, invents, improves, thinks, reasons, imagines and toils, until he has brought into creation comething which was not there before. It may be very disagreeable and laborious and irzsome. He may suffer a lot. It may be great punishment, but it is also the secret of his happiness. Liesure is one of the worst of enemies. Those who play no part, have no duties to perform, no functions to fulfill, contribute nothing, have no rational purpose for which to labor, no special use for themselves, no end to serve, and can see no reason why they should not idle if they choose, living merely to do what they like and find easy, fail in manhood and betray humanity.

Prayer.—Our Father, We thank Thee for something to do which must be done. Bring to us daily work, and help us to do it joyfully. Discipline our souls in it that we may know the richer things of life—temperance, self-control, diligence, strength of will, contentment, and all the virtues Thou wouldst have us know. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

EXPERIENCE OUR TEACHER.

"Happy is the man that findeth wisdom."—Prov. 3: 13.

"Therefore, get wisdom."—Prov. 4: 5.

As if every one must get wisdom for himself; and that is true.

George Elliott said: "There is no short cut, no patent tram-road to wisdom. After all the centuries of invention, the soul's path lies through many wildernesses, which must still be trodden in solitude with bleeding feet, with sobs for help, as it was trodden by them of old time."

Prayer.—Our Father, Though the way be rough and thorny, though our hearts are pained, though burdened and distressed, and the way dark and weary; though accompanied with head-

YOUR EDITOR.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

You just don't know how much I enjoyed the Pollyanna game. Especially with the Polly-John I had.

He was a little boy five years old. First he wrote me a pretty picture card. He was waiting for some pictures to develop before he wrote me a letter. He had just had a nice, great, big, birthday Party.

Then he sent me a letter written on some darling little picture paper, telling me about his birthday party, and himself and family. He also sent me two pictures in the letter. One of his birthday and himself, the other of his sister and himself.

I got a box of good candy too. He said it was some of his birthday candy.

We had a good time playing the Pollyanna game together, and I enjoyed it fine.

ALICE RUTH SCHOLZ.

Macon, N. C.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

I want to tell you how nice my Pollyanna was to me.

She wrote me several letters, and in one she sent me some of the drawings that she made in school. Then best of all she sent me a nice box full of shelled, roasted peanuts. Now wasn't that a grand Pollyanna? If you could eat some of the peanuts, I am sure you would give her the prize.

We have all enjoyed the nice game you planned for us.

Grace Tabscott says you taught at Elon and that you are always planning nice things for children.

My Mother, who was Willie Staley, wants to know if you are related to Lela and Clara Moffitt of Asheboro. They are Mrs. Parks and Mrs. Howell now.

Mother reads the "Kiddies' Korner to us and then Patricia and Ben T. read it to themselves. I hope I can read it soon.

I am seven years old.

Love from
REBECCA ANNE HOLDEN.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

I have written two letters to my Pollyanna and sent some of my drawings I did in the second grade, and today I am sending her some roasted peanuts.

I go to school four miles from home on a truck. I am in the fourth grade and have been studying about Virginia Dare and Jamestown in History. I live about 30 miles from Jamestown. I go to Johnson's Grove Church every Sunday to Sunday School. We take the CHRISTIAN SUN and I look at the Kiddies' Korner every week.

From a Kiddie,
LINNIE HITCHCOCK.

Sedley, Va.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

I have written you once, but I did not tell you all about my Pollyanna. My Pollyanna is Rebecca Anne Holden of Louisburg, N. C. I have heard from her four times—a card and three letters. She sent me her picture. I have written to her three times and sent her some of my drawings and a box of parched peanuts.

I have enjoyed the Pollyanna game very much. I think my Pollyanna is a nice little girl.

One of the Kiddies,
LINNIE HANCOCK.

Sedley, Va.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

I feel sure that I have the nicest Pollyanna that there is, for she has written me several letters, sent me her picture, and when she found out about my birthday, she sent me a lovely leathre foot-ball. She has been a charming Pollyanna and I am glad I got her.

My brother and my two sisters liked playing the game too.

Your friend,
JOHN STALEY HOLDEN.

Louisburg, N. C.

My Dear Editor,

I am a kitty twelve years old. I think the Pollyanna game was a very good one. I tried to treat my Pollyanna as nice as I could by sending her a letter and my photograph, a picture of my home town, and a little gift to wear. She treated me nice by giving me a cord to wear around my neck and by sending me a letter. We take the Korner.

Love,
NAOMI SUMNER.

THE SUN—A HELPER.

Billy was up early, and way over in the sky he saw the sun coming up.

His mamma had gone away, and his grandmother had dressed him and given him his breakfast. He had taken a big piece of bread and butter to eat, and walking through the garden.

Billy had never been up so early before, and he thought that the things in the world looked so pretty when they were just waking up.

He stopped to look at a great tall sunflower, and he tried to reach up to it. "Aren't you beautiful?" said Billy. "I never saw you so yellow; and your face is all covered with bright drops of water!"

"Don't you know what makes me pretty and yellow and tall?" said the sunflower. "It is the sunshine, and I always turn my face toward it, to tell it that I love its warm sunbeams," and the sunflower nodded its head back and forth.

"That's right," said Billy, as he walked along with his bread and butter in his hand.

Soon he saw two beautiful butterflies that had stopped to rest on some little, low flowers. "Where did you come from?" said Billy. "Why, you, too, are like the sunshine!"

"Yes," said the butterflies, "that's what we thought when we heard you talking to the sunflower. The sunshine is the nicest thing in all the world; it makes the flowers grow, and we take the honey from the flowers. Our wings are like the sunshine because we fly about in it all day long."

"They are pretty," said Billy, as he strolled along. Just then he came to a little pool in the garden and sat down to rest and eat his bread and butter. He looked down into the clear, sparkling water and saw three little goldfish, just as yellow as could be. "They're hungry," said Billy, and he threw them some crumbs of bread.

"Why, you are just like the sun too," he said. The goldfish swam around and around the pool, saying, as they stopped to eat the bread, "The sun makes us pretty and keeps us warm and makes us happy."

Billy thought, as he watched them, that they were playing a little game, for they swam about so fast, but just then a little green frog hopped up on the edge of the pool. "G-lung, g-lung," it said, "I do not look like the sun."

"Who are you?" said Billy, "and where did you come from?"

"I'm a little green frog, and I just came up here to get warm. I love the sun," said the frog in a low voice, "and I like to sit and watch the goldfish." Then he hopped away.

Soon Billy started back to his grandmother, and all along the garden walk he saw the sunbeams dancing through the leaves on the trees. He hurried to tell his grandmother how pretty the garden was when it was waking up.

"Well," said his grandmother, "it is the sun that brings the light-time and makes the world beautiful, and helps God care for all the things in the world."

aches and tears, show us that Thou dost care, and make us happy in Thee. In it all give us wisdom, and faith, and love, and salvation at last. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE TWO PATHS.

LESSON: John 13: 30; Luke 22: 61-62.

"He (Judas) then having received the sop, went immediately out, and it was night." . . . "And Peter went out, and wept bitterly."

During our Lord's passion, two disciples denied Him; one for material gain, the other for personal safety. One left his Master in the upper room, the other left him in the Judgment room. Both Judas and Peter went out from the presence of Christ traitors to the cause, and yet they are far apart in spiritual condition.

Judas, wilful and set in purpose, went out, with his feet cleansed by Jesus, to run to the secret meeting of the High Priest. Peter, strong in his purpose to protect the cause and reluctant to have One so pure wash his feet, went out to fall, in spite of his purpose. On the surface, both men seem little different, but there is a difference, and it is tremendous. Peter could weep, and Judas could not; both were capable of remorse, but both were not capable of repentance. This is what makes them so far apart in the conclusion. These two attitudes are fundamental in spiritual affairs. Remorse without repentance leads to spiritual tragedy, as it did with Cain. Repentance leads to spiritual recovery and reinstatement, as it did with David and Peter. These two paths in relation to our sins are open to each one of us today.—Rev. A. E. Gregory.

Closing Prayer (by one of the parents) that amid the trials and perils of life, we may be strengthened to faithfully follow in the footsteps of Jesus, knowing that He will never fail to respond to the call of the soul in temptation.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It makes us happy to see our children made happy. It also makes us happy when people remember us in this work and show the children some special favor to make them happy. Some time ago John Robinson Circus showed in Burlington, and our congenial Sheriff of this County was very kind and thoughtful of our larger boys and gave twenty of the largest ones a special invitation to attend, making special arrangements with the show people to let them go in as his special guests free of charge. Of course the invitation was accepted, as all the boys wanted to go and see the wild animals, the pretty show horses and the acrobatic performances. They have all made up their minds to vote for our Sheriff when they reach the age of maturity.

Fifty of the larger boys and girls had another fine treat last week. The United States Navy Band gave a concert in the city of Burlington, and the Kiwanis Club of that city gave fifty of the larger boys and girls a special invitation, with the matrons, the Superintendent and his wife included, to attend the afternoon program as their guests. This invitation was appreciated very much indeed, as the opportunity to hear this noted band only comes to us a few times in life. It certainly was kind of the Kiwanis Club to think of our children and give them this opportunity to hear a concert by this band. They also provided cars to carry the children and bring them back after the concert. Our Burlington people are always thoughtful of our large family and show us many favors, which the children enjoy and for which we are grateful.

Now don't forget!

First. The contractor is calling for money on our new building.

Second. Thanksgiving will soon be here. Will your church raise $100.00 this year, or $1,000.00? Which?

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Revival meetings have been held in the following churches of my charge: Shallow Well, Turner's Chapel, Grace's Chapel, and Poplar Branch. The pastor was assisted in the meetings at Shallow Well and Turner's Chapel by Rev. J. A. Ledbetter; Rev. T. J. Green assisted at Grace's Chapel. Brother Green had served at Grace's Chapel as pastor several years ago, and it was a pleasure to former pastor and people to renew old friendships. Brother Ledbetter came as a stranger to the people, but not to the writer, as in the early days of his ministry he and the writer exchanged services, assisting each other in meetings. It was a pleasure to me to labor with him again in the Master,s cause. While he was with us he won his way into the hearts and lives of the people. These brethren were well received. There were a number of conversions and several additions to the church.

At Poplar Branch, the pastor was assisted by the Men's Evangelistic Club of Sanford and Jonesboro. These brethren rendered good and acceptable service. Rev. H. C. Caviness will assist the pastor in revival services at Sanford, beginning Sunday, November 1. Pray that we may have a successful meeting.

Postoffice Shows Increased Revenue.—

As a result of the higher rates in the present postal law, the postoffice department will show an increase in revenue of approximately $32,000,000 for the next year. Postmaster General Harry S. New is the author of the above statement, which was made during the early part of this week to the Congressional joint sub-committee investigating postage rate revision.

Close Mohammedan Monasteries.—

Mustapha Kemal and his republican regime seem bent on discouraging the tourist trade in Turkey. One of the steps taken in this direction is the closing of all the Mohammedan monasteries, and the turning of about twenty thousand monks and dervishes, out into the world. There appear to be three classes of dervishes, the howlers, the whirlers, and the whisperers. Now that they are to whirl and howl and whisper no more, it is a mystery as to what they will do.

The Government Building Program.—

According to an announcement made early this week, by Representative Martin B. Madden, Republican of Illinois, there will be launched a $150,000,000 public buildings program in the next congress. The announcement was made after conference with President Coolidge and is said to have administration support. The program, as now arranged will include the expenditure of $25,000,000 annually for six years for the erection of new government buildings. This work will be under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Pastors Guests at White House.—

When Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the Congregational Church, of which the President is a member, called on his congregation to open their homes to the visitors at the meeting of the Congregational National Council, President and Mrs. Coolidge refused to be left out. As a consequence, seven pastors, two of them with their wives, were for a week guests at the White House. Among those to be so honored was Dr. Irving Maurer, now president of Beloit College, but at one time pastor of the Northampton church which the Coolidges attended.

Presidents and Bishops Agree.—

It is a rather unique thing that on the same day the Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church and President Coolidge said approximately the same thing. They both attributed the widespread crime wave to the lack of parental control. They find in religion the only safeguard against growing lawlessness. In this view Chief Enright of the New York police force concurs. All these authorities lay the blame upon parents, and upon the breaking down of the home, which is the basic institution of the nation. Parents cannot turn over their responsibility to juvenile courst. An examination of criminals shows that most of them are the product of homes not calculated to turn out children capable of being other than what they are, a menace to society.

Catholics to Begin Rural Work.—

Out of twenty thousand Catholic priests in this country, less than two thousand are at work in the country. The Catholic Rural Life Conference has, however, just announced that an intensive rural development is to begin at once. Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Texas, Indiana, Alabama, and Illinois have been selected as good fields in which to begin, and the whole South is looked upon as a ripe field. A special department of this work is to be introduced into Notre Dame University, and other seminaries for the training of priests for this work are to be established. Previously the work of the Catholic church has been done in the congested portions of cities, and this is a new venture. It is a development which may come as a shock to many Southerners.

Unique in the College World.—

Within the past few years college enrollment has tremendously increased in the United States. Social standards are demanding a college course for every boy and girl who wishes to get on in the world, and yet the enlarging enrollments of the colleges are destroying their individuality. A number of them, like Princeton, Amherst, Smith, and others are guarding their gates and pondering the matter. Jomes A. Blaizdell, president of Pomona College at Claremont, Calif., comes forward with a unique suggestion in American education. He proposes to found a university based on the plans of Oxford and Cambridge. Such an arrangement would centralize the library, the museum, the athletic machine, the administration, and yet have separate colleges, having their own endowment, their own student bodies, their own individuality. The schools as we have them in the universities at present do not do that. The faculties would be separate in these small colleges in the same university. The plan of President Blaizdell is one meriting attention from educators, and one which will save the essential character of the small college.

To Preserve Hayes Home.—

Spiegal Grove, the home of President Rutherford B. Hayes, has been turned over to the State of Ohio by his son, and is to be preserved. Of the twenty-nine presidents which the United States has had, the houses of only a few have been preserved, including that of Washington at Mount Vernon, Jefferson at Monticello, Madison at Montpelier, and the modest home of Lincoln at Springfield, Ill. All of these were secured after a long interval, and many of the historic momentos had disappeared. In the case of the Hayes home it was turned over intact by his second son, Col. Webb C. Hayes. Plans have been laid to form a Hayes Historical Society in Ohio. This would be fitting, since President Hayes was a man of scholarly tastes. There was a time when his collection of books was not exceeded by any private person in the nation. He was interested in colleges and in history, and methodically kept memoranda and papers. None of our Presidents except Jefferson and Roosevelt left so much as did President Hayes. His letters and diary are now in process of publication by the State of Ohio. In discussing the Presidents whom he had known, Cardinal Gibbons said shortly before his death that he had known all of them intimately since Lincoln, and he believed that President Hayes was the most learned and cultured of them all. In view of these things, Ohio is doing a fitting thing.

The Latest Balkan War.—

A little war has broken out on the boundry line between Greece and Bulgaria. On October 19th, so Greece asserts, Greek soldiers were killed by Bulgarian troops. Bulgaria disavows all guilt in the matter. The incident amounted to this, that Greece, without appeal to the League of Nations, mobilized artillery, infantry, and air forces on the Bulgarian border, bombarded the town of Petrich, burned villages, and filled the roads with refugees. The League Council acted promptly, and demanded that within sixty hours all troops on both sides should be withdrawn. The thing which lent force to the League's demand was the threatening attitude of England and France, which goes to prove that the League is entirely dependent upon the domination of great powers. The League did not prevent the war, as it did not prevent the Corfu incident in 1923, when Italy having been duly provoked by Greece took the island of Corfu, and not only did the League not stop the war before it began, but it stopped it finally because of the threat of force from great powers. There are those who argue that had Greece not been a member of the League, she would never have acted as she did, because she would have subjected herself to a united Balkan army. As matters were there was a chance to strike a savage blow, and then to retire. It is needful still to stop force with force, and will be until the school and the church accept the challenge, and teach men the better and finer way of peace.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Your best is all that God requires of you. Do it with a will.

"Let thy discontents be thy secrets," said that wise man, Benjamin Franklin. Discontents have only one use: to urge us on to better things, for ourselves and for others.

Dr. W. T. Walters, who is now acting as field secretary of Elon College, in a letter to the managing editor says: "My work is starting off very well. I hope everything goes well with you."

Rev. A. R. Flowers closed a series of lectures at Pineville, N. C., on November 1st. He was there in answer to an invitation extended by four denominations. W. T. Stoncell, who sends us this news, says his work was a real success.

The women in all our Southern Conferences are organized into an annual conference, save those of our Georgia and Alabama Conference, and it is devoutly hoped that this conference will organize the present year. The women's conferences, held separately this year, were all largely attended and had wonderful sessions. Now watch these conferences grow.

President Harper's sketch of, and tribute to Theodore Presser, in this issue of THE SUN will not only be read with deep concern by music lovers, but by all who admire those stirring virtues which enter into the making of a real man. Moreover, our whole country, as well as our music lovers, is poorer for the untimely going away of that fine, musical soul, Theodore Presser.

Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., writing under date of October 26th, from Franklinton, N. C., says: "I closed my work here as pastor yesterday. Preached three times and baptized five persons. Mrs. Long is aiding me in packing up today. We expect to leave Franklinton this week." So far as we know, the pastorate vacated by Dr. Long has not yet located a pastor other than Mt. Auburn Church, which has secured Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C.

At 7:30 o'clock on the evening of October 31st, Mr. Wilbert Iseley and Miss Edna Sharp were united in marriage, at the home of the bride's Aunt, Mrs. D. F. Clapp, in the presence of a few friends and relations. Rev T. J. Green performed the ceremony. These young people are very popular in their home community, Hines' Chapel, and we join with their pastor and many friends in wishing for them a 'bon voyage' on the matrimonial sea.

The following is received: "Mrs Sadie Atkinson Jones announces the marriage of her daughter, Lottie Leigh, to Mr. Arthur Albion Ledbetter, on Monday, October 26, 1925, Greensboro, N. C." The marriage was solemnized at the Christian parsonage, Greensboro, Dr. C. H. Rowland and THE SUN'S Editor officiating. These dear ones have our best wishes for a happy married life. They will reside at 21 Crescent Ave., Charlotte, N. C., where the groom holds a very responsible position.

We quote the following from the Burlington News: "The Young People's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church met yesterday evening at the home of Mrs. Wade Huffman, Elon Road, with Mrs. Huffman assisted by Miss Nonie Moore as hostess. After the business session Mrs. G. O. Lankford gave the mission study book. There were twenty-six members present. During the social hour, Mrs. Huffman and Miss Moore served delicious salad, assorted sandwiches and tea."

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Pritchette of Elon College announce the marriage of their daughters, Miss Myrtle Linsay to Mr. Stamey Branson Ridge, and Miss Lou Eva to Mr. C. J. Bates, at their home at Elon College, N. C., October 28, 1925. Mr. and Mrs. Ridge will live at Highland Ave., Glenwood, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Bates at Bryson City, N. C. Dr. J. U. Newman of Elon College officiated at the double marriage. Our best wishes and heartiest congratulations are extended.

The Winchester (Virginia) Church issued a very neat and attractive card at the proper time carrying this announcement: "Sunday services, November 1, 1925. First Christian Church, Rev. V. T. Crawford, pastor. Morning Topic, 11 o-'clock, 'Christian Education.' Communion services at close of the morning service. At the evening service Rev. Mr. Crawford will bring a special message on 'The Second Coming of Christ.' Sunday School, 9:45 a. m.; Chrictian Endeavor, 6:45 p. m. You are cordially invited to attend all services of the church."

Rev. R. L. Williamson sends us the following: "On October 25th, I united in marriage Mr. Datus E. Thomas and Miss Alma Wicker. They are young people of fine Christian character. Mr. Thomas is one of the most active of the younger members of Shallow Well Church. Mrs. Thomas is a member of the M. E. Church, a young person of recognized influence in the spiritual life of her church and community. The writer joins their many friends in wishing for them God's richest blessings during their journey of life." And THE SUN adds its amen.

Yesterday was Armistice Day. There was much blowing of trumphets and beating of drums. And well might there be, for it was in commemoration of the cessation of the shedding of much blood in unholy war. It was a time of rejoicing, and yet a time of sorrow; it was a day for which we should all thank God, and yet a day that all Christians should pray earnestly that there will never be cause for duplicating. When will the Christian Church rise in its might and declare a ban on the unholy things of the world? When will it declare that there shall be "no more war," and therefore no need for Armistice Days?

Our distinguished friend, Hon. J. E. West, Suffolk, Va., was on Tuesday, November 3d, re-elected Lieutenant Governor of Virginia with an enormous majority over his opponent. He has served most acceptably to the citizens of his State in this high office the past years, and has already made for himeslf a most enviable record as Senator from his district, having served in this capacity for several terms. The Lieutenant Governor should be made Governor four years hence, and here is hoping and predicting that he will be. His broad statesmanship, his patriotism, his public service and his talents entitle him to this high office.

Mrs. O. H. Orr, Lineville, Ala., treasurer of the Alabama Woman's Board, writing about the first separate session of the Woman's Conference, at Wadley, Saturday, October 17th, says: "I feel like it was a great day for us women of the Alabama Conference and the beginning of a great work. I am so anxious now to get our work started for the new year so we will be sure to reach our goal. I know God is going to help us in our effort in trying to do something for His cause and Kingdom." The interest among the women of our Alabama Conference is certainly growing and means much not only for this conference, but for the work of Missions.

The following letter has been turned over to THE SUN by Brother Chas. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College. It shows a Christian spirit that might well be emulated by others:

"My dear Brother—and I feel like you ought to be called "father," for you have been such a good one to the dear little orphans: I haven't much to give, but I can't read the appealing letters you write in my paper, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, without dividing my little with the dear little orphan children. I see so many places where I could and want to help if only I had the money. I could use any amount of it to a good advantage. Enclosed you will find $5.00 to help buy their winter clothes.

"With love and best wishes for them all,
"MAMIE ALPHIN."

"On October 28th, I went from Timber Ridge, where I was then holding a meeting, to Winchester, Va., where according to previous arrangement, I met Mr. Harold N. Black and Miss Laura E. Estep, and united them in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed at the home of Brother and Sister E. W. Cather, members of the Winchester Church. The happy couple are from the neighborhood of New Hope Church, near Harrisonburg, and are very popular and most highly respected in their community. Their many friends unite in wishing them a long and happy married life." Brother A. W. Andes, who sent in this notice is always busy. He is one of our hardest working preachers. But Brother Andes, just take a little time once in a while to let us and our readers know just what you are doing.

Won't some others follow the good example of Sister Harriet E. Corley, who sends in the following from Havre de Grace, Md., under date of November 8th. We are sure the readers of THE SUN are glad to read of the work of the Webster Church, and would also be glad to know what other churches are doing.

"Rev Milton W. Sutcliffe and Mr. P. M. Spencer, of the Webster Community Church, returned here from attending the Eastern Virginia Conference at Franklin, Va., much benefited with having been at the conference and delighted with the Southern hospitality which they received. The Webster Community Christian Church being a new church, and the first Christian Church in Maryland, this was the first conference in which our church has been represented, and we are happy over the fact that the conference will meet at our church next year. We are planning to hold our regular bazaar and supper this week. We are in hopes we can fully establish the Budget System in our church and that this will be our last bazaar we will have to hold, but we will continue our church suppers.

"On account of the bad weather, we had to postpone our Hallowe'en Social, which we held this past week. It was an old time masked social and was enjoyed by all. We will hold our Harvest Home on Thanksgiving Day, when we will have special services.

"Mr. Sutcliffe has given us four wonderful sermons on prayer, all from the same text, Luke 11:1."

REVIVAL BURDEN.

One of the menacing indications of the present time is the great lack of revival burden. Not many are found "weeping between the porch and the altar," and for the lack of this revival burden many altars are barren and many revivals lack fruitage, or at least the fruitage they should have. There is too much given to the social side of our church gatherings. To be true, sometimes we lack on the social side, and allow folks to pass us without giving them a good handshake, or even any sort of greeting; sometimes allowing strangers to go and come without giving them a welcome. But in a revival not much of the social side is needed.

We fully believe this is the day when the devil is making his last grand stand, and one of the very effective ways he has of nullifying the work of the Gospel is to get some of us to compromise the truth and others to go to sleep on the job. Our children and loved ones and neighbors are unsaved, and we feel like they need to be spoken to to come to Christ, but we would rather someone else would speak to them, and we let them go on and be lost. We feel like giving the following instance just here, picked up in one of our exchanges, from a popular New England clergyman. It relates to the death of a young lady:

"As he entered the house, he met the minister in charge of the mission church, and asked him, 'Was Mary a Christian?' To his surprise, a pained look came into the young man's face as he replied: 'Three weeks ago, I had a strong impulse to speak to her, but I did not; and I do not know.' A moment later he met the girl's Sunday School teacher, and asked the same question. Quickly the tears came, as she said, 'Two weeks ago, Doctor, a voice said to me, "Speak to Mary," and I know what it meant, and I intended to, but did not; and I do not know.' Deeply moved by these unexpected answers, a few minutes later he met the girl's mother, and thinking doubtless to give her an opportunity to speak a word that would bring comfort to her own heart, he said quietly, 'Mary was a Christian girl?' The tears came quick and hot to the mother's eyes as she sobbed out, 'One week ago a voice came to me saying, "Speak to Mary," and I thought of it, and did not at that time, and I do not know.' "

There the writer adds these very sad words: "How pathetic beyond expression that the Spirit tried to get the use of the lips of three persons, a pastor, a teacher, aye, a mother, to speak the word that evidently He longed to have spoken to her, and He could not."

Men with no burden! Men of no care! Souls can be lost or get saved as they choose, it makes little difference with us! Dry eyes and drier hearts! Men all about us uttering the pitiful words of the Psalmist, "No man cared for my soul." The Master weeps alone in the garden, and alone He starts with His cross to Golgotha's gory hill. He's looking now for someone to go along with Him, to enter into holy partnership with Him in the salvation of the lost, to be "laborers together with God." He carries the greater part of the burden, He carries the greater amount of care and responsibility, but He is anxiously waiting for someone whom He may use as a channel of blessing to reach and bless some lost one. Shall it be you?—King's Highway.

HOW MODERN HEBREWS GIVE.

In connection with the Stewardship program which the Christian Church is putting on during this month and December, the question might arise as to the application of the Bible application of it to modern times. It might be interesting also to know the attitude that the modern Jew is taking on the subject of giving. An exchange throws the following interesting light on the question:

"In a single meeting in the interest of the great Hebrew University on the hills near Jerusalem, in Palestine, more than a million dollars was thrown upon the platform by the enthusiastic Zionists! At a dinner, called for the great Orthodox Seminary, West Side, New York City, which will cover three city blocks, attended by just 1,200 persons, each plate cost one thousand dollars. A million and a quarter was thus raised toward the five million now needed for it. This for Orthodox Jews, New York City.

"For the Palestine Colonizing Fund last year nearly two million dollars came in, the fund now having reached seven million and a half dollars.

"Another project is the Hebrew Teachers' College, in Palestine, distinct entirely from the university. This aims to supply Hebrew teachers not only for Palestine, but advanced teachers for the world! 'In the United States already,' says the American-Hebrew Magazine, 'there are fifty of its graduates teaching in their elementary schools and other Hebrew institutions.' For this teachers' college, its principal, Dr. David Yellin, is seeking $150,000 new fund. Julius Rosenwald, head of Sears, Roebuck & Co., gives $50,000. Mr. Rosenwald has given sums of $25,000 at a time for colored Young Men's Christian Associations in many places in the South. Still another project is the raising of $15,000,000 for the Jews of Russia! Mr. Rosenwald gives one million to this fund.

"All this means a mighty revival of Judaism, both of the Orthodox and the Liberals, more especially of the Orthodox Jews, those fartherest from the thought of accepting Christianity. Meanwhile, the great Protestant Churches are doing next to nothing to win Israel to Christ.

"What does it all portend? We know the Lord Jehovah will not forget His ancient pledge; we see Him thus wonderfully working among them now, and Jesus does not weep over Jerusalem in vain! We believe it means the call by the Lord directly of another Paul from among the Hebrews themselves who will lead them on to Christ! Shall we not pray for it? Look for it, be ready to open all doors for them, love God's Israel day and night; personally labor to save all we can."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WHAT WILL THE MEN DO ABOUT IT?

The activity of the women in the churches has certainly forced an issue for the men. The denominations are everywhere and on all sides inquiring, "What are the men going to do about it?"

The issue is this: For some years now, women's missionary societies in the churches have been reading and studying books on Missions. Now it turns out that these books on missions have to do almost solely with international and inter-racial relationships. And no question now looms quite so large on the horizon of our interest as this of relationships between the different classes and groups of peoples on the earth. Lack of knowledge of that question brought about the World War. Writers are now declaring that the women know more about world conditions and the relationship of the races to one another than the men do. Take this quotation from a current November magazine:

"The men in our church felt that the women had more of the Christian international outlook than they. For many years the women had held classes for mission study. They knew more about both the commercial and the Christian resources and needs of the world than business men did. How then change the situation for the men and remove the 'inferiority complex'? That was the problem."

Now, why do the women know more about such questions, such vital and essential questions, than the men? Because they have been and are now studying them in the most systematic manner and from the very best authorities—namely, in their mission study books.

And there is far more in this than appears on the surface. If Missions is the one big business of the Church, and all right thinking Christians know that it is, why is the major part of that business left to the women?

"It has been said that in our churches," declares a recent writer, "we have missionary education brought on in children's Misses' and ladies' sizes, but that the men have been sadly neglected." And this to the everlasting hurt of not only the men, but of the Church and its one great work in the world.

If concrete example is needed, consider this. The women of the missionary societies in the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference met recently in annual session for one day only. The collector showed that during the year closing, her societies had contributed something over $6,000 to mission work undertaken by the Societies of their conference. Two weeks later the general conference comprising all the churches thereof, met in annual session, and their collectors showed barely $2,000 more collected during the year closing for all church purposes, benevolent, educational, missionary, and all the rest than had been given by the Women's Societies of the conference.

Anothe example: The women of the North Carolina Conference met in Greensboro in a day's annual session recently. The collector reported nearly $4,000 collected and given to mission the past year. It is exceedingyl doubtful if the general conference, made up of all the men, women, boys and girls, of all the churches thereof will show an offering for Kingdom service the past year much in excess of that amount.

Something is wrong somewhere. And anyone who even casually inquires may learn what it it is. The women are learning even faster and better than the men the meaning and significance of our Lord's last command. And they are profiting by it.

The Presbyterian Church, the Disciples Church, the Methodist Church, and other wide awake communions, are making serious inquiry about the matter and are asking "What are the men going to do about it?"

Elsewhere in THE SUN this week, under the topic, "Removing the Masculine Inferiority Complex," is told plainly what one Presbyterian Church has done about it. What will the men of our Christian congregations do about it?

THE NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S CONFERENCE.

Many are the reports, and most favorable ones, which come of the great meeting that the women of the North Carolina Conference held in Greensboro in their annual session, October 30th. Because of duties that bound him elsewhere, THE SUN'S Editor was not permitted to be present, but he has talked with several who did attend, and they all agree that it was by all odds "the best yet meeting" of this growing organization. Our Greensboro First Church was filled to capacity, and the good women of the church had to enlarge and lengthen their dinner tables when the hour for the repast arrived. One correspondent, writing, says: "To me it was an inspiring occasion," and this seems to be the verdict from all who attended.

Of course, Dr. Rowland and his good wife and the women of Greensboro, acted the part of most amiable hosts, and visitors sang the praise of the preparations made for their comfort. Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, of Raleigh, N. C., who is the embodiment of tireless energy for the conference, is president, and has given unlimited time to the work among the churches the past year. She has been most ably and efficiently assisted by Miss Gertrude Brown, the secretary of the Southern Board. These workers were naturally much gratified over the results of their efforts the past organized in the conference during the year, and year. Eight new Woman's Societies have been six of these were represented with good delegations, and all brought in fine programs of work they hope to do this year. Eight Young People's Societies have also been organized and four of these were represented by those who brought much enthusiasm to the conference.

Mrs. Vaughan, in writing of the conference, says: "One Society, organized about three months ago, with eleven members now has twenty-seven, and they are delighted with their efforts. To me, these new societies and the splendid number of them that attended our meeting was the outstanding feature of the day. It even over-shadowed my joy of our going over the top, and with some to spare, with our financial goal; first time, too, we have ever accomplished this. It was a great day, and you do not know how much we missed you and how sorry we were not to have you there to rejoice with us.

"We had more churches represented than ever before, and more ministers present. I do not know the exact number of delegates, but I do know the church was full. The program was interesting, Mr. Sorrell and Dr. Denison, especially. Mrs. Sellars must have been very effective in her talk on the study book, 'Prayer and Missions,' for Miss Browne sold everyone of the fifty copies she had on her literature table. That's a mighty good omen, I think, for a fine year's work. I feel sure we have a right to be very proud of our efforts this year. Sixteen new societies and a number of new Cradle Roll organizations is a right constructive piece of work, I think."

And the SUN'S readers, everywhere, will agree. The financial goal was $3,600.00, which was more than reached, and the conference voted to increase the goal next year by more than ten per cent. Our women are certainly showing us men and boys how to go about Missionary work—the real work of the Church. J. O. A.

OUR SCHOOL AT ROCKY FORD.

Many SUN readers will be delighted to learn that our church and school building at Rocky Ford is sufficiently completed to be now in actual use. Miss Elsie Bray, one of our good and devoted Christian workers of Liberty Church, Nathalie, Va., is teaching in one room of the new building at Rocky Ford. Under date of November 4th, she writes:

"We are getting on very well, I think, considering conditions. The people where we board are very kind, and in fact all the people here seem to be. The children in school are as good as, if not the best, in behavior, I have ever taught. We re-organized our Sunday School recently, and now that we can use the new building we have a good attendance. The people are deeply interested and eager and appreciating so much their church building and school house. We had preaching services in the new building for the first time last Sunday night. I feel that God's spirit is directing and guiding us and it seems to me His presence is nearer than it has ever seemed at other places. I only hope that I may be a help to the people and the children here, for I enjoy the work, even if we do have to work under hinderances and handicaps. The weather here is very cold for the time of year.

"I have thirty-seven pupils enrolled, and there are others who wish to come in. Please send us the desks and seats for the room, as so far we have had to work without any school-room furniture or equipment.

""I have not learned to climb the mountains very well yet, but have visited some homes, and

Oh, how my heart yearned to bring some help to some of the homes in particular which I visited, for they need and they deserve all the assistance, physical, mental, and spiritual, that we can bring."

It will be interesting to SUN readers also to know that the order for desks and equipment for the school-room was placed on November 5th, with the promise of speedy delivery. I wonder what many of our school teachers would do in trying to teach thirty-seven pupils in a room without a desk, blackboard, chalk or table, and with only improvised seats for teacher and pupils to sit on through the whole day? But our young people and many other friends are coming to the rescue, and we are hoping as soon as this room is comfortably equipped we shall be able to provide seats for the main auditorium and then equipment for the second school room. We have in the building a real auditorium for church services which will seat 150 easily, and two nice rooms for day school on either side of the main auditorium, both of which can be readily opened up to the main auditorium for services when demanded. We have not yet secured the pledge or promise from any individual or Society to furnish the pews for the auditorium or the desks for the second school room, but we indulge in the hope and pray that this may be forthcoming. We have a beautiful building and one in which we have a right to indulge a most pardonable pride. J. O. A.

THE PROGRESS OF PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

By R. A. HAYNES,
Federal Prohibition Commissioner.

[An address before the National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League, Chicago, Ill., November 6, 1925.]

It is not uncommon to hear people speak of "Prohibition Enforcement Machinery," and to think of the progress of prohibition enforcement in terms of mechanical contrivances, which are propelled by certain motive power, and which must be able to overcome obstacles, and whose speed is determined by proper co-ordination and synchronization of its various parts. I grant that these tangible and material elements perhaps attract too much of our time and attention, for, in the final analysis, as somebody has fittingly said, "Prohibition in America is a great Adventure of Faith and is spiritual in its essence." I wish to speak of that concept briefly a bit later, but if I do what I believe you want me to do in this address on "The Progress of Prohibition Enforcement," it will be necessary for me to deal some with statistics and with administrative facts, really resembling parts of a great machine.

Progress is a relative term. In order to correctly measure progress, it is necessary to first determine the exact starting point. One can no more measure the progress or adequacy of the Prohibition Enforcement machinery by considering a particular Unit or Branch of the Federal Government, than one can correctly estimate the capability of an automobile to make progress, and measure the progress made thereby, by the single consideration of its steering gear, its gear shift, its tires, or any other one of its multitude of parts. When these various parts are properly assembled, co-ordinated and synchronized, maximum speed may be expected, but, if something is wrong with the transmission, or with the steering device, or with the ball bearings, progress is at least reduced, if not altogether stopped. Then, too, in determining whether or not such a machine is making satisfactory progress, all of these factors may be properly adjusted, but if the roadway over which it is necessary for it to travel to reach its objective, is cluttered with opposing rocks, and filled with gloomy swarmps, and hindering ruts, the progress is necessarily impeded. You get the picture, I am sure.

In the Prohibition Enforcement machinery, there are many separate agencies which must be properly co-ordinated, if the machine is to be made capable of doing its best. * * *

In a social experiment so radical and made amid post-war conditions so complex, the problem of prohibition enforcement has been made more difficult by early predictions by those on both sides of the issue. At the very outset, the wet prophets drew a gloomy picture of business upset, men out of employment, bankruptcy, and increased taxation. Not a line of that prophecy has been fulfilled; business went calmly on, growing apace. Men employed by the liquor business slipped easily into profitable ligitimate fields. Property used by the liquor business was rented for legitimate purposes at higher rents.

On the other hand, our friendly prophets felt that with the Eighteenth Amendment as a magic wand, the transition from the disastrous conditions incident to the liquor trafic, would be almost instantaneous, and improvement would be 100 per cent perfect. Even the more reasonable and conservative of the proponent group failed to recognize the immensity of the task, that it is an evolutionary process, and that the time element is a vital factor. They failed to fully realize that altogether without precedent, a new organization had to be set up to make operative and effective the new program, and that human agencies were the only available agencies to use for this work. * * *

As I said, in measuring progress, the beginnings are of prime importance. * * * Not many more than one hundred years ago, the public began to question the propriety of the clergy, whenever they had a conference, getting drunk. we have progressed rather far from that period. One of the early Temperance Societies required of its members that they should pledge themselves not to get drunk, except on Muster days; that is, they should get drunk only six or seven times a year. Next, similar societies took another step forward, and members were pledged to drink only wine or beer. Then came the limitation of the liquor trafic by law. License terms were made more rigid; closing hours were advocated, and then required. Then several States, more than sixty years ago, adopted Prohibition. * * * People laughed when told first that the great West, and then the great South were going dry, but they did. People laughed when told that National Prohibition was proposed, but it came by overwhelming adoption. Some started laughing when it was stated that it would be enforced, but today with enforcement only a few years old, it has been so successful that it is the chief subject of conversation and occupies the front page of even the opposition press all over the country.

A law that is a dead letter challenges no opposition from its foes. A feeble enforcement develops feeble opposition. Action is still equal to reaction, and in the opposite direction. The effectiveness of Prohibition Enforcement can be measured by the trend of effort to repeal or to denature the law. You can tell how tightly the shoe pinches by the loudness of the yell.

Are we making progress? Of course, we are making progress. Entirely too much progress to suit the opposition; but now, as has been true in all stages during the history of this movement, there are those who are made timorous by clever propaganda; those who shrug their shoulders, and those who laugh and say, "It will never be." Men in every campaign for Righteousness are at times discouraged by apparent lulls, which may be but incidents; but the real fighter struggles on and on, propelled by Faith in the Right, and in this epochal contest against the liquor evil, let us remember that this Governmental policy is but begun here in America, for it is coming to the World, and he is indeed blind who does not see in the struggle the great spiritual impulses whose progress is not stated by figures, and years, and tabulations, but by the benefits accruing to the great masses of the people in their home life, social and moral betterment, and economic advances.

Prohibition was inevitable in the life of a Nation, the preamble of whose Constitution declares that one of the purposes of that instrument is to promote the general welfare of the people. America merely announced to the World that habit-forming alcohol was interfering with the development of the social, economic, and moral life of the people, and therefore is taboo.

So the Eighteenth Amendment inaugurated a new Federal policy in dealing with the liquor traffic. It placed an equal responsibility upon the State and the Federal Government to enforce it. It has required considerable time to properly inculcate this policy, and the lesson is not yet well learned.

The Act authorized the adoption of regulations to carry out the purpose of the Amendment. Two aspects were presented: It was necessary not only to build up an organization for the detection and prosecution of those who sold liquor for beverage purposes, but also to devise a system for the control of non-beverage liquors which are still legitimate under the Eighteenth Amendment. The permit system, which has been created to deal with this phase, has withuot question been improved each succeeding year. * * *

In controlling the first big source of supply, the Government has been particularly successful.

When the National Prohibition Act went into effect, approximately 50,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits were in bonded warehouses throughcut the United States. It was scattered over the country in over 300 warehouses. Many of the buildings were insecure, and considerable quantities disappeared through fake thefts. Through concentration legislation, the 25,000,000 of the remaining 30,000,000 gallons are now in about thirty concentrated warehouses. The other 5,000,000 gallons in abcut twenty warehouses, have not yet been transferred, but soon will be. This program has resulted in greater security and has materially reduced the diversion of liquor from these original stocks. The permit system has been so improved that forgeries resulting in large diversions during the first year and one-half of the law's operation, have been practically eliminated.

Distinct progress has been made in the control of alcoholic preparations unfit for beverage purposes * * * and * * * regulations were adopted which provided that the transactions in liquor by a wholesale druggist could not be more than ten per cent of the entire business.

Another regulation prohibiting inter-State transportation by truck has had an important bearing on better control of bonded liquor. The degree of control is shown in the fact that in the fiscal year 1921, 8,671,860.4 gallons were withdrawn, while in the last year only 1,923,537.1 were withdrawn.

Distinct progress has been made in the matter also of exportation and importation—practically all applications for the importation of wine for sometime have been rejected, and also the exportation of whiskey ostensibly for non-beverage purposes, until only a small per cent of the total applications have been granted this past year.

Since the Coast Guard service has been better equipped to prevent smuggling, that source of supply has been so restricted that the one remaining chief source, namely, the alcohol source, from which synthetic whiskey is made, is the present outstanding problem.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The 105th Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference was held in the Franklin Christian Church, October 27-29, 1925. The weather was ideal, the attendance was large, and the work of the conference was fine, and the result among the churches for the year was encouraging. A hundred delegates, a hundred visitors, and more than two hundred local people made an interesting group of Christian men and women. Nearly all churches came up to conference with checks to cover apportionments in full for the year, having paid, also, salaries of pastors in full.

President W. A. Harper and wife, Managing Editor, Prof. P. J. Kernodle, and Secretary of the Mission Board, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and Chas. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, were among the out-of-conference visitors who helped to make the session worth while.

The outstanding addresses were delivered by President W. D. Harward, L. E. Smith, W. H. Denison, and J. O. Atkinson. Rev. J. F. Morgan gave three fine doctrinal lessons on, "Jesus, Our Sacrifice," "Jesus, Our Advocate," and "Jesus, Our Coming King." After Dr. Denison's stirring address on "Placing the Emphasis of Life," on Tuesday night, a "Stewardship Pageant" was given by five young ladies from the First Church, Norfolk; and they had been trained by Mrs. M. L. Bryant.

Rev. Dr. W. D. Parry, at his own request, was granted a letter of transfer to unite with the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference; and Rev. T. Fred Wright was granted a letter of transfer to unite with the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference.

Rev. J. F. Morgan was received into the Conference, on a letter of transfer from the Valley of Virginia Central Christian Conference; and Rev. Dr. C. C. Ryan was received by letter from the Sanduskey Annual Conference of the United Brethren Church.

Floyd D. Ballard, a Senior in Elon College, was, upon the recommendation of the Educational Committee, licensed to preach the Gospel.

The Total collection sent up to the conference was more than $8,000.00, and an order was made to forward to W. C. Wicker, Treasurer of the Southern Christian Convention, the following sums:

Foreign Missions	$1,575.00
Elon College Fund	1,575.00
Convention Missions	1,180.00
Convention Fund	790.00
Superannuated Fund	390.00
Total	$5,510.00

It was also ordered that $250.00 be paid to C. H. Stephenson, Treasurer of the Board of Religious Education.

The hospitality of the Franklin Church was expressed in bountiful dinners and suppers in the church and real welcome and comfort in the homes at night. Pastor Lester was at the head of the list of all that was done to make the conference a success.

Sam Davis, Paul Whitehearst, and Mrs. Parry, added to the church choir, in piano, violin and organ music; Revs. Morgan, Poythress, Johnson, and Lightbourne added the preachers' quartet; and all were uplifting to the audience.

All of the reports received careful consideration, and the conference was one of the best in its more than a century of history. Five churches invited the conference for next year, but the final and unanimous vote was for Webster Christian Church, Havre de Grace, Maryland, Rev. M. W. Sutcliffe, pastor. This is a new $50,000 growing church, and not so far away from the People's Church of which Rev. Dr. R. C. Helfenstein is pastor.

The present officers were re-elected: W. D. Harward, president N. G. Newman, vice-president; I. W. Johnson, secretary; H. S. Hardcastle, assistant secretary, and H. Woodward, treasurer.

Conference closed Thursday afternoon with real satisfaction in what had been accomplished.

ELON LETTER.

Theodore Presser died October 28, 1925, in his beloved city of Philadelphia. He was born on July 3, 1848, in Pittsburgh of the same State. He was educated in Mt. Union (Ohio) College, the New England Conservatory, and the Leipzig Conservatory. He taught music in the Ohio Northern University, in Smith College and Conservatory, in Ohio Wesleyan University, and in Hollins College, for a period of fourteen years.

While Professor in Hollins, in 1883, he founded The Etude, publishing it that year in Lynchburg, Va., but in 1884 he gave up teaching and removed to Philadelphia. Here he founded the Theo. Presser Music Co., one of the best known music firms in the world. He continued to edit The Etude till 1891.

In 1914 Mr. Presser fuonded The Presser Home for Retired Music Teachers and in 1916 The Presser Foundation for the assistance of those in preparation as teachers of music, as well as for the assistance of musicians in distress, and the aiding of colleges teaching music by the erection of music buildings and in other ways. This year three hundred and fifty scholarships of $250 each have been granted by the Foundation. It was characteristic of the man not to allow any publicity in connection with these scholarships. By his will practically all of his estate, amounting to more than $3,000,000, besides what he had already donated to his Home for Retired Music Teachers and his Foundation, went to the Presser Foundation. The music teachers and colleges teaching music had enabled him to make his fortune, and such was his sense of fitness that he left it in such a way as to react for their continued good and advancement.

Mr. Presser's activities were numerous, too, in other directions for the advancement of the musical culture of the nation. He founded the Music Teachers' National Association in 1876. He also founded and was at the time of his death the honorary president of the Philadelphia Music Teachers' Association. He wrote numerous piano pieces and educational studies and several widely known text books for piano. But it was as the publisher of music and of The Etude that he rendered his greatest service to the musical culture of our nation. The Theo. Presser Music Co. has three hundred and fifty employees, and its building is the mecca of teachers and artists for Philadelphia and the entire country.

Mr. Presser was in the truest sense a gentleman. He had the refinement of manner that graces the most beautiful womanhood and combined it with the dignity of true manhood. There was about him an atmosphere that irradiated culture, the culture of soul and not a misnamed veneer. He breathed the very soul of music. And so he had to be a devout Christian. His private office in the Theo. Presser Music Company's building was never without its Bible, which lay convenient to his hand. The latest edition there was a massive family Bible with large print, and gave evidence of constant use. He loved the church (he was a Presbyterian) with a passionate devotion and exemplified in his conduct privately and in his business relations always the spirit that animated his Master in His life among men. The removal of such a man as Mr. Presser, leaves a void that it will require many years to bridge. Those closest to him feel this most keenly and none more so than Mr. James Francis Cooke, who for many years has so ably edited The Etude, and now succeeds Mr. Presser as president of the Theo. Presser Music Co. and of the Presser Foundation. Dr. John L. Haney, president of the Central High School of Philadelphia, too, was a close personal friend of Mr. Presser, and is a trustee of the Presser Foundation and chairman of one of its important committees.

Mr. Presser, with these two associates of his life and work and aspirations, visited Elon in December, 1924. They were much impressed with the College and its plans, particularly its Whitley Building, where the teaching of music is so admirably provided for. When Mr. Presser entered the audience room of this building, his artistic appreciation voiced its approval in an exclamation of delight. "What a beautiful concert hall!" he exclaimed. "I have seen none that can surpass it and few that can equal it!" He was also deeply impressed with the great four-manual Skinner Organ and the Mason and Hamlin Concert Grand Piano. "They are the best to be had," he commented. "You are right to provide the best."

Mr. Presser had hoped to visit Elon again, but Providence decreed otherwise. A great soul has returned to Him who gave it being. The greatest devotee of musical culture in our generation is no more among us in person. Life is poorer by his going, but immeasurably enrichened by his having lived. Long will live the memory and the ministry of Theodore Presser, musician and likewise friend and benefactor of music everywhere.

W. A. Harper.

IT WAS GOOD TO BE THERE.

It was good to be where? At the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, which met last week at Franklin, Va.

Why was it good to be there? Well, in the first place, we felt it was good to be there because we were associated with some of the best people that the Lord has in His service. Also, we had the pleasure of being received and entertained in some of the finest homes of that section. Each night while there, the writer had the pleasure of the company of his pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan, and Dr. R. C. Helfenstein and his wife of Dover, Delaware. We were entertained in the home of Brother E. P. Jones. He and his pleasant wife were so kind and courteous, and entertaining, it gave us much joy and great pleasure to be in their home.

Then at noon and in the evening of each day, a table was spread in the basement of the church with a bountiful provision of good things to eat. So pleasing was that festival scenery that the face of each one as they walked in, would beam with smiles. And we humble, lowly delegates from the rural churches could sit down and see D. D.'s right in front of us, and on the right and on the left of us, and we could eat the same kind of food they ate and listen to their pleasant chat and breathe the same atmosphere they were breathing. My! how lofty it made a fellow feel.

But the best of all was the wonderful work accomplished by the conference. In the afternoon of the first day, after the report on Home Missions had been read by Col. J. E. West, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, N. C., gave an address on "An Adequate Program for Home Missions in This Conference." As usual, Dr. Atkinson was at his best. He made plain to the minds of his hearers, that the program that was adequate for the occasion, originated in the mind of God, and through the ministrations of His loving spirit was impressed into the hearts and lives of His followers.

In the evening of the same day, Dr. W. H. Denison, of Dayton, Ohio, gave an address on Stewardship. His subject was "Placing the Emphasis of Life." He showed, in his remarks, where there were four very essential divisions or centers in life through which the spirit of God approached and united Himself with the spirit of man and so impressed and convinced him that he would give to the world the real issues of the Divine will, with an emphasis that would be worth while and that would prevail.

The second day, Rev. J. G. Truitt, of the First Church, Norfolk, Va., spoke on "Be Ye not Servants of Men." Dr. Atkinson gave another talk on missions, and Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., gave in his most convincing style an address on "Evangelism." Rev. J. F. Morgan lead each day's devotional exercises in an appealing and inspiring way. All of these messages from such loyal, consecrated, devoted servants of God, were surely nourishment for the soul.

May the Lord let his blessings rest upon the great work done at this conference. Surely it was good to be there.

N. C. WOMAN'S CONFERENCE MEETS.

The Women's and Young Peoples Missionary Meeting of the North Carolina Christian Conference convened in annual session at the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., October 30, 1925. Business was rapidly transacted, and when the afternoon session was ended, the meeting adjourned for the year to meet in 1926, at Raleigh, N. C.

Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, of Raleigh, who has been president for the past year, was re-elected. Other officers chosen were: Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., secretary, and Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C., treasurer.

Aside from the business transacted there was a spiritual strain running through the whole day's session. "Prayer, the Essential Power in Missions," was the theme of most of the talks and of all the work done by the conference.

The meeting started at 10 o'clock in the morning, called to order by Mrs. Vaughan. The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro. Reports followed, which put a very encouraging aspect on the work done during the year. Miss Nina Troy, returned missionary from China, made the principal address of the morning, and delighted her audience with both an inspirational and instructive talk on the work in the foreign field.

This address was followed by a beautiful solo sung by Miss Aleece Sapp, of Greensboro. Rev. M. T. Sorrell then spoke briefly on the mountain work that is being done in Carroll County, Virginia.

Following the appointment of committees, a luncheon was served in the church basement, where attractive decorations had been made for the occasion.

Dr. Warren H. Denison, of Dayton, Ohio, delivered the principal address of the afternoon, using as his subject "Stewardship." The devotional exercises in the afternoon were led by Mrs. W. H. Boone, of Durham, N. C. Reports from thirty-eight societies were heard

Mrs. W. R. Sellars talked in the afternoon on "Prayer and Missions." This was followed by a talk from Miss Madge Moffitt on the theme, "Brave Adventurers." A discussion of the program for the coming year was in charge of Miss Gertrude Brown, of Elon College.

About 150 delegates were present from the various cities and communities. The financial goal for the past year was $3,600. This was more than reached. The treasurer's report showed a total of approximately $3,700. The goal for the coming year was fixed at $4,000.

The following ministers were present: Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.; Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C.; Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio; Rev. M. T. Sorrell, Fancy Gap, Va.; Dr. W. S. Alexander, Elon College, N. C.; Rev. B. J. Howard, Chapel Hill, N. C.

This, according to reports, is the best year the women of this conference have had in their work, and the reports showed growth along all lines, in contributions and in the number of societies organized.

REMOVING THE MASCULINE INFERIORITY COMPLEX.

By George Arthur Frantz.

Pastor First Presbyterian Church, Van Wert, Ohio.

The men in our church felt that the women had more of the Christian international outlook than they. For many years the women had held classes for mission study. They knew more about both the commercial and the Christian resources and needs of the world than business men did. How then change the situation for the men and remove the "inferiority complex"? That was the problem.

First the Women's Missionary Society dropped its feminine prefix. It became the Missionary Society of the church, for men and women, and the men took the responsibility for three or four meetings each year.

1. The Thank-offering meeting is a Sunday morning service. The address is usually given by the pastor. The subject is some portion of the Church's world-wide work. We have used very successfully, "A Christian's World Tour," personally conducted. For this we hung up a missionary map of the world, and from the current number of the Missionary Review of the World we showed what might be seen at the various places that month. The children bring toys, dolls, books of their own, and lay them on the chancel steps at the time when the older people bring their money offerings. The children's gifts go to the children of the mountains or of foreign lands.

2. The week-night meetings include: "A free for all discussion of Foreign Missions," by a group of men in the lounge of a local club. One of the outstanding enthusiasts for missions is constituted the chief objector. Men high in ability, but low in missionary information and interest may be enlisted to work up the arguments to demolish his opposition. Such men read books to get their arguments. They could not be persuaded to read them in any other way. One of our men has been talking Headland's "Some By-Products of Missions" ever since we held such a meeting. He refused to return this and other volumes, purchasing them for his own shelves.

3. The same type of man can give one of the Board's lantern lectures at a mid-week service. There are many men who can do it as well or better than the minister.

4. A debate between some of the men may be held on some such subjects as, "Resolved, that we should keep all our money for Home Missions"; or "That the needs of China for our gifts and prayers are greater than the needs of Africa." The men work up their country and make fiery speeches, and the audience hears of the needs of all.

5. The men bring some great church leader, such as Dr. Speer, or a missionary like Dr. F. G. Coan of Persia, to make an address at a men's dinner. They invite men from all the churches in our part of the Presbytery. In this way men in the smaller congregations hear some outstanding speakers of the church. Otherwise they would never have this opportunity. Too much of our intensive work by the greatest speakers is done in the large centers of population to the neglect of the rural regions. This is a deliberate attempt to help. The women are admitted to these meetings by ticket, to the capacity of the building. We have as many as three hundred and twenty-five men, "besides women an children," to hear such an address.

By these methods we have quadrupled our benevolences, making them the largest total, and by far the largest per capita in the Presbytery, keeping them there while we have built a three hundred-thousand dollar church in a community of ten thousand people.

The missionary society is the whole church enlisted for joyful giving and intelligent praying, and always on the outlook for news of the Kingdom—not women, not men, but Christians all.—November Missionary Review of the World.

SOME FIGURES ABOUT YOUTH.

There are over 27,000,000 American children and youths, nominally Protestant, under twenty-five years of age, who are not enrolled in any Sunday School or Cradle Roll and who receive no systematic religious instruction.

There are 8,000,000 American children, nominally Protestant, who are growing up in non-church homes.

There are in the United States 8,676,000 Catholic children and youths under twenty-five years of age. Of this number 1,870,000 are in religious schools and 6,806,000, or 78.4 per cent are not in religious schools.

There are in the United States 42,891,850 Protestant and nominally Protestant children and youths under twenty-five years of age. Of this number 14,361,900 are in Sunday School or week-day religious schools, 1,255,740 are on cradle rolls and 27,275,110, or 66.5 per cent are not enrolled in any religious schools.

It seems as though there is a lot of "unfinished business" on the table of the Christian Church. In spite of all these dizzy statistics, we think we are busy—with our local programs and individual plans. Just how busy are we? Or are we merely marking time with resolutions and motions that have no place anywhere outside of the minutes of the meeting? Whoever would shape America's future can do it only as he molds these young lives—the question resolves itself into whether the street or the church shall dominate the thought and character of our future citizens. We may be rather baffled before the crime-wave of to day, but that is no reason why we should deliberately invoke such a wave for tomorrow.

Youth is the world's fresh beginning—give the world in its youth a square deal.—Selected.

While we are profoundly grateful to the schools named above for their liberal offering and to the other schools which contribute monthly to Missions, it is noted with regret that there are quite a few schools in the Southern Christian Convention not yet sufficiently interested in enlarging the Kingdom and building up schools and churches elsewhere to make a monthly contribution. For the next few months these contributions, not otherwise designated, will go to the support and extension of our mountain work in Carroll County, Va., and it is devoutly hoped that many of our schools not already doing so will vote for and send us one offering a month for this most worthy and needy work of the Kingdom.

MRS. W. R. SELLARS,
Burlington, N. C. Treasurer.

"Happiness consists in living for others; that is clear. Man aspires to happiness; therefore, it is a proper desire. If he tries to get it in a selfish way, in seeking wealth, glory, love, he may not succeed, and his wishes remain unsatisfied. Then it must be selfish desires that are wrong, and not the wish to be happy. Now, what are the dreams which may be realized apart from our outward circumstances? Only love and self-sacrifice.—Tolstoy.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VIII.—November 22, 1925.

Subject: "Paul Before Felix."

Golden Text: "Herein I also exercise myself to have a conscience void of offense toward God and men always."—Acts 24: 16.

Lesson: Acts 23: 1-24: 27.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 86: 11-17.

Paul had spunk. When his statement before the Sanhedrin to the effect that he had lived in all good conscience before God, aroused the high priest's ire to the extent that he forgot his official dignity and ordered Paul to be smitten on the mouth, Paul "flared up." With a burning irony Paul intimated that it was a fine kind of judge who would be trying a man after the law and yet command a man to be smitten contrary to the law. One must admire the moral courage of the man.

Paul also was quick-witted. He knew full well that he was not going to get justice from that Sanhedrin, and he quickly turned the court into a partisan discussion by bringing in the matter of the resurrection, and thus caused a violent dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees. So heated did the discussion become, that the chief captain had to take Paul by force and give him protection in the castle. It was there that the Lord appeared unto Paul during the night and promised him that he should testify or bear witness for Him in Rome. God moves in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. Paul wanted to go to Rome. He was to go. But it was as a prisoner that he was to go.

The Jews who opposed Paul were made of stern stuff. Forty of them pledged themselves by an oath that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed Paul. They laid a plot whereby Paul was to be brought forth for further questioning and while being taken to the court, he was to be set upon and killed. Fortunately Paul's nephew learned of the plot and it was broken up. But Lysias saw that it was unsafe to keep Paul in Jerusalem and he sent him to Caesarea to Felix, the governor of Judea, a man who, by the way, was as unprincipled as he was inefficient. After a cursory examination of Paul, Felix committed him to Herod's judgment hall, there to await the coming of Paul's accusers. They came five days later.

The Jews had employed an orator, seemingly as unscrupulous as brilliant, who presented the case against Paul. He made a fulsome approach to the subject by offering a most elaborate flattery to Felix, and then proceeded to state his case. He charged Paul with three things, things which constituted grave offenses. First he said that Paul was a mover of sedition, or an insurrectionist. He could not have made a more powerful appeal to Felix's sympathies, for if there was one thing that Rome stood for, and demanded of its subjects through its rulers, it was order. Any man who threatened to disturb the peace was an arch-enemy, and Rome dealt ruthlessly with him. In the second place, Tertullus accused Paul of being a leader of the sect of the Nazarenes. This was a crime against the law of Moses. In the third place, Paul was charged with profaning the Temple, which was a crime against both the Roman Empire and the Mosaic Law. Tertullus added that the Jews would have taken Paul and judged him according to their law had not Lysias taken him away from them. And the Jews present gave assent to these things. It was all a lie, but people who are blinded by prejudice or who are moved by a desire for revenge do not hesitate at lying.

Paul has an opportunity to make his defense. In contrast with Tertullus' fulsome and "oily" introduction, he addresses Felix in a courteous and cool manner. He not only denies the charges; he gives abundant and convincing evidence that the charges are not true. He reminds Felix that it has been only twelve days since he went up to Jerusalem to worship, and that neither in the temple nor in the synagogues had he disputed with the people, to say nothing of having tried to stir them up. He flings the charge back in their faces and challenges them to prove their accusations. Furthermore, he reminds Felix and the Jews that his chief purpose in coming to Jerusalem was to bring alms and offerings to his nation—a strange procedure for one who was an insurrectionist. Paul does confess, however, that after the way which they call heresy he worships the God of his fathers, and that he believed in the resurrection of the dead. As a matter of fact, says Paul, it was on the question of the resurrection that he had been called into question. In the light of the belief in the resurrection Paul had exercised himself to live in a clear conscience both before God and man.

Felix was unscrupulous, but he had sense. He saw the flimsy character of the whole charge and he dismissed the case. But he kept Paul until Lysias should come down so that he could hear the whole of the matter. Paul was to be a prisoner, but he was to have a large amount of liberty. His friends could have access to him as they pleased.

One other dramatic scene is included in the lesson. Felix and Drusilla his wife sent for Paul and heard him concerning his faith in Christ. It was a rather unusual situation, an unscrupulous Roman governor and his illegitimate wife asking an outcast Jew to tell of his faith in Christ. There must have been a temptation to Paul to "tone down" his message. But Paul was made of sterner stuff, and he really preached a soul-searching and conscience-goading sermon. So powerfully did he speak of righteousness, rightness in conduct—Felix took bribes in office and committed almost all kinds of villainy; of temperance or self-control—Felix had persuaded Drusilla to leave her husband and to live with him in illicit relations; and of judgment to come, of men giving an account of the deeds done in the body to God—Felix had murdered Jonothan, the high priest; so powerfully did he bring the gospel of Christ to bear upon Felix's mind and heart that Felix actually trembled in fear. He was so conscience strickened that he sent Paul away, promising him that he would call for him when he had a "more convenient season." Alas, if only Felix could have known that "NOW is the accepted time." But sin had bound him fast. His main concern in Paul after that was simply the hope of getting a bribe. And when finally Felix was recalled to Rome to face charges of misconduct and mismanagement, wishing to please the Jews he left Paul bound. For two years Paul was a prisoner in Caesarea. It would appear, however, that they were fruitful years in the apostle's life, for they afforded him an opportunity for quiet and meditation, and greatly enriched his spiritual life.

Think on These Teaching Points.

1. The man who trusts God is equal to any emergency in life.
2. God will not keep a man out of trouble, but He will help men in trouble.
3. A man is truest to Christ when he bears witness for Christ.
4. Belief in the resurrection powerfully affects life here.
5. Conscience must be kept void of offense toward God and men.
6. Conscience must be kept sensitive by the Spirit of Christ.
7. Those who are sinners often want to hear of Christ.
8. Men in sin need direct and plain gospel truths.
9. The Word of God is quick and powerful and is a discerner of the inner thoughts of a man's life.
10. Conviction should issue in conversion.
11. It is a dangerous thing to put off a decision for Christ.
12. The love of money is the root of all kinds of evil.
13. Felix's sins found him out. Be sure your sins will find you out.
14. The true follower of Jesus Christ may be free even though in prison.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

November 22, 1925.

Topic: "God's Bounties: How Can We Share Them with Others?"—Deut. 28: 1-9; Matt. 25: 34-40.

Thanksgiving Meeting.

Some Bible Hints.

The world has never yet seen the prosperity that would come to a people that really lived the life of God. (V. 2.)

If such blessings as we enjoy come from partial obedience, what would not full obedience and perfect love bring? (V. 8.)

The life of love on earth leads to a life of joy in heaven, and is the only way to it. (V. 34.)

Generosity should become a habit, so that we are instinctively generous and kind without thinking of it at all. (V. 37.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

The earth is so made as to "yield" its fruit with little persuasion. Nature is bountiful, for it obeys God's law.

We share our bounty by our gifts of money, which stands for food and clothing and other things. We share by giving to good causes.

We share in our families. The family is so organized that we share willingly for its welfare, and so learn to care for the greater family of mankind.

To support missions is to share our bounties, spiritual as well as material. We should not eat the bread of life alone, while others starve.

A Few Illustrations.

The Puritan's first Thanksgiving came after suffering great need, which made God's bounties seem more precious. It is so today also in some places.

We should be reservoirs of God's bounty, receiving that we may pour out to others the good we have received, whatever it be—knowledge, food, talent.

America, grateful to God for liberty, wishes to share it with all mankind. This gift does not grow less by sharing it.

"To Thee, O Christ, be given this ducat, which is Thine own coin," is an inscription on an old Venetian gold piece. Our full barns are His, to be administered for Him.

To Think About.

How does your society try to share its blessings?
Why should we take care of the poor?
How may we share our abilities with others?

A just God has no favorites, and if you are a generous soul you do not want to be a favorite. * * * His gifts are supplies for us to pass on to those more needy.—S. S. Estey.

The man that can use his talents to make work for others is sharing his blessings with others in a very real way.—Anon.

A thankful heart is the most successful promoter of thrift ever known to man.—McGowan.

For the day that now is ours;
For our life with all its powers;
For the chance some part to take
Earth a better place to make,
We thank Thee, Lord.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

To Pastors of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference.

The Christian Missionary Association meets on Tuesday, December 8th, four weeks from this week. That is not long off—so get ready.

We feel the pastors should present the work of the C. M. A. in their fields and should endeavor to hold the membership strength of last year, and where possible to increase it by securing new memberships.

The campaign last year resulted successfully, but it was simply a temporary success. For permanent results, the members secured last year must be held and new members must be secured. We are not requesting an intensive campaign such as we had last year, but simply that the ministers will interest themselves in holding the C. M. A. up to last year's strength.

The Christian Sun is publishing the C. M. A. memberships by groups of churches. So watch for the memberships in your church or churches. The C. M. A. membership is also listed by churches in the LIII. Volume, or 1925 Annual, pages 161-165. If you do not find your church listed it is because it is one of the eighteen churches in the conference in which there are no C. M. A. memberships. This does not include the Webster Community Church, for they joined with a church membership, Cctober 28, 1925.

J. H. Lightbourne, President,
For Executive Committee.

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

CONTENTMENT.

"Be free from the love of money; content with such things as ye have: for He hath said, I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee."—Heb. 13: 5.

"There are two kinds of discontent in this world: the discontent that works, and the discontent that wrings its hand. The first gets what it wants, as a rule, and the second loses what it has. There is no cure for the first but success, and there is no cure at all for the second."—Gordon Graham.

Prayer.—Our Father, Give unto us the godly heritage of a discontent that inspires to more and better service and wins success: Forbid that we shall have a discontent that despairs. Give us neither poverty nor riches, but feed us with the food that is needful for our souls and endow us with such of this world's goods, or such lack of them as we may need. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE BLESSING OF AFFLICTION

"For affliction cometh not of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground; but man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward."—Job 5: 6-7.

"As a man chasteneth his son, so the Lord God chasteneth thee."—Deut. 8: 5.

"Happy is the man whom God correcteth."—Job 5: 17.

"Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now I observe Thy word."—Psa. 119: 67.

"When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold."—Job 23: 10.

"Tribulation worketh stedfatsness, and stedfastness approvedness, and approvedness hope." Rom. 5: 3-4.

"We are reirs with God and joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him."—Rom. 8: 17.

"Our yight afflictions . . . worketh for us more and more exceedingly an eternal weight of glory."—II. Cor. 4: 17.

"Blessed is the man that endureth . . . ; for when he hath been approved, he shall receive the crown of life."—Jas. 1: 2.

"The bread of bitterness is the food on which men grow to their fullest statue; the waters of bitterness are the unabatable ford through which they reach the shores of wisdom; the ashes boldly grasped and eaten without faltering are the price that must be paid for the golden fruit of knowledge."—Ouida.

Prayer.—Our Father, Eternal God, Help us to make Thee our dwelling place today. Put Thine arms under us and hold us up. Drive the enemy from our midst. Give us endurance as a good soldier and we will win the battle for Thee. In Christ's name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

OUR SUPREME DUTY.

"What doth the Lord require of Thee but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy Lord."—Micha 6: 8.

Please read also: Lev. 19: 18; Matt. 7: 12; Eph. 4: 32; Acts 20: 35; Gal. 6: 2.

"The great duty of life is not to give anyone or anything pain, but to give helpfulness and blessing; and the most accute reasoner cannot find an excuse for one who voluntarily wounds the heart of a fellow-creature. Even for their own sakes, people should show kindness and regard for their dependents." They are often better served in trifles than they are in ministries of love. But how small is such a gain compared with the great loss sustained in all the weightier affairs of life. Help substantially, and a faithful one at once shows himself a friend, while the one who serves from fear becomes an enemy.

Prayer.—Our Father, Help us to forgive those that trespass against us and to look down on nobody. Teach us how to help the poor and the weak and to minister as our Lord did. Help thou our weakness that we may be strong enough to do Thy work here on earth. Now and forever, in Christ's name. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE STRAIGHT WAY.

"See that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools but as wise, redeeming the time."—Eph. 5: 15-16.

"If thou workest at that which is before thee, following right reason, seriously, vigorously, calmly, without allowing anything else to distract thee, but keeping thy divine part sure; if thou shouldst be bound to give it back immediately; and thou holdest to this, expecting nothing, fearing nothing; but satisfied with thy present activity according to nature, and thou stick to it with heroic truth in every word and sound which thou utterest, thou wilt live happy. And there is not man who is able to prevent this."—Marcus Aurelius.

Prayer.—Our Father, We desire to acknowledge Thee in all our ways and especially for today. Grant that we walk the straight and narrow way from earth to glory. We ask it in the name of Him who died for us, Christ our Lord. Amen.

FRIDAY.

LESSON: Lev. 19: 13, 35, 36; Prov. 3: 27.
Read the Lesson and pray.

Prayer.—Our Father, We give Thee thanks for Thy watch-care and protection during the past night, for rest and sleep, and for this new day so full of Thy blessings. Grant that we may live so close to Thee that we may always be true and honest, and not willfully misrepresent anything to anybody. Forbid that we shall ever have connections with dishonesty or fraud; but may we strive to be of service to our brethren, to our country and to our God. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LOVE.

LESSON: I. Corinthians 13.
Read the entire chapter.

No one understands love. It comes from where we know not. Its music refreshes the fatigued and lightens the heart of the bowed down, giving them a new courage.

He who is without love is like a lamp unlit. No one needs it. But touch it with a flame and it is the greatest delight of the room. So is the lover.

I have seen love come to a man who was battered by a hard life and the excess of his own passions, and cleanse and change him—put him on his feet, and from him burst forth glory to God. Such is the blessing of a lover.

I have seen a dark and empty house opened by a woman with a key, and when within she threw open the windows. The imprisoned air rushed out and the winds of the great open rushed in. The lights were turned on and the fire was made, and the house became alive with comfort and delight, and it was home. This is what love will do for the soul.

Prayer.—Our Father, In Thee and Thee alone we live and move and have our being, and today we acknowledge before Thee our faith, believing that Thou art the fountain of all love and art ready to fill our souls if we come to Thee. Help us to come with yearning hearts and as empty vessels. Fill us with Thine overflowing love. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE BLESSING OF YOUNG FOLKS.

"Let no man despise thy youth; but be an example of the believers, in word, in understanding, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity."—I. Timothy 4: 12.

"Let no man think slightly of you because you are a young man; but in speech, conduct, love, faith and purity, be an example for your fellow-Christians to imitate."—Revised Version.

"Oh, the eagerness and freshness of youth! How the boy enjoys his food, his sleep, his sports, his companions, his truant days! His life is an adventure. He is widening his outlook, he is extending his dominion, he is conquering his kingdom. How cheap are his pleasures, how ready his enthusiasms! In boyhood, I have had more delight on a haymow with two companions and a big dog, than I have ever had in all the subsequent holidays of my life. Such is youth! But when manhood comes, much comes with it. We exchange a world's delightful sensations and impressions for a world of duties and studies and meditations. The youth enjoys what the man tries to understand. Lucky is he who can get his grapes to market and keep the bloom upon them—who can carry some of the freshness and eagerness and simplicity of youth into his later years, who can have a boy's heart below a man's head."—John Burroughs.

Prayer.—Our Father in Heaven, Keep us all young in spirit, in innocence and love, and help us all to be an example unto everyone. We ask it for Christ's sake. Amen.

CHRIST'S STRENGTH, NOT MINE.

My way led up a hill, and right at the foot I saw a boy on a bicycle. He was pedaling up hill against the wind, and evidently found it hard work. Just as he was working most strenuously and doing his best, there came a trolley car going in the same direction—up the hill. It was not going too fast for the boy to get behind it, and with one hand to lay hold of the bars at the back. Then you know what happened. He went up the hill like a bird. Then it flashed upon me: "Why, I am like that boy on the bicycle in my weariness and weakness. I am pedaling up hill against all kinds of opposition, and I am almost worn out with the task. But here at hand is a great available power, the strength of the Lord Jesus. I have only to get into touch with Him and to maintain communion with Him, though it may be with only one little finger of faith, and that will be enough to make His power mine for the doing of this bit of service that just now seems too much for me." And I was helped to dismiss my weariness and to realize this truth.—Selected.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

"KORNER ON MANNERS."

Each and every Kiddie who reads this page is invited to answer the questions below—just for fun to see if we can. Hey, ho—away we go!

What to do.

1.—What do you do in every case when your mother introduces you to a friend of hers, and what do you say?

2.—What do you say if you finish eating and wish to leave the table before the other people do? To whom do you say it?

3.—What is the polite thing to do when a grown-up comes into the room where you are sitting?

4.—When anyone gives you a present, what do you say?

Kiddies, you all know these—just answer them every one some rainy afternoon. It's something nice to do—and something nice to know. If you do not know, ask Mother—she knows everything!

Poor ol' Turkey—seems like he is awfully worried about something lately. Do you know what that something is? He just talks—"Gobble, gobble, gobble—" Who can write a Turkey Gobbler story for next week's Kiddies' Korner? I want three, six, nineteen, twenty-seven!—OOh, ooH—I hear you say! What a lot of stories!

Did you vote for the BEST Pollyanna? Send it to me quickly dears—I want your opinion of the so wonderful Pollyanna letters, so hurry a little.

LIMPY.

On his way home to supper one hot day in September, Jimmy Holt stopped at the fountain in the playground to get a drink of water. As he drew near he saw that there was a little dog sitting at the foot of it and looking up at the basin that held the water. Even before Jimmy reached him the dog stood up on his hind legs, with his forepaws resting against the cement post, and began to whine. Jimmy understood at once that he was saying as well as he could in little-dog speech, "Please give me a drink!" So even before he helped himself, he took the dog in his arms and held him up till he had drunk all the water he wanted. It took a long time, but Jimmy was in no hurry, for it made him laugh to see the little red tongue scoop up the water, "lap, lap, lap," then a breath, and "lap, lap, lap," again.

When the dog had had enough Jimmy took a long drink himself and started for home again; but he had gone only a few steps when he heard the dog whine, and looking back, he saw that he was trying to follow him on three legs. One of his forepaws he kept bent and off the ground.

Jimmy turned back and stooped to look at the paw. The dog still held it up, and Jimmy took it in his hand. Deep in the sole of it was a very large tack that must have been there some time, for the flesh about it was tender and swollen.

Once more Jimmy took the dog in his arms, and this time he carried him home, where his father soon drew out the tack and his mother dressed the sore paw and put a bandage on it.

From that day on the dog showed no wish to leave. The family fed him, and he seemed happy to have found a home. Jimmy began to look upon him as his own and, after thinking of a great many other names, at last called him Limpy, because he was still lame.

One day when Limpy's foot had gotten much better Jimmy took a hoop from the nail in the shed where he kept it and went out into the yard to play with it. As soon as Limpy saw what he had he began to bark and race round him; and while Jimmy still held the hoop in his hand, Limpy leaped through it, turned round and leaped back again, and after that he did other tricks that seemed to Jimmy the most wonderful that he had ever heard of. He lay down and played dead, with all four feet in the air, sat up and covered his eyes with his forepaws, as if he were crying, knelt as if to say his prayers, and then turned somersaults, backward and forward, so fast that even you could hardly count them.

"He must be a circus dog," said Mr. Holt, "or one that belongs to a show of trained dogs." But there had been no circus or dog-show in the city that summer, so no one could guess where Limpy had come from.

But there was one person in the city who knew, and Jimmy himself was soon to learn, for one afternoon the teachers in all the schools read aloud a letter that the school committee had sent them. It said:

"I am old and blind, and I have lost a very dear friend—a little dog that goes by the name of Patsy. A friend of mine who was with a circus gave him to me, and he had learned to lead me about so well that I felt safe to go out when he was with me. I miss him so much that I should be very grateful if you would ask the children in your school to try to find him for me." The letter was signed, "Mrs. Mary Wills."

So that afternoon as soon as school was out twelve thousand children from all the city schools set out to find the lost Patsy. If Jimmy had been at school that day he would have known what to do, but he had been kept at home because he was not well; so it was a very round-eyed little boy who locked out of the window at half past four at a group of children who were going slowly along the street, looking everywhere and calling, "Here, Patsy! He-e-re Patsy!" and it was a very much surprised little boy who saw his little dog Limpy rush out, barking at the top of his voice and racing after the children and, when he had reached them, dancing about them as if he were mad. Of course Jimmy rushed out too and heard the story that the children had to tell; and that evening Patsy was once more with his old mistress; and when Jimmy saw how happy they both were he was not sorry.

The dog and Jimmy are still the best of friends, for Jimmy goes often to see him, and Patsy still does his tricks, whether you call him by that name or Limpy.—E. W. Frentz.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

Beauty of russet and scarlet swirled,
Crisp brown scraps of parchment curled,
Veined transparencies, scalloped sheen,
Little gold fans and arrows of green,—
Down you flit by twos and threes,
By scores and clouds from the drowsy trees.
Dancing there in a giddy round,
Drifting here to the cordial ground,
Quiet or sleeping, none of you grieves.
On a bright and spirited autumn day
Why should anyone sigh and say,—
"Dead Leaves?"

Ho, for the new adventure begun,
With release from the bough!
There is wind, there is sun!
There is hope that builds already for spring.
Who forever would clutch and cling
Even upon one beautiful tree?
Now, little lingerers, now you are free!
Free to flutter and float and fly,
Each to be quiet at last, and lie
In a gentle sleep under snow, under rain,
Till spring shall rouse you over again;
Out of your dust in the fragrant mould,
Mingled with essences manifold,
Sap and strength from a quenchless Source,
Life and love for an endless course.
Dry leaves, old leaves, tired but glad,
Who should be frightened, who be sad?
Off for renaissance, none knows how,
Perhaps to bud on a fairer bough,
Not a simple green leaf, but a Rose instead.
No leaves are dead.

DAILY BREAD.

Thank God for little common things,
Small, lovely things of every day—
Grass that is green beside the door
And dandelions across the way,
Candles that flicker in the dusk
And firelit rooms where shadows play;

For silver fingers of the rain
Stroking a young tree's bending head,
For stars that prick through drifting clouds
And dawns that flame in gold and red.
Thank God for common, lovely things
That are the spirit's daily bread!

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

Not until August of this year did the control of the alcohol situation come over to the Prohibition Unit, through the promulgation of Regulations 61. From now on Prohibition Administrators will act upon all basic permits of this class. This change will certainly materially reduce the diversion of denatured alcohol, and largely shut off this source of supply.

No recapitulation of the progress made in prohibition enforcement will be complete without the following facts:

During the last four years Federal agents have seized more than 600,000 stills and parts of stills and confiscated more than 67,500,000 gallons of distilled spirits, malt liquors, wine, etc. A total of 17,166 automobiles and 626 boats and launches have been captured. In the past four years these agents have made 239,954 arrests, besides regularly inspecting as many as 133,000 permittees, as many as 483 dealcoholizing plants in one year, and conducting thousands of investigations. There were 12,918 arrests made by State officers during the last fiscal year, in which Federal officers assisted, or developed the cases and turned them over in order to expedite, or for other reasons thought advantageous to enforcement. There were also 1,473 persons arrested by State officers on information furnished by Federal officers. The maximum number of agents at any one time during this period was a few over 1,900. Remember that an agent must investigate, arrest the accused, then spend some time in the preparation of the case, and spend more time still while the trial goes on. Agents do not put in an eight-hour day arresting people. The amount of actual time each of these agents was able to spend in the detection and arrest of liquor criminals was less than the time they were compelled to spend in preparing for or attending court. Some records show an average of as much as 20 hours work per day. We have no appology to make for the work as a whole. The vast majority of the Federal agents have rendered heroic services. When death impended, they have not failed. On the honor roll of the Prohibition Unit, there are 43 names of men who were killed and many wounded while they defended the Constitution and the laws of the land.

(To be concluded.)

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We have sent out from the office this week to the Superintendent of each Sunday School a Thanksgiving Appeal to be read to the Sunday School. We have also mailed to the Superintendent of each Sunday School a package of Thanksgiving Envelopes to be used in his Church in taking the Thanksgiving offering for the Christian Orphanage.

We will mail to each Superintendent the first of the week, a picture of the Christian Orphanage to hang on the wall the Sunday the offering is taken.

This is one year that we want to appeal to our people with all the earnestness of our soul to make a liberal Thanksgiving Offering. It is one year we need it. The extreme drouth this year has forced us to check on our bank account till it hurts.

One writer has said, "The most pitiful, the most appealing sight in the world, is that of an orphan without a home." I fully agree with him and know that it is true. But the Superintendent of an Orphanage who has the responsibility of one hundred and ten of this class of children to feed, clothe and care for, deserves some sympathy, too.

We want to ask each church and Sunday School to do its best this year. And let us raise a splendid Thanksgiving Offering.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

THE OTHER FELLOW.

Don'e forget that all people are not constituted alike—that what is a pleasure for one is monotony for another. Don't forget, also, that nobody but the man himself can know the motive for doing this or that; and don't forget that the man may not have chosen to make public his own business. The one who seems stingy may be applying his money in some entirely honorable way known only to himself. The one who seems cross or gruff may be a silent physical sufferer from the acts of a relative or friend. Don't be too ready to judge others. Perhaps, under similar circumstances, you would not have done so well. Remember that many persons shrink from publicity and will bear in silence all things, rather than make their troubles known. And remember that these people are entitled to privacy if they want it. Remember that there has never been any better rule for personal conduct in all the varied departments of life than the one laid down nearly two thousand years ago that says something about doing to others as you would like to have them do to you. That's a rule that applies to everyday life, and can be recommended for daily use.—Exchange.

IN MEMORIAM—COTTON.

Whereas our beloved sister of the First Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., Mrs. A. J. Cotten, has served with boundless tenderness and sympathy in our church, Sunday School, Ladies Aid, and Missionary Society Circle, and worked also with the city W. C. T. U. for the past four years, coming here from Dendron, Va.

In her last morning prayer death's sting touched her, no doubt, then she prayed, God deal with me in your own way. Just a few hours later He took her unto himself. And, whereas in her going, we can see her vacant seat, feel our loss, miss her smile and encouragement,

We, as a committee, wish to record our appreciation of her faithful service and bow in submission to the will of Him whom we desire to serve—

Therefore, be it resolved that these lines be a memory link of lasting thankfulness for her life with us and regret for her going, and that they be recorded in the minutes of the Ladies' Aid and the Missionary Society, that a copy be sent to the family, also that a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. C. C. JOHNSON,

IN MEMORIAM—FLOWERS.

Whereas our beloved sister, Mrs. C. T. Flowers, of the Victor Bible Class of the Waverly Christian Church, has been called from this life, and in her going we feel a sense of loss and shall miss her faithful counsels and helpful suggestions, we offer the following sincere expressions of our love and our loss.

1st. She was loyal, devoted and true, always responsive to every call of duty and every service of love.

2nd. She possessed in a marked degree the virtues of a good Christian, a good member, and a good friend.

3rd. We offer these resolutions as a token of our high esteem for her life and usefulness, and desire that a copy be sent to her bereaved family and also to The Christian Sun for publication,

Mrs. F. A. EPPES,
Mrs. F. W. MAIFIELD,
Miss BESSIE POND,

There was a large congregation at the funeral and very many beautiful flowers, even more than could be laid on the grave. Her funeral was conducted from Blain Field Friends Church, four miles from Randleman, N. C., by the writer.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1925. NUMBER 47.

The President's Thanksgiving Proclamation, 1925

THE season approaches when, in accordance with a long-established and respected custom, a day is set apart to give thanks to Almighty God for the manifold blessings which His gracious and benevolent providence has bestowed upon us as a nation and as individuals.

We have been brought with safety and honor through another year and, through the generosity of nature, He has blessed us with resources whose potentiality in wealth is almost incalculable; we are at peace at home and abroad; the public health is good; we have been undisturbed by pestilence or great catastrophe; our harvests and our industries have been rich in productivity; our commerce spreads over the whole world, and labor has been well rewarded for its remunerative service.

As we have grown and prospered in material things, so also should we progress in moral and spiritual things. We are a God-fearing people, who should set ourselves against evil and strive for righteousness in living and observing the Golden Rule. We should from our abundance help and serve those less fortunately placed. We should bow in gratitude to God for His many favors.

Now, therefore I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 26th day of November, next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their work and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received and to seek His guidance that they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the Year of our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-five, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the One Hundred and Fiftieth.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

A Bread Trust Organized.—

157 bread-making plants of this country have organized a four hundred million dollar trust. The new trust will be known as the General Baking Co. The trust includes about one tenth of the bread-baking concerns of the nation. It will be able to wield considerable influence in the bread market of the country.

Government Money.—

It took an amendment to the Constitution to get it, but the government of the United States is collecting a pretty handsome sum by way of the income tax. Completing its study of the income tax returns filed, the bureau announced that 7,608,231 individuals and 398,933 corporations had filed income tax returns in 1923. The individuals contributed to the government $663,-651,505 and the corporations $937,106,398. These are large amounts, and go far toward the support of the government.

Dr. Millican Discovers Rays.—

Prof. R. A. Millikan of the California Institute of Technology, has announced the discovery of rays stronger than the ultra X-rays. He partly described his discovery to the American Academy of Sciences meeting in Madison, Wisconsin, recently. The rays discovered by Prof. Millikan are of the ten million volt variety, and are caused by atoms passing over to other atoms, on which the sun has no effect. Prof. Millikan is a winner of the Nobel Physics prize of forty thousand dollars for his measurements of the electron.

Motor Vehicles Increasing.—

It is estimated that the number of motor vehicles registered on July 1st, last, was 17,548,377. Those in a position to know, believe that that number will be nineteen million by the end of this year. Such rapid growth in motor vehicles is beginning to revolutionize the carrying trade of the country, and life for those in remote and outlying districts is infinitely broader than a few years ago. Aside from the thousands of motor accidents occuring every year, motor vehicles have other dangers that we must guard against if they are to be a blessing instead of a menace to civilization.

Methodists Want Union.—

The Methodist Episcopal Church has voted by the necessary majority for union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The vote stood 16,315 for and 811 against, with forty-nine out of 106 conferences not reporting. Dr. R. J. Wade, Secretary of the General Conference of the Methodist Church, made this announcement. Voting in the Southern church is still going on, with the result in doubt. The Methodists may know best, but it would seem that the old prejudices might be laid aside after all these years, and the great church, reunited, move on to greater things than it has yet achieved.

Germany Facing Prohibition.—

Beer drinking Germany is now facing prohibition in a serious manner. The first move in the direction of a dry Germany is the promise of serious consideration for a local option bill in the Reichstag in December. Previously that body has flatly refused measures looking to prohibition under any consideration, and advocates of a dry Germany have been laughed out of countenance. The liquor interests are taking the move rather seriously, and are arraying for battle. The beer drinking public gave a demonstration not long ago by surrounding a prohibition meeting and beginning a demonstration which the police had to stop. The odds are against the success of the bill, but the favorable consideration promised is a victory for the drys. The United States is going in for a great amount of publicity, and all the information which can be had from this country, pro and con, is being secured for use in the battle to come.

A Backward Step in Prohibition.—

After eleven years of partial prohibition, Russia has returned to a thoroughly wet policy. Brandy and Whiskey and liquors of all kinds, up to sixty per cent appeared in cafes, restaurants, and stores. Vodka, the one time favorite Russian drink, appeared with an alcoholic strength up to ten per cent. Several hundred thousand bottles of pre-war liquors, which hitherto could not be sold on account of their high alcoholic content were automatically released. This move in Russia is a loss for those interested in world prohibition. Russia has done what a good many people in this country think ought to be done here, and for that reason the church must stand squarely against the liquor agitators, and hold the victory which has been won until the schools are able to destroy with the aid of the pulpit, by an educational process the advocates of a return to the liquor drinking days of old. Prohibition is not all that we might hope, but it is so much better than what we one time had. Let us keep it and improve it. We can if we will.

An Evolution Resolution.—

Before the Congregationalist Convention left Washington, where they had been meeting, they passed a resolution concerning evolution which might be interesting, and we pass it on: "Resolved, that we pledge ourselves to the conservation of the spiritual values embodied in the time-honored statements of Christian truth, but believe that God makes Himself increasingly known through the patient investigations of modern scholars. We declare our conviction that there is and can be no conflict between science and religion. We deplore any attempt of the State or Federal governments to interfere with the teaching of widely accepted scientific theories, and encourage all reverent students in their search for the truth in whatever field, assuring them that we welcome all light that they can give us, and commend to our ministers and people the preaching and acceptance of a gospel consistent with modern scholarship." This resolution is an expression of one of the great religious bodies of our country. It may be worthy of consideration in this hour of bigotry and misunderstanding on both sides of the question.

A Report on Jails.—

The Committee headed by Dr. Hastings H. Hart reported on the more than eight hundred county and city jails where Federal prisoners are being boarded out. More than seven thousand federal prisoners are now being boarded in such jails. Dr. Hart's report to the fifty-fifth annual congress on prisons reveals that some of the conditions are abominable. In the Cook County jail at Chicago, five prisoners are being kept in cells intended for only one. Dr. Hart is head of the prison investigation work of the Russell Sage Foundation, and declared that that institution would continue its studies in prisons and looking toward some reforms. In regard to the amount of board paid it was discovered that it ranged from twenty cents to three dollars a day. Five prisons in Porto Rico collected only twenty cents a day for board, while three jailers in Alaska get three dollars a day out of the United States Government. The average is sixty-nine cents a day, however, but more than four hundred jails charge less than the average. The thing which makes the situation so deplorable is the fact that so many of the prisoners are merely awaiting trial, and are subsequently proven innocent. The law presumes that a man is innocent until proven guilty, and yet those awaiting trial are imprisoned in vermin infested jails reeking with moral and physical filth.

Maybe You Have Never Thought of This.—

"Every year or two we have to take a college course in anthracite coal. That is what a coal strike is. We pay for it in higher prices and inconvenience. What are we learning from it?

"What is there to learn? There is this: A strike in the production of an essential commodity is the most absurd and grotesque of wars. Though neither party has anything against the public, both bring the consequences of war to it. The miners say they will mine no coal, but every day they consume things that the rest of us make and without some of which they could not live. They refuse to give us coal, but they take the groceries, clothing and other things that we continue to produce. The operators do the same. If we were to shut down on the operators and miners and refuse them everything that we make so long as they refuse to provide coal for us, they would have to resume the mining of coal. This is a world of interdependence in which no man is sufficient to himself. If coal miners or other groups are not willing to work for us, why should we continue to work for them, merely to enable them to continue their warfare against us?

"But this method is out of the question. Nobody, if he could, would suddenly shut off food and everything else from a population of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children. And if we could, we wouldn't unless we were prepared to deal with something like a revolution. What is to be done?

"If we would end strikes we must recognize our responsibility to those who provide us with the essentials of life. We must see that they get a square deal. We must go further and provide the social machinery to give them a square deal. Tyranny in the form of law will not do. There must be justice. Both sides must be made to feel in their hearts that the social judgment is just. But to do this we must agree upon an underlying principal of justice upon which all settlements shall be made. That principle must embody this fact—that every worker is entitled to a wage sufficient to enable him to live decently, to enjoy some of the modern luxuries of life (which are now coming to be regarded by everybody as necessities) and to save something for old age. If each of us wants the coal and the other necessities that our fellows produce, it is our duty to see that they get a square deal while they are working for us. And that is exactly what we do not do. Hence strikes."—Editorial in Dearborn Independent.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Did your conference add one new church, or congregation, to its roll the past year? If not, why not?

Peloubets Select Notes on the International Sunday School lessons, has been a standard for over fifty years. Order from THE SUN office. Price, post paid, $2.00.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide can be procured form THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond, Va. No better commentary on the International Sunday School lessons can be found. Post paid, $2.00.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference, in its session at Salem Chapel, passed a resolution to put on a drive for subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the last week in November. This conference is alive to the importance of sustaining their church paper.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, member of the Senior class in Elon College and who was ordained at the recent session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, has accepted the pastorate of Liberty (Vance) church—one of our strong and very promising rural churches.

Do you know of a pastorless Christian Church in North Carolina or Virginia? If so kindly send the name and address of the secretary to J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C., who has in hand the names and addresses of ministers who are available now.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, now a student in Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., finds student life as busy as the pastorate. "It keeps me busy night and day," he writes. Owing to the recent death of her father, Mrs. McCauley is in North Carolina at the home of her mother for the winter.

Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D., "Uncle Wellons," was not able physically to attend the annual session of his conference this year, but his heart was there. He was kindly remembered, and the secretary was directed to send him a letter from the conference so stating. He now looks forward to his 100th anniversary, January 1st, and is preparing a sermon to preach at Elon that day.

At the close of his sermon, last Sunday, Dr. Ryan, of the First Church, Richmond, extended an ivitation to membership. There were six responses, two joining on profession of faith, and one each coming from the Methodist, Lutheran, Disciples, and Baptist Churches. One child was also christened. At the evening service, Dr. Ryan addressed the Police "Square Club," an organization made up of Masons who are members of the Police force of the city.

The Missionary Board of the North Carolina Conference was in annual session in the home of Miss Gertrude Brown, Elon College, N. C., on Friday, November 13th, and did a great day's work. Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, president, Raleigh; Mrs. W. A. Harper, secretary, Elon College, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, treasurer, Burlington; Mrs. C. H. Rowland, superintendent of the Cradle Roll, Greensboro; Mrs. Chandler and Miss Strader, district leaders; and Miss Brown, superintendent of Literature, were present. Miss Brown was elected field worker for the North Carolina women for the coming year.

The publicity committee of the Orphan Association for North Carolina has issued a call to all the men and women of the State to contribute the income or wage of one day to some one of the twenty orphan homes of the State. The donation is called for as a Thanksgiving Day offering. Briefly, the proposition which the association seeks to present to the State is this, send the equivalent of one day's income or salary for the past year to an orphan's home of your own choice, on or near Thanksgiving Day. More if you can, less if you can do no better. The offering may be forwarded direct to the orphanage, or through the church or fraternal order that owns and operates the orphanage. This appeal should have much weight in turning thousands of dollars into the treasury of the orphanages of the State.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

To Pastors of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference.

The Christian Missionary Association meets on Tuesday, December 8th, four weeks from this week. That is not long off—so get ready.

We feel the pastors should present the work of the C. M. A. in their fields and should endeavor to hold the membership strength of last year, and where possible to increase it by securing new memberships.

The campaign last year resulted successfully, but it was simply a temporary success. For permanent results, the members secured last year must be held and new members must be secured. We are not requesting an intensive campaign such as we had last year, but simply that the ministers will interest themselves in holding the C. M. A. up to last year's strength.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is publishing the C. M. A. memberships by groups of churches. So watch for the memberships in your church or churches. The C. M. A. membership is also listed by churches in the LIII. Volume, or 1925 Annual, pages 161-165. If you do not find your church listed it is because it is one of the eighteen churches in the conference in which there are no C. M. A. memberships. This does not include the Webster Community Church, for they joined with a church membership, October 28, 1925.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, President,

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHURCH OF THE OPEN DOOR.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked,
Nor standeth in the way of sinners,
Nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful,
But his delight is in the law of the Lord;
And in His law doth he meditate day and night.

"And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water,
That bringeth forth its fruit in its season,
Whose leaf also shall not wither
And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

—Psalm 1.

THE NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference met in its One Hundredth Annual Session at Salem Chapel, Forsyth County, N. C., on the morning of November 10th. Dr. P. H. Fleming of Burlington, N. C., who has been president for some years, called the conference to order and conducted appropriate devotional services. When the roll was called only a fair representation was present, both of pastors and of delegates. There are some three or four active ministers in this conference serving as pastors of churches of the conference, who did not attend the sessions at all. This seems to be an ailment peculiar to this conference. It is seldom that the writer has observed the absence of regular pastors in other conferences, except in case of extreme emergency. Since a conference is made up of ministers and churches, it would seem that a pastor is under bounden obligation to attend his Conference, except in cases of sickness or physical disability. Certainly the conference deserves this much of its ministers, whatever their other occupations may be, who have the oversight and charge of churches A large per cent of the churches was represented by delegates.

For the coming year, Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Greensboro, was elected president; Rev. R. A. Whitten, Reidsville, vice-president; Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, secretary; Dr. W. A. Harper, Elon College, assistant secretary; Brother H. C. Simpson, Greensboro, treasurer.

Deacon H. F. Samuel, of the local church, made a most tender and appropriate address of welcome. His words came from a heart that loved his church and his Lord and bespoke the deep appreciation and gratitude he and his associates felt in having the conference meet at Salem Chapel. Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, made the response and gave an inspirational address helpful to all. Dr. P. H. Fleming delivered the annual address, taking for his topic, "Christians —Called Disciples First at Antioch." It was a well prepared historical document. It contained so much information and valuable fact that the conference deemed it proper to request its publication in THE SUN, and then proceeded to raise $25.00 with which to have the same published in pamphlet form for free distribution. There will be one thousand copies of these pamphlets placed with THE SUN's Editor, Elon College, N. C., for distribution for those who may request the same. This valuable address will appear in an early issue of THE SUN. After the annual address, Revs. P. T. Klapp and J. L. Foster administered the communion service, which was reverently enjoyed.

At the afternoon service of the first day, Rev. R. A. Whitten conducted the devotionals and gave an interesting gospel talk.

The Executive Committee reported that during the year it had received into the conference, on recommendation of the Committee on Education, the United Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va., and its pastor, Rev. M. F. Allen. This church was represented by two delegates, and Brother Allen was enrolled as an elder. In the absence of the chairman of the Committes on Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor, also Moral Reform, the first report of the morning program of the second day, namely, that of the Committee on Religious Literature, was presented by its chairman, Rev. J. W. Patton. Under this report, there was an endeavor in the discussion to emphasize the reading of the Bible and other good books, and the urgency of subscribing for and reading our own church papers, especially THE CHRISTIAN SUN.. Managing Editor P. J. Kernodle was present and made some timely remarks.

On the morning of the second day, Rev. W. S. Alexander, D. D., led the devotionals, emphasizing the necessity of the church and all Christian people taking a firm stand for peace, it being Armistice Day. Rev. M. F. Allen submitted the report on Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor, giving an account of the convention held last summer, of the work which is being done through the Board of Religious Education, and of the prospect and plans for a convention this coming summer. Miss Pattie Coghill, secretary of the Board of Religious Education, was present and addressed the conference on the importance of her work. The Committee on Education presented its report, strongly endorsing Elon College and the great work it is doing for Christian Education in the field of Education, and calling for redoubled effort in behalf of the College now that the new plant entails new obligations.

The recommendation was made, which the conference adopted, that Licentiate H. E. Crutchfield be ordained and that W. J. B. Hines, a licentiate of the Methodist Church and a member of our United Christian Church, Lynchburg, be granted license to preach. Dr. W. A. Harper delivered a very lucid and impressive address on the Tests of a Christian College. In the afternoon Rev. M. F. Allen conducted the devotions, delivering a brief but logical and impressive sermon which was much appreciated by the conference. The report on Home Missions was presented by the chairman, Dr. P. H. Fleming, and recommended that after indebtedness, if any, to the North Carolina Conference was paid, the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention administer the funds coming to the Home Mission Board. Also the committee recommended, as did that on Foreign Missions, that March, 1926, be made Mission Month in keeping with request of the Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention, and that all of the churches be urged during that month to emphasize the matter of Missions, and also take an offering for the Emergency Mission Fund of $25,000.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, chairman, presented the report on Foreign Missions, which called attention to the needs of our Foreign Field; the growth, from the beginning of our work, and the present outlook and obligations in the foreign field, Japan and Porto Rico. Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, President of the Woman's Conference, made a report of the work the women had done the past year and of the annual session at Greensboro, October 30th. It was an inspirational report and made a deep impression upon the entire conference. This report is to be printed as a part of the conference proceedings in the Annual.

At night Dr. C. H. Rowland delivered an exceedingly helpful sermon.

On the third day, Dr. W. A. Harper, chairman, presented the report of the Budget Committee, recommending that the Budget System be used in the churches, the Every Member Canvass be made, and that the apportionments assigned to the churches be reported to them by the secretary of the conference for their confirmation.

The Editor of THE SUN presented the report on Stewardship and Tithing, which report emphasized the necessity of Stewardship teaching and Stewardship Institutes in our churches, and urged that Tithing be adopted throughout the church. Dr. C. H. Rowland delivered a most convincing address on the subject, and one that should produce great results. Stewardship literature was presented and distributed.

Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston gave a history of our Orphanage and made a plea that the Thanksgiving Offering this year be made larger than usual, if possible, since the need was so much greater. Dr. W. A. Harper, chairman, made a report on the Centennial Celebration and read a historical paper that is to be preserved in print, and should be read by all. Rev. J. S. Carden presented the report on Moral Reform and discussed the same with interest and helpfulness. The afternoon session, which was a continuation of the morning session, was taken up with special committee reports, including a Memoir to the late-lamented Rev. A. F. Iseley. Report on Superannuation by the chairman, Chas. D. Johnston.

An ordaining presbytery, consisting of Dr. P. H. Fleming, Dr. C. H. Rowland, Dr. W. S. Alexander and J. O. Atkinson, duly ordained Rev. H E. Crutchfield to the office of elder. Dr. P. H. Fleming, the retiring president, duly licensed Rev. W. J. B. Hines. The new officers for the coming year were properly presented and introduced to the conference, and on assuming the gavel, Dr. C. H. Rowland thanked the conference, declaring that it would be his purpose to do his best in carrying on the work so well carried on by his predecessor, Dr. P. H. Fleming.

The hospitality of Salem Chapel community was abundant and delightful. The next session of the conference meets at New Lebanon, Rockingham County, N. C. J. O. A.

SUPPORTING CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

November 1st was the day for the Christian Education offering in our denomination. We of the South are accustomed to the apportionment plan for supporting enterprises of our church, but by special order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Religious Education, of which Dr. W. T. Walters is chairman, and Mr. C. H. Stephenson of Raleigh, N. C., is treasurer, is engaged in an effort to get all the churches of the Southern Convention to contribute a free will offering for the work of general Christian education in our denomination.

In this connection it should be said that the Board of Christian Education supports Defiance and Palmer Colleges with annual grants, in which we of the South do not participate. We do, however, participate in all the other work which this board promotes.

Particularly do we profit by the editorial work which the board conducts, by the work of the field secretaries of the board, and by the scholarship grants to ministers and missionaries in training. In regard to this latter, it should be said that this year $4,200 is appropriated for scholarships, and that of this amount two-thirds is expected to go to ministers and missionaries in preparation who are members of the Southern Christian Convention and in college at Elon or Bethlehem, or in some university, professional, or graduate school.

It certainly becomes the members of the Christian Church in the South, therefore, to support the work of Christian Education with liberal offerings. The quota for the whole denomination is 40 cents per member, but for the Southern Convention, Dr. Walters has felt that 25 cents per member would be ample, since we do not participate in the grants to the colleges as such.

Many of our churches in the South have already made liberal offerings for this work, but many of them have not yet, for some reason or another, made their offerings. This is written in the hope that ministers and churches will take this matter to heart, pray it through, and then be as liberal for this work of Christian leadership in our denomination as their sense of the fitness of things will approve. We certainly have everything to gain and nothing to lose by liberally supporting Christian Education in our church.

THE PROGRESS OF PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

By R. A. Haynes,

Federal Prohibition Commissioner.

[An address before the National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League, Chicago, Ill., November 6, 1925.]

(Concluded from last issue.)

Remember, too, that the Prohibition Unit does not control the imposition of penalties. We catch the liquor criminal, the courts do the rest. We cannot determine whether sentences are light or heavy; whether jail sentences or fines are given; whether the guilty shall be prosecuted or freed, but it was the Federal Prohibition Force which captured the criminal, gathered the evidence and made possible the prosecution of the cases. How well this has been done is evidenced by the fact that the Federal courts have had more than 133,800 convictions for violations of the Prohibition law in the last four fiscal years, in the 169,600 case terminated, or 76.5 per cent. These convictions carried aggregate jail sentences of 11,621 years, and fines and penalties * * * totaled over $17,600,000. In addition * * * more than $4,125,00 have been covered into the Federal Treasury under the tax and tax-penalty provisions * * *. Thousands of other cases have been turned over to the local courts * * *.

The average jail sentence in Indiana for violation of the National Prohibition Act is 185 days and the average fine is $525. While in New York City in federal court at a four day sitting, about a year ago, the average fine was $24 in 256 cases. Nine prisoners were fined $5.00 each and 132 were fined $10.00 each. You can draw your own conclusions as to the effect of such procedure in each case.

Propagandists for the liquor element talk much of the cost of enforcement. They add the appropriation for the Prohibition Unit to the Coast Guard appropriation and other budget items and point to the total as though that represented the cost of enforcement. If we had no liquor prohibition, the Nation would have had to enlarge and better equip the Coast Guard to maintain our immigration and narcotic laws and to meet other growing needs. The four years' work indicated by the figures I have been quoting has been accomplished with a total appropriation of $37,091,770, which sum also included appropriations for the enforcement of the Harrison Narcotic Law. During that time the Narcotic Division has also covered into the United States Treasury as a result of narcotic enforcement the sum of $4,430,305.22.

The enforcement of prohibition was never intended to be a revenue gathering device. It is not expected to even pay its own way, but the bootlegger is paying his full fare to the penitentiary in most cases. Instead of being a heavy drain on the public purse, prohibition has a comparatively slight balance against it on the books, when the receipts from penalties imposed on liquor outlaws are balanced with the appropriation.

Since July, 1922, when the "padlock" method was brought into general use, more than 6,400 injunctions have been instituted, final action having been taken on over 6,000, of which 4,202 have been made permanent. This procedure is being followed to a greater extent than ever before. * * *When property which has been used in violations is padlocked, property owners lose revenue. Touch the pocket nerve long enough, and realty owners will stop leasing their property to those who break the country's laws. * * *

Prior to Prohibition about 1,300 brewries were making 2,000,000,000 gallons of beer a year. At the present time about 400 cereal beverage manufacturers are making about 160,000,000 gallons of near-beer a year.

Prior to Prohibition, annual consumption of beverage was about 130,000,000 gallons a year. There was an annual production of about 42,000,000 gallons of wine. Last year about 1,900,000 gallons of whiskey were released on permit for medicinal purposes, and about 8,500,000 gallons of wine were made, and about 5,000,000 gallons were used for medicinal and sacramental purposes.

* * * Experience during the past four years has taught that the changed sources of supply, available to bootleggers, made different alignment of organization necessary—indeed made necessary the closest co-operation of all the forces of the Government which relate to Prohibition Enforcement * * * Under the new plan of Federal Administration of this law, you have learned, the Federal Government is going to place a heavier responsibility upon the State, county, and municipal officers than ever before. * * * For three years I have been preaching this doctrine, but have been prevented from practicing it to the letter, by reason of the fact that in many local communities the people did not require their officers to do their duty, and in many communities they have not done their duty. This condition must be corrected. There are 300,000 peace officers in the United States, whose duty it is to enforce the Prohibition Law, just as it is the duty of the Federal Agent. These responsibilities must be assumed by local authorities.

Upon the Federal Government rests the responsibility for many phases of enforcement which the States cannot meet, but, again let me say, the States have their responsibility clearly outlined, and we must abandon utterly our whole conception of a Federal Union of Sovereign States, if we are to surrender to the Federal authority the local police power, which belongs to the States. As co-ordination increases, efficiency in enforcement increases, and that process is developing with each succeeding month and year.

While the record I have just placed before you, I believe is a very creditable one, the achievements of enforcement have just begun. As public sentiment expresses itself more forcibly, the violations of the law will decrease. There will be more observance and less need of enforcement. This policy was written in the Constitution by the will of the people. That will is still behind Prohibition. The people, however, have been so busy about many things that they are not as actively and personally supporting it as they should. They have taken in the past, too impersonal an attitude. They have left to public officials duties which belong to every citizen. The Supreme Court has clearly spoken on the duty of citizens to co-operate with officials. When Americans realize that they govern instead of being governed, then many a problem besides Prohibition will vanish. * * *

Then, too, voters must insist that legislators shall register their will in statutes and that administrative officers shall be held responsible for executing those statutes; then democracy will be a reality and not a theory.

Our great citizenry too needs to be more active exponents of the truth. When the press prints the lies of the wets, write to the editor and present the truth and request its publication. When a friend tells you that he has heard some one say that Prohibition has failed, and that you can get a drink anywhere, make him chase that story back to its sources. Loose-talking is responsible for discouragement of many friends of prohibition. But no amount of "they say" evidence can refute the evidences of prohibition's success which you yourself can see on the streets of your city, in your mills and factories, in your banks and offices, in your courts and almshouses. The American people have done a marvelous thing in blotting out the source of much of our former crime, disease, insanity, and poverty. No whispered innuendoes can refute these evident facts.

So taking all things into consideration, I believe the facts warrant a fair degree of satisfaction. With the five-year accomplishments as a whole, many problems have been presented and continue to present themselves daily in different aspects of the work, but just as each turn of the road reveals a new obstacle, so it has meant the leaving behind of many solved problems which had at a first glance seemed insurmountable. In other words, the problems of today are but incidents in the larger progress of the work, and in the years to come, the achievements will overshadow whatever obstacles may have arisen.

"It matters not how deep intrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long;
Faint not, fight on—tomorrow comes the song."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

As a Delegate, commissioned by the Governor of Virginia, I attended the Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, in Chicago, November 5-9, 1925. Three meetings were held each day: forenoon, afternoon, and evening. Forty-six States were represented. The meetings were held in the Temple, the great 22-story building in the heart of the city, erected by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The church and Sunday School departments are on the first and second floors. The rest of the building is occupied by offices of all sorts. It occupies a place once surrounded by saloons, in what is called the Loop. That part of the city is now occupied by skyscrapers, for banks, hotels, and business houses. It is really the heart of that great city of four million people.

One man who attends that Sunday School has to come seventeen miles, and he never misses a Sunday.

It would be safe to say that a thousand people attended the three meetings a day. The meeting was great in men and women who were leaders; in the review of the history of Prohibition; and in the purposes and plans for the future. The past reveals wonderful achievements in the elimination of the saloons and all the evils that followed in their train. The financial gain in business improvement, savings accounts in banks by people who used to spend their earnings for drink; the better and personally owned homes; the improvement in the dress and education of children; and the better conditions in city life, are some of the results. Five Bishops, five United States Senators, nine Judges, eight Congressmen, two Governors, several of the great women of the country, attorneys, business men, Lincoln C. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States; Rear Admiral Billard, Commandant United States Coast Guard, who gave a lucid history of the Coast Guard and its present service in protecting this country against the rum-runners on the sea, and many other outstanding persons of position and character graced the platform, honored the occasion, and delivered great messages.

It is safe to say that it was an earnest meeting of representatives from the church, the State, and the people, and the testimony was unanimous as to the success of prohibition in its largest aspects, and the united determination of all legitimate interests to clear the nation of illegitimate sources of supply and demand for alcohol. This is the great task for the future. There is a determined and religious purpose on the part of the National League to rid the nation of this evil to individual, home, business, church and State. Law enforcement can never do the whole thing of making this a total abstinence nation; it must be burned into the conscience through the church, instilled into the minds of the young through the schools, and made offensive by a clean public sentiment.

Foreign nations are looking to America for example and help in their deliverance from this evil, and this is the greatest opportunity in our history to help make a sober world. That is the great task of the temperance forces, and our failure would discourage other nations in their desire to rid themselves of drink.

ELON LETTER.

There can be no denying that there is a Youth Movement in the United States as well as in the rest of the world at this time. There is to be held, for example, an interdenominational student conference in Evanston, Ill., December 29th to January 1st. The Board of Christian Education of our church was given the opportunity to have a representative on the executive committee of this conference. It did not feel that it should accept membership on the executive committee, but did feel that it should keep in close touch with the conference itself. Only students, it should be said, will be allowed to participate in this conference, and the purpose of the conference is a gathering of the students of America in: "A student conference for the evaluation of the church as a definite expression in organization and action of the teachings of Jesus, with the end in view of working in and through it, if possible, for the purpose of bringing the Kingdom of God a little nearer than it seems to be at present."

The International Council of Religious Education is to hold its next convention in Birmingham, Alabama, April 12th to 19th, and in connection with the International Council there is to be held a congress of young people, where the young people of the churches will on an interdenominational and territorial basis be privileged to face their obligations and privileges in respect to the Kingdom of God.

Our own denomination is to meet in quadrennial session in October, 1926, at Urbanna, Ill., and just preceding or just succeeding the convention itself, there is to be held a national young people's congress, in which the young people of our denomination will have opportunity to face the Christian situation in their own lives, in our church, and in the nation. The details for this gathering of young people have not been as yet worked out, but it is expected that this congress of our young people will mean much for the future development of the spiritual and religious life of the new leadership of our church.

Last July, the young people of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference were authorized by the Christian Endeavor and Sunday School Convention which met at Shallow Ford Church, to proceed with the organization of congresses that the young people might train themselves in Christian service and responsibility. The resolution which passed the convention at Shallow Ford reads as follows:

"Whereas, our young people need training and responsibility in Christian service.

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the executive committee of this convention are hereby authorized in their discretion to call our young people in regional or sectional groups or congresses quarterly and for the entire conference annually;

"That counselors for these groups or congresses be appointed by this same committee, one for the young men and one for the young women, who shall act with their officers;

"That young people over fifteen be considered eligible as voting members; and that auxiliary congresses for boys and girls from nine to fifteen be conducted at the same time and place, with a superintendent to be appointed by the executive committee of this convention."

I am informed that there will be held on the fifth Sundays through the year congresses of young people in at least three regions or sections of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. It is hoped that these meetings will do much for training the young people to feel personally responsible for the progress of the Kingdom and, if they shall have this happy result, great will be the blessing not only to them in their personal experience, but to the church itself in progress and achievement.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

In the reports of the committees on Education of the Alabama, and the Georgia and Alabama Conferences, Bethlehem College was reassured of their loyalty and co-operation in a larger way than ever before. This is an index of their growing interest in their own institution. Our folks are getting interested in higher education as they never have been before.

Parents, the question of educating your sons and daughters is a very vital one, and you cannot well afford to pass up your own Bethlehem College, which is a Christian institution, for one which is purely secular. If I were to ask why you want your sons and daughters to go to school, you would probably give one of the following reasons: To prepare them to cope with the world; to make them useful citizens; to enable them to build up a name for themselves; to enrich their lives and make them happier and fuller. All of these motives are indeed worthy, and if it accomplishes even one, the sacrifice will not have been in vain. But are you assured of even this one? Before going further with your preparation ponder over this question long and earnestly, for the future of your children may be at stake.

The college problem may be a very difficult one to solve, but after all it contains but two factors, and after you have studied each carefully you have at least approached a solution. These two problems are the student and the school. If you have already made a careful diagnosis of your boy and girl, then turn your attention to the school, for it is better for them never to have seen within the walls of an institution of higher learning than to have seen within the walls of the wrong one.

There are three ways to study human character, viz: by what the character says, by what the people say about him, and by what he does; so it is with the school. For the first study the catalogues; for the second consult those who are able to give you an unbiased opinion; and for the last, watch the boys who are under its care and influence. The first and second are important, but the third is the vital test of any school. You judge the tree by its fruit; so you judge the college by its boys.

It is not the library that makes the college, or the well equipped buildings; it is not the beautiful grounds or the handsome fraternity buildings; it is not the record of its ball team, or the fame of its dramatic club; it is not the number of students enrolled, or the vast learning of its leading instructors. Important as these are, they shrink into insignificance in the presence of real worth. And the real worth of any college lies in its Christian influence. Lack of equipment will be largely compensated for by the training received in real character building, for one good habit formed is a more valuable aquisition than much study in the psychological nature of habit forming; one bad habit acquired is more detrimental to life and character than the lack of much learning.

Parents, since you have your own Bethlehem College, which stands for Christian character, first and always, we shall expect you to send your sons and daughters to this institution. So please do not disappoint us to your own regret.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENNISON, Secretary.

ITEMS FROM OUR REPORT TO THE GENERAL BOARD.

With December 31, 1924, the separate and temporary organization of the "Forward Movement of the Christian Church" came to a close. With January 1, 1925, "The Bureau of Christian Stewardship and Promotion" became its successor and took over and continues all the work of the Forward movement. All unpaid pledges were turned over to it for collection and Forward Movement subscribers are urged to continue annually their usual subscriptions to carry on the work so successfully begun through the work of the Forward Movement.

FINANCIAL SUMMARY.

On December 31, 1924, the total amount that had been pledged toward the special million of dollars to be raised by the Forward Movement and paid to the several boards of the church, was in cash, pledges, bonds, $803,070.16. On the above at the same date there had paid in and set to work for the Kingdom $456,761.68. The total expense of the entire Forward Movement from its inception to that date, only one item of which was the raising of the above fund, was $71,970.71. In other words, for each dollar spent by the Forward Movement, some $6.35 have been turned into the treasuries of the various departments of the church to supplement the work already being done by each of them.

We regard this financial aid to the various departments of the church as only one item, and that one of the lesser values, in the great work that the Forward Movement has done. All who have had a financial part in the movement may well rejoice. These sums do not include the great sums raised by the Southern Convention, nor the special funds raised by our colleges. The general work of the church has been re-organized, new departments have been formed, more workers have been added to our force, more field work has been done than in the whole history of our church, our outlook and life as a people have been raised to a higher level, a larger spirit of co-operation prevails.

We have been as patient as possible with those who have been under a period of economic depression and needed more time than the five years for their payment, but now every unpaid pledge should soon be in our hands. Their payment is rightly expected. They have been counted upon. They are needed. They are past due. The work suffers without them. Those who have been blessed so that they have already met their pledge in full should now be glad to renew and continue their subscriptions annually. The work must be reduced without them. There is no other outcome.

FROM OUR FILES.

Miss Ruth Kirkpatrick says, "I consider tithing both a duty and a pleasure. God has been very good to me and I am glad to return to Him his just share."

Miss Kirkpatrick is under appointment by our Board to go as a missionary. She is taking additional, special training now in Northwestern University.

Rev. Lester T. Proctor, Delphi, Indiana, says regarding the Every Member Canvass, "To be a steward is to realize our responsibility to God. The Every Member Canvass emphasizes this very thing. It increases the amount given, because we become intelligent, habitual, systematic givers; giving becomes a spiritual exercise in our worship; the credit of the church is made good, and deficites are done away with; the membership is unified with a common opportunity. All this helps to make a happy church."

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

Mr. C. E. Booz, Stewardship Secretary of the Western Convention believes in saying it with flowers, and he sends this beautiful bouquet which we greatly appreciate: "I congratulate you upon your splendid report to the General Board. I am sure that it is not all that you would like it to be but owing to the fact that the work was done at a time when prosperity was waning, it is indeed to me a wonderful report. I congratulate you upon the manner in which this was handled. It seems almost marvelous that so great a work could be done at so small a cost. Every lick must have counted for three or four chips."

We especially appreciate this estimate of the Forward Movement and its work, because it comes from one of our well known business laymen.

YOUNG PEOPLE IN ACTION.

One wonders what CHRISTIAN SUN readers think of a Young People's Missionary Society that can and will within a year give more to Missions than some of our entire conferences give. Yet, we have such a society, and we wish some of the older people who think that the young people don't care would sit up and take note. A few evenings ago, a good woman interested in missions, asked the Girl's Missionary Society of Suffolk, Va., if they would undertake to buy the pews at a total cost of $210.00 for our Rocky Ford Church. That did not phase those young people in the least, but they voted then and there that it should be done, and it was done, and is done and the money is already in hand and the pews are ordered.

Now this society had just paid the past year $75.00 on our Elk Spur building, and had sent up to the Woman's Conference $385.00. Let some of our dear friends who feel that the young people do not care, get a pencil and add these figures together and see if the total is not $670.00, which is more money for missions than either one of two or three Christian Conferences donate during the whole year to advance the Kingdom of their Lord in the world. Many of these same friends will tell you that the young people are indifferent to the claims of the gospel or to the calls and claims of the church, and nine times out of ten, the ones who say this are not willing to do for the church what these young people are doing.

How do we know, how do nine-tenths of the church members know, how do one-half of the pastors know what the young people can or will do for the church or for the advancement of the Kingdom? A young lady said a while ago that she believed her church was going to die. The reason she gave was that the older people were talking it to death and were not inviting the young people to get busy and do something for the church. Ours is an age of action, and young people think in terms of deeds, while many of us are disputing about creeds. Some of us mature folks spend much time in discussing what the world is believing; young people as a rule are willing to show the world what they are doing. Let's give our young people a chance at doing things for the church, undertaking things to help their fellowman and see what happens then. In the day of final judging, we are told, that the decision will be rendered "According to the deeds done in the body," and not according to creeds held in the head and proclaimed with the tongue. Let's give the young people a chance in the church and its activities as well as in the world and its waywardness.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONGRESS.

BY LUCY M. ELDREDGE,
Secretary of Young People's Work, Dayton, Ohio.

IT'S HISTORY.

The beginning of the Young People's Congress in our church is a story which is interesting and as fascinating as a story of the desires and achievements of young people and their friends can be. Briefly, a little more than four years ago, leaders in the Eastern Indiana Conference began to feel that their program was neither reaching nor holding their young people. Sunday School attendance was falling off, and Christian Endeavor Societies were becoming fewer and fewer. Investigation was made. Church leaders were consulted. Plans were made so that at their quarterly conference held in Muncie, in January, 1922, a double program was planned, one for adults, one for young people. From this meeting came the fully organized Boys and Girl's Congress of Eastern Indiana, which has since changed its name to the Young People's Congress. The first annual session was held at Farmland, August 30, 1922, with a much larger attendance, and each year since has seen remarkable growth in numbers and work accomplished. Miss Marguerite Strong has been the executive who has directed much of this successful work, and she is still active in the organization, although Mr. Earl Dudley of Modoc was elected president by the five hundred enthusiastic youth who attended the 1925 meeting.

Other Conferences were inspired by the example and work of Eastern Indiana. Miami, Ohio, in June, 1924, organized a Congress and adopted a program which is being carried forward. In November, 1924, Northwestern Ohio Young people came to Lima, sixty strong to begin their organization, and completed their plans at a second meeting at Lima, a month later, with more than one hundred and fifty present. On June 17, 1925, with a hard rain falling all morning, one hundred and fifty Western Indiana young folk came to Lebanon and began their work together. And so the story goes, too long to relate here, of how sixteen conferences have begun a work which sympathetically understood and supported, and wisely directed may be a power for tremendous good in the lives of our youth and the work of the Kingdom.

IT'S PURPOSE.

The purpose adopted by a number of these organizations reads: "The purpose of this congress shall be to help the young people of this conference to live true Christian lives, to give them an opportunity for Christian comradeship and service, and to train them for the largest usefulness for Christ in His Kingdom."

The congress is an organization of youth. All the youth of the Church are included. They are looking at the whole program of the Church and are seeking ways in which they may go forward together in a common task. The purpose is not to promote any certain form of organization nor to carry on any one phase of the work of the Church, but to enlist all the youth of every church under a common banner of loyalty to Jesus Christ to do His work.

It's Organization.

All congresses do not have exactly the same form of organization. In a number of vital points, however, they are very similar. The officers are young people, upon whom rests the responsibility of the Congress. There are always "counsellors," pastors, Christian laymen or women, who know youth and can be sympathetic and wise friends. In each church, the congress officers seek to line up a key young person, or better still two (a girl and a boy), through whom they may reach all the young people of each church. Churches conveniently located are grouped into districts which may hold meetings more frequently than is possible in a whole conference. An annual rally is held in the conference, and usually quarterly meetings in the districts.

It's Work.

Most of the congresses have adopted three major departments, or lines of work, each of which has a chairman.

The Department of Evangelism and Life Service works through the young people of all the churches to win other young people to Christ and to secure decisions for life-time service. Eastern Indiana, Miami-Ohio, Northwestern Ohio, and other congresses, have done splendid work in this department. In Northwestern Ohio, from December, 1924, to April, 1925, an actual record was made of 363 young people won by young people and added to their churches in that six months period.

The Department of Missions encourages missionary study and giving. In Miami-Ohio, the young people set out this year to support both Angie Crewe and Elizabeth Howsare. In Western Indiana, the young people are making splendid progress toward their goal of "$500.00 this year for the support of the McKnights." In Eastern Indiana, the districts all have held missionary meetings this quarter, and are undertaking the support of the work at Haverhill, Massachusetts, for a whole month this year. In Southern Ohio, a loyal group of workers is hustling to furnish a room at Franklinton, and also to reach their foreign mission goal. And others are working as royally.

The Department of Christian Education strives to promote a fourfold program for young people in every church, and endeavors to have every church represented at a Summer Conference or School, and by one or more students in one of our Church Colleges during the year. In the summer of 1925, fifty-nine Central Convention young people came to our Defiance School, and much of this attendance can be traced directly to congress activity.

It's Future.

Who can tell?

We are looking definitely forward to a national gathering of our young people near the time of the quaddrennial next autumn.

Nearly every week brings in inquiries, or news of progress and plans of new organizations. Many letters are coming from our young people who are being inspired by these meetings and this work with other young people.

The future of the Young People's Congress will be told in our church ranks, in the foreign field, in the entire service of our church of tomorrow, and these splendid young people go forward in their Christian living.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson LX.—November 29, 1925

Subject: "Paul Before Agrippa."

Golden Text: "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—Acts 26: 19.

Lesson: Acts 25: 1-26: 32.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 43: 1-5.

Reference Material: Matt. 10: 32, 33, 37, 38, 39; Luke 23: 13-23.

Let us catch up the thread of the story since the events of our last lesson. Paul has been in prison for two years. When Porcius Festus became governor in Felix's place, the Jews immediately became active again. They tried to have Paul brought to Jerusalem for trial, intending to lay in wait and kill him on the way, but Festus insisted that they appear before him in Casarea. They went down there pell mell and laid many grevious complaints against Paul, which they could not prove as usual. But Festus, although he felt sure of the innocence of Paul, was so eager to please the Jews that he was about to send Paul back to Jerusalem for trial, when Paul appealed to Caesar. In view of the circumstances there was nothing for Festus to do but to grant his appeal, and so far as the Jews were concerned, the case was closed.

It happened, however, that King Agrippa and Bernice, his wife, came to pay their respects to Festus, and after hearing about Paul they expressed a desire to hear him. He was accordingly summoned to appear before them and given an opportunity to speak for himself. The lesson as printed is only a part of the speech which twenty-sixth chapter in order to get a better understanding and appreciation of the facts as set forth by Paul. Beginning with a gracious, but sincere introduction, Paul reminds his royal hearers of both his manner of life and of his religious faith from early life. He also defends the reasonableness of the resurrection. He refers to his zeal for the historic faith, as evidenced by his bitter and relentless persecution of those of the "way." Then he recounts the story of his conversion, a story that has a note of reality in it that gives it a note of authority. From thence he passes on to the vision of the work which the risen Christ commissioned him to do—he was to be a minister and a witness of these things and of things yet to be revealed to him; he was to go to the Gentiles to turn them from darkness unto light; he was to be an instrument in turning them from the power of Satan unto God; he was to declare unto them forgiveness of sins and inheritance of eternal life. It was indeed a heavenly vision.

"Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision," said Paul. There was the secret of the man's life. He had seen the risen Christ. He had accepted His command. He immediately accepted His commission. From the moment that he rose from the ground on that memorable day, until the present hour, he had followed "the Gleam." It had led him far, but he had followed it. It had led him through desert and mountains, through heat and cold, through persecution, suffering, imprisonment, through the dark valley even unto the shadow of death, but he had followed it. Paul, like Jesus, had set himself to follow the vision, and he had followed it. Beginning at Damascus, he had gone to Jerusalem, throughout the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, in an ever enlarging circle and with ever deepening zeal and passion. He had preached that men should repent and turn to God, and that they should show that their repentance was real by the works which they did. Here was the secret of Paul's life. In a moment of thrilling experience he had seen a heavenly vision of the finer possibilities of his own life in its relation to the Kingdom of God, and through all the years, he had followed that vision. It is the secret of any great man's life. If we would succeed, we must follow the Gleam.

"Having, therefore, obtained help of God." It is always thus. Those who have committed themselves to the program of God can count on God's help. He had promised the disciples that if they went into all the world He would be with them even unto the end of the world, and here He had fulfilled His promise. Paul was a great man, but he never could have accomplished what he did unaided. The source of his strength was in the help which came from God through Jesus Christ. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." The man who does the will of God need fear no man. One, with God, is a majority.

One catches something of the fervor and power with which Paul spoke about Christ when he reads that Festus thought he was mad or beside himself. Festus thought Paul was simply a crazed fanatic on religion, but Paul assured him that the words he spoke were worlds of truth and soberness. Turning to King Agrippa, he appealed to him as to his belief in the prophets, and then answered his own question.

It has been the practice of Christian ministers to interpret Agrippa's answer, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian," as one of those instances where a man came so near to a decision for Christ, but did not make it. This is, of course an effective interpretation; but it is hardly warranted by the facts in the case. Agrippa's answer was rather ridicule, an ironical answer. The idea, he implies, of thinking that I, the great Agrippa, would become a Christian! There was something pathetic as well as courteous in Paul's answer. He must have felt deeply as he replied that he wished that all those who heard him might be as he was except for his bonds—that they might know the joy and the peace which he had in his heart, and the blessed hope both for this life and the life to come.

The royal audience agreed that Paul had spoken some great truths, and that he was innocent. But like so many people, they were hearers and not doers of the word, and thereby they deceived themselves.

Teaching Points.

1. Happy is the man who can appeal to his manner of life as the ultimate argument in behalf of his religious beliefs.
2. Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead?
3. Conscience is not an infallible guide unless it is lighted by the Spirit of Christ.
4. A man's Christian life ought to be rooted in a definite experience, but it ought not to stop there.
5. The servant of God is to be a witness both of the things he has seen and of the things which shall be revealed unto him.
6. The minister of God is to turn men from darkness unto light and from the power of Satan unto God.
7. Success in life demands that we follow the vision of our highest moments.
8. Visions demand action.
9. A vision of Christ ought to make us do some things, and keep us from doing other things.
10. God helps those who undertake His program.
11. The preaching of the Cross is to them that perish foolishness.
12. A real Christian desires all men to share his blessings in Christ.
13. It is not enough to hear the truth; we must do the truth.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, November 29, 1925.

Topic: "Victories of Christian Friendliness in China."

Lesson: Acts 2: 38-47.

Bible Hints.

To repent is to change one's mind. This is the gospel's challenge to China. (V. 38.)

The Holy Spirit brings new life, new courage, new hope, new love—treasures offered to China and to all men. (V. 38.)

The Christian life is often manifested in sacrifice to meet great needs. In China Christian generosity is remarkable. (V. 45.)

What China needs today is Christian teachers to show the better way, to live before the people the better life. (V. 46.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

American friendliness in remitting the Boxer indemnity, which was used by China for educational purposes, did great good. It created confidence, the basis of good will.

Western teachers in China have opened up gateways of life to China. Education has spread to the women. Men are even now teaching their wives. Girls go to school now, and the police have orders to protect them.

A Few Illustrations.

Endeavorers are supporting orphans in China. They are cast out by parents, and taken in by Christians, friends of the needy.

Six million people homeless in one of China's floods! What a story of suffering! The Red Cross came on the scene, and its work of mercy broke down all opposition, making friends for life.

To Think About.

What influence has Christian example on Chinese homes?

What victories has the gospel won in China?

How may we help missions in China?

"We cannot introduce Western ideas wholesale. We must help gradually, not by urging, but by example and patient teaching."—Mr. Tao.

"Woman, ignorant, has made China Buddhist; will not woman, educated, make China Christian."—Dr. W. A. P. Martin.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving, as most people know, is purely an American festival, having its origin in the earliest colonial days, and in the very heart of rigid, steadfast New England. In 1620, the Pilgrim fathers and their devoted clan landed on the rocky coast of Massachusetts.

The traditional story runs thus: During the summer following the arrival of the colonists, all the supply of food brought from over the seas was exhausted. The first harvest planted in the New World was far from ripe and the leaders one day awoke to the grim fact that there remained but one pint of corn in all the settlement. A sorry plight was this, and well might they exclaim, like the disciples of old, "What is this among so many?" It was little enough, indeed, since the days of miracles was supposed to have passed. However, from the seven little log huts nestled not far from the shore, the people were summoned together and the slender stock of provisions impartially divided among them, five kernels being the share of each man and woman and child. With what sad hearts they must have eaten this frugal meal, knowing not where a bit was to come from on tomorrow. Nor did it come, and three or four months passed before any of them again tasted corn or bread, being forced to live on shell-fish, berries, ground-nuts, acorns, and other edibles the wilds afforded.

Imagine how anxiously they watched the ripening of the crops, praying for rain and praying for no rain as they thought they needed and wishing for the greatest yield they ever had. At last the gathering was made, and it is said that the corn yielded well and the barley indifferently good, but the peas were a failure owing to the drought and the late sowing. Though barely satisfied, Governor Bradford sent out four skilled sportsmen in quest of fowls that they might make a feast and in a special manner rejoice and praise God together. Venison, wild birds, wild turkeys, and other game were brought back by these hunters, and there in the wilderness the first Thanksgiving Turkey was roasted and eaten, while for three whole days the hardy Puritans feasted and made merry, entertaining as their guest King Massasoit and ninety Indian warriors.

This was the first harvest home festival. We ought to remember this as we gather about our Thanksgiving board and keep the National feast. This is the beginning of our National holiday. It was observed independently for an hundred years after this, but in 1864, Lincoln made it National, and it has been observed generally ever since. We may never have passed through such an experience as our fore-fathers did, but that is because we have been recipients of greater blessings even than they, and we are all the more obligated to give thanks.

We share with all mankind the common blessings of the world, but we are slow to bow our heads in thanks to Him who hath given them to us. The heavens are clothed with glory. The earth is decked with radient beauty. The sun sheds its light and life by day, and the stars twinkle for us by night. The brook ripples with sweet melody and the birds sing the heavenly carols. The flowers blossom in sweet fragrance and the fruit and the crops yield their increase. The mountains reach up to the heavens for refreshing and the whole earth spends its strength in our behalf. Truth and life flood the universe and God claims our souls. And for all this we are slow to give thanks. No wonder that the Scriptures emphatically enjoin us to Give thanks always for all things, speaking to yourselves in Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord."

It is a pity that there should be any person consciously knowing these things, to disregard them. Let us give thanks this week, and in doing so remember the true meaning of it all. There is no greater sign of general decay of virtue than a want of gratitude for life's blessings. Thanks be to God always. Let others have their say and their day, but let the melody of eternal joy ripple through our souls.

H. E. ROUNTREE.

MONDAY.

THE SIN OF INGRATITUDE.

"Where are the nine?"—Luke 17: 17.

Ten outcast lepers stood by the road and appealed unto Jesus for help as He was passing by. Apparently without any demonstration and without consciousness of His work for them He granted their request and sent them to the priest for inspection, which was customary in all cases of cures of diseases. Well, as they went they happened to notice that their skin was clean. They realized for a certainty that they were well men. An unseen power of heaven had certainly done something for them. One of these fellows so grateful for what had been done for him left the party and returned to look up this fellow who had wrought the healing to give him thanks and glorify God. The others, perhaps not ungrateful, nevertheless went on their way apparently without a thought of giving personal thanks to the author of their health.

Are we guilty? Nothing particularly striking or marvelous has occured. We go along with an even tenor of our way, as it were, without a ripple on the sea, receiving His daily blessings of life, His salvation of our souls, and we fret at trifles and forget to give God thanks for his many blessings. Cleansed, but not giving Him the glory. How we are proned to stress what we have not, to covet the good things of others who happen to have some things of life we have not—to look on the good things of life, pleasures, comforts and even luxuries, as a birthright, and think that we should receive them without God's hand of mercy or discipline. What a sin!

The greatest work of heaven or earth is glorifying God. It is a greater mark of holiness than even humble contrition of devout prayer. It is a testimony of answered prayer. It is unselfish and loving appreciation for what has been done and a soulful effort to express it. It is the only thing we can do for our heavenly Father, and it is a thing that is well pleasing in His sight.

Prayer.—Our Father, give unto us, Thy children, more and deeper faithfulness in the discharge of our debt of gratitude. Oh make us dilligent to offer unto Thee, not only today but always, a soulful gratitude that is sweet as sweet spices and frankinsense and myrrh. Make it an emmanating influence in us as common as the dew-drop sparkling from the leaves of the hedges in the morning, or the sprinkling of the sunbeams upon the rippling waters of the lake.

We begin this week with praise to Thee. We want to declare Thy mercies forever. Forgive us of what we lack and help us to do well. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE PERSONAL THANKSGIVING SACRIFICE.

"Let them sacrifice the sacrifice of thanksgiving."—Psa. 107: 22.

Most things round about us have a spiritual meaning. To Jesus Siloam was living water, and so was the well. A golden candlestick was the "light of the world." Gifts were expressions of love. Loves and fishes were the resources of God. The breaking of bread was the picture of His death. The drinking of water was emblematic of His power. In everything, not a turn omitted, He gave thanks to God.

To recognize the gifts of God in the things of life to which we are related, is the greatest inspiration which ever prompted a human soul. It is gratitude. And worship and the offering of self for service is the highest form of expression of that gratitude. Think over this: Willie who had received healing from the doctor said, "Doctor, my mama will never hear the last of you."

Prayer.—Our Father, if we fail Thee, forbid that it shall be of our hearts. We love Thee and desire to serve Thee. We desire to realize at all times what Thou hast done for us and we desire to render unto Thee all the homage of our souls. Forgive us of our ingratitude and failures and help us to live in continual praise of Thee. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

COUNTING YOUR BLESSINGS.

Can you count your bessings? They were in a prayer-meeting and a dear saint, blind for fifty years, sat on the front seat. The pastor read the hymn, "Count your blessings." The man shook his head and said, "It can't be done. If I do I will never get through." This is our text today, then: "I will bless the Lord at all times. His praise shall contiually be in my mouth."

Prayer—Our Father, when we try to think of all our blessings, indeed we are overwhelmed with a realization of them. We cannot name them. Thou would'st not have us name them all. Oh, but give unto us the spirit to know them, and forgive us of the sin in what we have lacked. Deepen our consecration and spiritual life. Make us Thine in gratitude and all that an humble and grateful child should be. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE SPIRIT OF A FEW GREAT MEN.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits unto me?"—Psa. 116: 12.

Gratitude is the sweetener of all life's relations, and ingratitude is a cold, hard, strong hand.

"I wish to be adorned with every virtue, yet there is nothing which I can esteem more highly than the being and the appearing grateful.—Cicero.

"Gratitude is a nice touch of beauty to the countenance, giving classic beauty and loveliness to the character."—Theodore Parker.

"A single grateful thought towards heaven is the most complete prayer."Lessing.

"Sweet is the breath of vernal showers,
Sweet the bee's collected treasures,
Sweet the music's melting fall,
But sweeter far the still small voice of gratitude."—Gray.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Kiddies,

The best Pollyanna was Alice Ruth Scholtz, of Macon, N. C.; and the second-best was John Staley Holden, Louisburg, N. C.

Congratulations to you both, dears! Look out for your package this week. I am proud of you both. All of you played well, but, some way, some how, these two were chosen for the best. And I think they deserved to be best too—don't you, kiddies?

Of course, then, we will all say together, "Congratulations to Pollyanna and to 'Polly-John."—Alice Ruth Scholtz and John Staley Holden.

YOUR EDITOR.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

I am late about writing to you, but as you said, I was busy in school. We were having tests. I wrote to Mary Louise Long, but did not receive an answer. In my letter I am sending you my picture after so long a time.

Miss Moffitt, as it is nearly time for my lesson, I will close.

Your friend,

LORENE RUSSELL.

Roanoke Ala., Oct. 29th.

A NEW DOCTOR FOR CHINA.

Chen, a little Chinese boy, awakened to find himself one morning in a little mission hospital in South China. Over him bent Dr. Leonard, the American doctor, the foreigner whom Chen did not want in the village.

"How did I come here?" asked Chen, weakly.

"We carried you here on stretchers. We have already set your broken arm, put your shoulder in place, and dressed the wounds the tiger's teeth made. You'll soon be all right," answered the doctor.

"Oh, yes, I remember," frowned Chen. "The tiger hunt. My companion Ho was with me. Where is he?"

"He was hurt too, but he is here at the hospital, and we will let him come to see you soon," replied the doctor.

Day after day the American doctor dressed Chen's wounds, but, strange to say, Chen did not like the foreign doctor.

"Bah," he thought, "they do not know how to care for sick people. These foreigners do not burn out evil spirits with hot irons. They do not know how to run needles into them so as to cure our sores. Our Chinese doctors are good enough for me. And yet, these folks here are getting better. I wouldn't like hot irons myself. But I wish these foreign doctors would stay in America where they belong."

And every time the doctor came near Chen, he frowned darkly at him.

One morning, Dr. Leonard bandaged Chen's arm and slipped the little glass "pencil" into Chen's mouth to see if he had fever.

"This little pencil must be some magic very precious to the doctor," thought Chen. "I heard him say that he had only two left. Maybe I could break this. Then he'd only have one."

Grasping the little "pencil" firmly in his teeth, Chen pulled sharply down with his well hand. The thermometer snapped.

"Spit it out. It is poison," cried the doctor, and he slapped Chen on the back of the neck, so that the little "pencil" flew out of his mouth.

"Open your mouth," commanded the doctor. "No, he's all right," he added to the nurse. "Why, boy, you might have killed yourself. That silver inside the glass is poison. It can't hurt you while inside the tube, but it would kill you if you swallowed it."

"That was a narrow escape, Chen," said the nurse. "What made you break it?" But Chen only frowned, and the nurse left the room.

"They never scolded me," said Chen to himself. "My father would have been angry. Is it the foreign religion that keeps them from being angry? I wonder. If they had scolded me, I could go home and laugh at them, because they would be no different from us. But—"

Just then Chen heard the tap tap of Ho's crutch. He came in and plumped down, panting, on a chair beside Chen. "What do you think, Chen," began Ho, excitedly, "the foreigner doctor says that I may stay here and take care of the new cow instead of going home right away. Besides, he'll pay me my board." Ho's eyes sparkled.

"Humph," grunted the sullen Chen, "you ought to go home. I would if I were you."

"Oh, but you ought to see the cow, Chen. She has little horns and she does not look very strong. She is sort of deformed, not at all like the big cows we plow with. You would laugh to see what a sight she is, but she gives five times as much milk as any cow I ever saw. It's wonderful the way this foreign—"

"There you go again," interrupted Chen, angrily. "Foreign, foreign, foreign! What do we want of these foreign cows, or these foreign doctors, either!"

"But Chen," said Ho, astonished, "these foreign teachers are our friends. Dr. Leonard says he hopes the farmers around here will raise cows like his because they give so much milk.

"Well, I don't hope so," snapped Chen.

"I do," said Ho, "Dr. Leonard says that milk is good for babies and sick people, and this cow helps a lot with the hospital.

"Humph!" grunted Chen.

"I'm going," concluded Ho. Chen was so unpleasant that he did not want to talk with him any longer. "I am going out to play."

"Ho is mean," said Chen under his breath, "going off to play and having a good time when I can't get out at all." Then suddenly an idea came to Chen. He laughed out loud. He would get even with Ho.

Chen slipped out of the hospital. No one was in sight. Out to the stables he went and forced back the door with his weak left arm. There was the strange cow. Was she indeed a cow? He spoke to her soothingly and gently unfastening the strap, he led her out into the field. Carefully Chen urged her on. If he could only get her out into the hills, what a hunt Ho would have! The foreign doctor would surely be angry and then scold. Who cared for his old foreign milk? Snatching his old straw hat, he tried to frighten the cow, but she tried to get back to the stable. Suddenly she sank forward, doubling up until she almost fell on her head. Chen knew what had happened. She had stepped into a deep hole. The cow pulled herself out of the hole, but when she tried to take a step forward she went down again. She had broken her leg. "Moo," she called, pitifully.

Frightened now, Chen crept forward. Softly he called the cow. Tenderly he felt her injured leg. If only he knew how to make a splint!

"Lay still, bossy. Don't move. There, there, Chen will fix it up, my treasure. He tried to soothe her.

If only some one would come. "Ho, Ho!" he called, "Ho! Come! come quick!"

Ho stood still for a moment, and then he broke into a limping run. "What is the matter?" he panted as soon as he could make himself heard.

"Get Doctor Leonard," called Chen, "the cow has broken her leg. Hurry!"

"But, how did she get here?" questioned Ho.

In a surprisingly short time Dr. Leonard came. But instead of looking at the cow, the doctor began to examine Chen's arm.

"I could bind up her leg, Doctor. I am sure I could if I had the things, pleaded Chen. "Oh, won't you try to do something for her? Won't you just try? You have so much foreign magic."

The doctor shook his head. "It has never been done. We will have to kill her to put her out of pain. What shall we do for milk? Our smallest boy was going to pull through on milk." The doctor looked sadly at the cow. "And I thought this was one more problem solved for China.

They put Chen back in his clean bed. Late that night he held the quilt before his mouth to stifle his sobbing—he who had not cried when they dressed his wounds. But he had killed the poor cow. The foreign doctor had not even scolded him. The foreign doctor did not have magic or he would have cured the cow. It was knowledge he had, and it was not just foreign knowledge. Anybody could learn how. It might be that he, Chen, could study and learn how to cure folks.

Chen sat up in bed at the thought. "Maybe I could be a doctor. He slipped out of bed and down the corridor to the office. There at the desk sat Dr. Leonard. He was writing a letter, and had just written, "So the cow is dead," when he saw Chen.

"Well, Chen?" he asked smiling.

"Honorable Doctor," sobbed Chen, "I drove that cow away. But I never meant to kill her. I am sorry. And you did not scold me. Is it the 'foreign religion' that keeps you from scolding?"

Doctor Leonard put down his pen. "It is no foreign religion, Chen," he answered. "There is only one God for all the world. He has been China's God as long as he has been the God of my people or of any other people. We are not telling you of a foreign religion!"

"Then why did we not know before?" asked Chen, in wonder.

"Those who knew have been slow to tell, very slow," replied Dr. Leonard, and smiling he continued, "and you were slow to listen."

"Then there is no foreign religion any more than there is foreign doctors and medicines?" asked Chen. "There are Chinese doctors who know the medicines you know?"

Doctor Leonard nodded: "Yes, many know all we know."

"Then, I too will be one," exclaimed Chen, firmly, "and I shall set all bones—cows' bones and all." Chen went happily to bed.

It was late that night when Dr. Leonard finished his letter: "So the cow is dead—but I think we have gained—a new doctor for China."

Christian Orphanage

A THANKSGIVING APPEAL.

The voice of the child in need, the cry of a child in distress, reaches the most sympathetic cord in the hearts of our people. It was the cry of the widow in distress and the appeal of the fatherless children that stirred the hearts of our people to action more than thirty-four years ago, and caused them out of the tenderest sympathy in their hearts to give of their means to erect a Christian Orphanage at Elon College, N. C.

The cry of the widow in distress and the appeal of the fatherless has been partly answered by the erection of the buildings and providing the necessary equipment to give a home to the fatherless children.

Two hundred and seventy-two have enjoyed a home and received training in the institution that was built to minister to the helpless ones. The buildings, the equipment, the children, are not all. The maintenance is one question to be answered. This is one question that should greatly concern our people. Every member of the Christian denomination should be happy to have an opportunity to make an offering to help support the Orphanage of his Church, which has in its care now one hundred and ten children.

Here are gathered our fatherless and motherless children, and they are enjoying the care, the protection and the training they so much need in their young and tender years to fit them for good citizenship when they have reached maturity. We feel that our people could do nothing more beautiful, more Christ like, than to make a real offering at this Thanksgiving season to help your Christian Orphanage. The rich and the poor have an equal chance to give as God has prospered them.

Remember, friends, the one hundred and ten children in the Christian Orphanage are appealing to you, and you have a duty to perform. Will you turn a deaf ear to their cry or will you answer their appeal by dividing your income with them?

Remember: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world."—James 1: 27.

In giving to help support the Christian Orphanage is one beautiful way to visit the fatherless and minister to their needs. Will you remember your Orphanage on Thanksgiving Day?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Prayer.—Our Father, grant that we may spend this day in thoughts of Thee and in offering unto Thee our praise for Thy blessings. Grant unto us the sweetness of the Christ spirit and loveliness of Christian character. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE DUTY OF THANKFULNESS.

"O give thanks unto the Lord for He is good." Read Psa 136: 1-8.

One of the queer things about us human beings is that when we have been almost killed and then are miraculously saved, we say: "How thankful I am to be alive." On the other hand, an accident may never have come to us for years—we may have gone the even tenor of our ways for decades—there may not have been so much as a ripple upon our sea. What do we say about that? Well, for that we have scant thanks, no consideration, no real appreciation. Was ever stranger inconsistency known?

The fact is, we complain too much over the little things that vex us, and we are not nearly thankful enough for the big things that mean everything to us. How slow we are to see the merciful hand of God behind the many, many years of life when everything went like a song, and there was not a care to fret us! And how now we grumble and murmur and complain over the smallest trifles!

In one of his sermons, Charles Spurgeon says: "From a mad dog and a complaining person, good Lord, deliver us." To which prayer let us this day add another petition! "And may He give us a spirit of thankfulness, as we think of the terrible things that might have destroyed us, but which passed us by."—Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski.

Lord's Prayer.—All the Circle joining.

SATURDAY.

WHAT NOT.

LESSONS: Psa. 22: 23; 69: 34; 150: 6; 138: 1; 47: 7; Col. 3: 16; Psa. 145: 2; Heb. 13: 15; Psa. 21: 13; 30: 4; 147: 1; Isa. 49:13; Psa. 106: 1; 150: 2; Lk. 2: 10-11; I. Cor. 15: 57.

"I ought to be thankful—
For grief unsuffered, tears unshed,
For clouds that scattered overhead;
For pestilence that came not nigh,
For dangers great that passed me by;
For sharp suspicion, soothed, allayed;
For doubt dispelled that made afraid;
For fierce temptation well withstood,
For evil plot which brought forth good;
For weakened links in friendship's chain
That sorely tested the strain;
For harmless blows with malice dealt,
For base ingratitude unfelt;
For hatred's keen unuttered word,
For bitter jest, unknown, unheard;
For every evil turned away,
Unmeasured thanks I give today.—Selected.

Prayer.—Our Father, may we lack nothing this day, and forever, in heartfelt thanks for Thy blessings, the unseen as well as the seen. We acknowledge Thee as our salvation and we praise Thy name for Thy divine grace and mercy. Save us we pray Thee, from sin, and to the Glory of God. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LOVE DIVINE, ALL LOVE EXCELLING.

"The Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread."

LESSONS I. Cor. 11: 23-26.

Jesus knew the things that were in store for Him. He knew that He would die at the hands of cruel and unjust men. On such a night, when His mind might well have been filled with bitterness against His foes, or at least with concern for His own escape, He ordains that sacrament which is the Christian's joy and consolation, and the sinner's pathway back to repentance and God.

Out of the shadows of the darkest tragedy the world has ever seen, Jesus brings forth that which is redemptive and helpful for all the years. Wicked men are striving with might and main to destroy Him, and He is striving with might and main to lead them to righteousness, and to save their souls everlastingly.. Here is "love divine, all love excelling," as high above our earthly love as the heavens are high above the earth.

The love of Jesus as it is here revealed says many things that our souls ought to be hungry to hear. God's thought toward us is wonderfully kind. We may be working against Him, but still His goodness is striving to bless us. As shown by the life and the activity of Jesus, His first and greatest concern is also His last concern, not to destroy us because of our sins, but to win our hearts through love and thus make them His very own forever.—Rev G. E. Lenski.

Prayer.—"O Lord, we will give to Thee this day the praise. Protect us and guard our lips from evil, and our thoughts from malice. Grant to us the high resolve and the cheerful act in the doing the divine will. In His Name. Amen."

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

To Honor Founder of Christian Endeavor.—

The United Society of Christian Endeavor will raise during the first week of February a fund of one hundred thousand dollars. The income from this amount will be at the disposal of Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark as long as they live, and then will go to mission work for the society. It is fitting that the society should raise this amount as an honor to the founder of the great interdenominational organization which has done so much to weld together the Churches of Christ. During all the years which Dr. Clark has served the society, he has never received one cent of salary. It is our hope that every Christian Endeavorer in our church may have some little part in raising this fund for such a noble purpost.

Many Creeds Represented.—

The laying of the cornerstone of the Cathedral of St. John tht Divine, on November 9th, in New York City, brought together in the speakers, many creeds. Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, Roman Catholic, was there, and so was Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Congregationalist, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Elihu Root, Episcopalian. The other speakers on that occasion were Bishop Manning of New York and Bishop Freeman of Washington. The walls of the nave are already twenty feet high, but, in spite of the speed with which they are being laid, it will be twenty or more months before they are finished. To this great cathedral persons of every faith and of none have contributed. In spite of the fact that it is being fostered by the Episcopal Church, it will be in some way the cathedral of the nation, and perhaps strangers will not mistake our five and ten cent stores for that cathedral any more.

A Health Achievement.—

Within the past decade the public health service of the country has done much to lengthen life. No class has been benefited by this extension of life so much as has the wage earner. A baby born in a wage earner's home might look forward to about forty-six years of life. He may now reasonably expect to live for fifty-five years. While this has been done for the white wage earner, the colored wage earner has not fared so well. His life span has been extended only about half as long, which is the average extension for other than wage earners. The white man who is not a wage earner may expect to live for about ten years longer than the wage earner. The public health work of the country is not only lengthening the lives of men and women, but it is making the living of those lives more comfortable and a happier process. It is destroying the great loss of time and money brought about by the ravages of disease, and it is contributing to the physical vigor of men while they do live.

Stadium Dedicated.—

Sometime ago Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, President of Brown University, Providence, R. I., was called upon to furnish sentences for the dedication of the new athletic stadium of that institution. He did, and the sentences with which the thousands of spectators at the dedicatory game with Yale dedicated the great stadium are worthy of remembrance and of pondering when athletics and sports of all kinds are bidding so hard for the time and attention of our young people. The following are the sentences which Dr. Faunce prepared: "With one voice and one heart we dedicate this new Brown field to the purposes and ideals for which it was constructed. We dedicate it to clean sport and fair play; to the development of a sound mind in a sound body; to the loyalties of the game leading to the loyalties of life; to the forgetfulness of self in devotion to the team; to respect for all opponents, whether they win or lose; to the comradeship of American colleges: We pledge our enduring efforts that Brown field may be a field of honor through all the years to come." If we could inject into our sport life such ideals, it would be a safe life for our boys and girls.

Shifting for Itself.—

The churches of Europe have received a most severe shock. Three communes, the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Germany, the Roman Catholic Church of the countries of Austria-Hungary, and the Greek Orthodox Church of Russia, have been pushed off the raft of State subsidy and told to swim for themselves or sink. These churches have no money, and their college endowment funds have been swept away by the inflation of the currency, and in writing of this matter in the November issue of the Current History Magazine, Dr. George Stewart, Associate Pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, says that the whole endowment of many institutions could not be exchanged for a street car fare. The Protestant churches are hit hardest, because the relief funds gathered by Rome from all parts of the world have been poured into the strickened area. In 1923, Dr. Stewart points out, eighty-eight Protestant institutions closed their doors, and more than seven hundred Catholic schools opened their doors in Germany alone. This means that death threatens the Protestant reformation. Many teachers and preachers are staying at their posts at starvation salaries, less than five dollars a month in American money. Three thousand mission workers have been recalled. Dr. Stewart believes that the only hope for the future of the Protestant churches is that individual units may be persuaded to do what Rome with its iron bound organigation is doing. In Protestantism there is much that is dear to all those interested in free thought and high ideals, and it stands as a great corrective value to the Catholic church. The hour is a crucial one, and demands the earnest thought of Christians. The Church of Rome is doubling its efforts; we must do likewise.

Damascus.—

The history of Damascus has been brought to the notice of the world recently by the French bombardment. The citizen world has been provoked to the greatest possible indignation. Nowhere are people more indignant than in France. By the League of Nations Covenant, France has the mandate of Syria, of which Damascus is the capital. In spite of the fact that France has improved the roads, schools, courts of law, and sanitation, the Moslem population has always resented the French occupation. There has been trouble in each of the six summers. A French captain unwisely fired on a religious ceremony, and forced chieftains to work on the roads as common laborers. The heads of the province appealed to General Sarrail at Damascus, who refused an audience. His actions provoked revolution in the city itself, and the bombardment was a reprisal. The general was called to Paris and in effect dismissed. He has refused to make reports, and so unofficial estimates have to be depended upon for information. These seem to indicate that about a thousand lives were lost, and about ten million dollars worth of property was destroyed including many antiques of great value. The shells went not only into the Moslem part of the city, but the Christian portion was also shelled, and General Sarrail demanded half a million dollars and three thousand rifles before he orderer his guns to cease firing.

These incidents bring forward the reflections that of all the cities continuously occupied by man, Damascus is most venerable. It was at Damascus that Abraham found his steward Eliezer, some four thousand years ago. It was the looms of this venerable city which wove the first damask, and in its orchards the first damsons grew. In spite of the repeated prophesies of Isaiah, Amos, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, that the Asyrrians should destroy Damascus, its commerce survived and its prominence increased. Following his conversion on the road to the city of Damascus, Paul lodged in the house of Judas on the street still called Straight, and over its walls he escaped in a basket. During the middle ages, no blade was so sharp as the steel of Damascus, but in spite of its swords it fell into the hands of Islam. Because of its age, its peculiar significance, it should rank in the world's thinking and regard next to Jerusalem itself.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rome wasn't built in a day, but it was built. Do something worth while—and begin on it now, you have your Rome to build.

Count the things that you have had during the past year to make you thankful! But wait, that will take too long, use the time to better advantage by making others thankful now.

The local bodies of the Junior Order, known as the O. F. A. in the State of Virginia, and the Daughters of America, will hold their Thanksgiving services with the First Christian Church, Richmond, Virginia, on Sunday evening, November 29th.

Rev. M. F. Allen, pastor of our Lynchburg Church reports the marriage on Wednesday evening, November 4th, of Mr. Harvey Lee Hight and Miss Annie Blanche McQuarry. They will make their home near Lynchburg. May God's blessings rest upon these young people.

The North Carolina Conference is composed of the ministers and delegates of the three local conferences—namely: Eastern North Carolina, Western North Carolina, and North Carolina and Virginia. That is to say, delegates to these several conference are entitled to seats in the central body.

The many SUN readers will learn with regret of the accidental death of Rev. A. T. Banks, a former Elon student and one much loved by his intimate friends. He was returning from a hunt on October 31st, and accidentally discharged his gun while getting into his car. His death was instantaneous.

Rev. J. A. Ledbetter has been called and, we understand, has accepted the pastorate for the coming year of our North Danville Church, Danville, Va., for half time, and Palm Street, Greensboro, N. C., for half time. This would seem to be a most happy arrangement and under the leadership of Brother Ledbetter, the good work at these two important points and in these good churches should go forward. We trust that pastor and people will have a happy and successful year.

Should the secretary of any church without a pastor in the Southern Convention see this line and will write J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C., he will be glad to furnish the names and addresses of available pastors. We have enough pastors at present to fill the vacancies so far as the Mission Secretary is aware, provided the vacancies can be found out and the proper connection can be made. We have several ministers both able and willing to take work the coming year.

What do you think of "one of our strong conferences within ten years selling seven of its church buildings, and salting down the money without any apparent thought of starting a new church anywhere"? And yet that is exactly what one of our Christian Conferences did, according to Rev. Willoe J. Hall, who writes elsewhere in THE SUN this week. Read what this brother says—then think a moment.

Has a conference with many churches, thousands of members and millions of dollars, the right to call itself Christian, and not add one or more churches and congregations each year? Something is wrong, beloved.

A beautiful double wedding was held at Elon College, N. C., on the 31st of October at 11 a. m., when Miss Myrtle Lindsey Pritchette became the bride of Stamey Ridge, of Gibsonville, and Miss Lou Eva Pritchette became the bride of G. J. Bates, of Bryson City. Both young ladies are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Pritchette and have resided at Elon College several years. Mr. and Mrs. Ridge will live in Greensboro, where Mr. Ridge is employed in the supervision of road work for Guilford County. Mr. and Mrs. Bates will reside at Bryson City, where Mr. Bates holds a position with the Southern Railway. We congratulate both couples, and wish them all happiness.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., in the opinion of THE SUN'S Editor, delivered before the Western North Carolina Christian Conference one of the ablest and most convincing addresses on the subject of "Stewardship" that has been heard amongst us for sometime. That address ought to be delivered, not only at all of our conferences, but at as many of our churches as possible and at our various group meetings. Brother Harrell has the power of bringing within the easy grasp of all his hearers the great theme of Stewardship in such a simple and logical manner as to enable his hearers to carry with them not only the meaning of Stewardship, but the unanswerable argument for adopting it in practice. It is greatly to be desired that Brother Harrell will give to SUN readers this address.

Rev. H. B. Hall, of the Elm Street Church, Portsmouth, Va., in a personal letter says: "We are getting settled in our new home, and are looking forward to a good year, with very encouraging prospects. May the Lord bless you all in your work for THE SUN. It is a tonic and an inspiration. . . . Since we have been on the Elm Avenue field, we have been favoured with a real substantial 'pounding,' and it came in most opportunely. Everybody was happy and enjoyed themselves, especially the parsonage folks. The pounding took place after the prayer meeting on Wednesday, November 4th. Now this to my mind is rather suggestive, because, after prayer, praise, and testimony had been offered to God, they came with their gifts and presented them to the pastor and his family; just a practical illustration of 'faith and works.'"

Mr. Galen Elliott, one of our fine Christian young men at the University of North Carolina, is working with commendable zeal in the endeavor to create interest in and build up Christian Endeavor in the Christian Churches of North Carolina. The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention made him chairman of the Endeavor Union which was to meet quarterly during the year. The second quarterly convention was held in our Chapel Hill Church, November 15th. Many delegates were present and a very worth while program was put on. Such subjects were discussed as "The Need of Combined Efforts to Form a Young People's Organization in the Christian Churches of North Carolina"; "The Young People's Congresses in Our Northern Churches"; "A State-Wide Christian Endeavor Union for North Carolina"; etc. Among the speakers were Dean Francis F. Bradshaw of the University, Miss Pattie Coghill, of Henderson; Prof. S. A. Bennett, and the Editor of THE SUN, from Elon College. It was voted in this union to endeavor to form a State-wide union, subject to the approval of the three conventions in the State. The next quarterly session of the Union is to be at Wake Chapel, Fuquay Springs, N. C., in February. Many Sunday Schools were represented and it was an interesting and helpful meeting.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

Dr. Warren H. Denison conducted a Stewardship Institute in the United Christian Church on October 31st and November 1st. The congregation not only enjoyed the institute, but feels that much lasting good was accomplished.

Some of the members in commenting on Dr. Denison's visit, had the following to say: "I never realized what my duty was before"; from a man. A school teacher said, "I have never enjoyed my work in the class-room. I have been wishing my life away, always anxious for the time to come to go home. But since hearing Dr. Denison, I feel that I am a Steward of humanity. Each little face seems to offer me a new opportunity to do something for my Lord, and now my work is a real pleasure to me."

None of us will feel just the same any more. He revealed to us our duty and did it in such a way that it cannot be easily forgotten.

M. F. ALLEN, Pastor.

REV. A. T. BANKS.

This fall two ministers, graduates of Elon College, died in the prime of life, Rev. B. F. Black and Rev. A. T. Banks. Each had many friends among students and villagers of Elon. The one had given his life as a sacrifice to his country, the other died, by accident, in middle life, in the full promise of many years of growing influence and usefulness in his church and community—one of the most popular and loved ministers of his town—Cherryville, N. C.

Twelve years ago Rev. A. T. Banks married Miss Jewel Michael, daughter of W. C. Michael, soon after her graduation from Elon. Her Christian character and attainments were a large factor in his success. Before going to Cherryville, he had served the churches at Henderson and Ramseur.

The funeral services were conducted by Dr. White, pastor of Raleigh Presbyterian Church, and Dr. J. U. Newman, of the Christian Church, at Oakland Church, Johnson County, N. C., and he was buried beside his mother and father. A large concourse of people were present—from Cherryville, N. C., Guilford, Wake, and Johnson Counties. He was laid to rest with Pythian honors by the lodge of Clayton, N. C.

Much sympathy was shown for the two famliies, and especially for his faithful companion.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

To Pastors of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference.

The Christian Missionary Association meets on Tuesday, December 8th, four weeks from this week. That is not long off—so get ready.

We feel the pastors should present the work of the C. M. A. in their fields and should endeavor to hold the membership strength of last year, and where possible to increase it by securing new memberships.

The campaign last year resulted successfully, but it was simply a temporary success. For permanent results, the members secured last year must be held and new members must be secured. We are not requesting an intensive campaign such as we had last year, but simply that the ministers will interest themselves in holding the C. M. A. up to last year's strength.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is publishing the C. M. A. memberships by groups of churches. So watch for the memberships in your church or churches. The C. M. A. membership is also listed by churches in the LIII. Volume, or 1925 Annual, pages 161-165. If you do not find your church listed it is because it is one of the eighteen churches in the conference in which there are no C. M. A. memberships. This does not include the Webster Community Church, for they joined with a church membership, October 28, 1925.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, President,
For Executive Committee.

NOTICE.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with Oakland Christian Church, Nansemond County, Va., Tuesday after the first Sunday in December (8th).

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SOME VITAL FACTS FOR SUN READERS.

One often hears an inquiry like this, "Why does the membership of the Christian Church increase so slowly?" The strange thing to the Editor of THE SUN is that the question should ever be asked. There is but one answer. There can be no other. Anybody who will study church history three hours can answer the question and know that the answer is the everlasting truth.

Here is the answer, and there can be none other: The Christian Church has not been and is not now a missionary church. It is too easily contented and spends too much of its time apologising to the world for not being larger. Its principles are not at fault; no church or branch of the Church of the living God ever had or can ever hope to have diviner principles. The principles are not at fault, but the people who profess the principles and then are content with them as being heavenly and therefore sufficient. The Christian Church should today have missionaries in every land beneath the sun, and it could have, and it would have, if we had the missionary vision, faith, and will.

One could take the history of a dozen communions and prove the absolute truthfulness of this statement. Let's take one. Not that one is sufficient in itself to prove all, but the story of all denominations as related to missions is the same.

In 1872, the Seventh Day Adventists had 4,801 church members, and they were practically all in the United States. In 1874, this church for the first time took up the work of foreign missions, and began to send missionaries to non-Christian lands. The first ten years witnessed an increase of membership of 257 per cent; and from 1912 to 1922 it enjoyed a growth of 113 per cent. In other words, this denomination far more than doubled its numbers every decade from the time it began to send missionaries until the present, and instead of a church membership of 4,801 in 1872, it had a membership in 1922 of 908,771. And whereas the members of this church contributed to all church purposes in the decade ending in 1872, $185,378, in that ending in 1922 it contributed $62,590.778. In the decade ending in 1892 this denomination contributed to foreign missions alone $17,583,760. The per capita contribution of the people of this denomination in 1922 was $39.86. They are now conducting missionary work in 119 countries and are employing 15,156 missionaries, who are using in their work 220 languages. They had in foreign lands, in 1922, 1,954 church buildings, which with their institutions in the foreign lands represent an investment of $36,903,593.00. This denomination, which until 1912 was much smaller than our own, sent out last year to foreign fields, 141 missionaries, and for 1925, 134 new missionaries were placed under appointment, and now the Adventists art working in practically all foreign non-Christian lands and tongues beneath the sun.

This denomination not only has preachers but medical missionaries, nurses, and religious teachers, and professional leaders in the various fields of the world. In the autumn of 1924, one year ago, this small denomination called upon its membership of about 200,000 in the United States and Canada, to make a free-will offering to missions to carry forward the work and prevent any deficit. The result was $597,022.18, and this sum was largely increased in other portions of the world.

Why could this denomination, far smaller in number than our own ten years ago, send out to the foreign field last year 141 missionaries, and this year 134, ten times the number that this whole Christian denomination of ours has sent out in all of its history? There is but one answer and that is because this denomination decided to carry out the program and the supreme command of our Lord Christ, when He said, "Go ye into all the world." Is it any wonder that the Adventists are building hospitals, homes, churches and institutions, throughout our own land and country today? God has given them this power since they yielded to the program of His Son.

This contrast is not given that it may be odious to any one, but that we of the Christian Church may begin to realize that God in Heaven will not and cannot prosper us at home until we are willing to undertake the program of His Son abroad and in all the earth. Until that hour arrives, may God pity and forgive us for dragging ourselves along at a snail's pace, when there is only one thing to keep us from going and growing as God wants us to go and grow.

Yes we shall be small in numbers, in prestige, in power, and in influence, until we are willing to undertake the whole program of our Lord as plainly and emphatically pointed out in Mark 16: 15. J. O. A.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

This conference met in its Fifty-fifth Annual Session with New Center Church, four miles out from Seagrove, N. C., November 17th to 19th. Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C., was the president of the past year and was reelected for the coming year. Rev. W. C. Martin of Biscoe, is the recording secretary, and Brother J. H. Hardin of Graham, N. C., was elected assistant. These two handled the documents of the conference with dispatch and we have no doubt but that the Annual will show with great thoroughness and accurateness also. Brother O. D. Lawrence of Seagrove is the faithful treasurer, whose heart is made glad when a church reports its conference apportionments paid in full. The vice-president of the conference, Rev. T. E. White, led the devotionals of the first day and rendered assistance to the president throughout the session.

The president, Dr. Lankford, delivered one of the most practical addresses we have heard at a Christian Conference in a long time. It dealt almost solely with the subject of Foreign Missions, that subject which is the most vital to our church life, the most essential to church growth, and the most neglected amongst us. If Dr. Lankford can get his conference to lead the other conferences in the matter of Foreign Missions, it will not be many years until this will be the strongest of all our conferences. A conference grows strong only as its missionary spirit and undertaking and vision grow.

Rev. J. M. Allred, one of the very faithful pastors of this conference, led the devotional services in the afternoon. It was reported to the conference that Rev. G. R. Underwood, so familiar through the years on the floors of this body was unwell and could not attend the conference. A letter of sympathy and regret was ordered sent to this veteran minister.

Mrs. W. R. Sellars, treasurer of the North Carolina Woman's Board, was called upon and addressed the conference on the subject of the Woman's Work, telling what the women had accomplished the past year and she very impressively urged the necessity of prayer in all missionary endeavor. She most highly recommended to all the prayerful reading of Helen Barrett Montgomery's "Prayer and Missions." Mrs. Sellars would not only have this book read and discussed in missionary groups, but in churches, Sunday Schools, and homes, as well.

THE SUN's Editor was permitted also to speak to the conference on the topic of Missions, urging that the program of the church is one, and is included in the declaration of our Lord, Mark 16: 15. In this scripture our Lord announces His program for the church, and no organization is entitled to the name of the church that does not have for its avowed purpose and fundamental aim the carrying out of this program.

Wednesday morning, Rev. W. J. Edwards led the devotionals, following which, after some routine business, Brother F. M. Wright of Asheboro, N. C., chairman, made the report on Sunday Schools, in which the emphasis was laid upon the fact that our hope of building up the church is with the young people and that we should carry the study of Missions into the Sunday School and that not only should an offering be taken once a month in the Sunday School for Missions, but that a missionary program or a talk of at least five minutes should be put on each month.

Brother J. H. Harden of Graham, teacher of the Adult Class in the Providence-Graham Memorial Church, speaking on the report, made a very convincing address on the importance and the joy of Sunday School work. Brother Harden contends that if one will attend Sunday School regularly, the hour of the week one devotes to this will be the best of all hours of the week. After the report was adopted, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, delivered a very thoughtful, logical and eloquent address on the subject of "Stewadship." It has seldom been the privilege of THE SUN'S Editor to hear a more able and convincing address than this on the subject of stewardship and on the practice of tithing. The whole church should have this address for study and discussion.

In the afternoon, Rev. J. C. Cummings led the devotional service, immediately following which, Dr. E. L. Moffitt presented the report on Religious Literature. This report revealed the need of closer Bible reading and study, and a greater loyalty to our church literature, particularly to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and our other church papers. Dr. W. A. Harper, in speaking to the report, secured some subscribers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and quite a number to the Journal of Christian Education. Managing Editor P. J. Kernodle was present and stated that he had received much encouragement with an unexpected number of renewals and new subscriptions during the conference.

Mrs. D. A. Cornelison of Seagrove, told of the work done by the few Missionary Societies in the churches of the conference, and urged the pastors present, as well as the delegates, to assist in organizing Missionary Societies in the churches of the conference not now having them. She showed that the nine societies in that number of churches had done more for Missions and the spread of the gospel the past year than all of the twenty four churches not having a Missionary Society had done. Mrs. Cornelison was instrumental in organizing two societies the past year and is exceedingly anxious and declares she will never be satisfied until societies are organized in every church in the conference.

Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston made a very persuasive plea for the Orphanage and urged that the Thanksgiving Offering this year be the best yet, as the same is so much needed.

Miss Madge Moffitt of Burlington, made the Christian Endeavor Report, which report not only showed that there were few societies in the conference, but that there was need for a society in every church, that the young people might find an expression of their religious life and a channel through which they could give their vigorous energy to the work of the church. Miss Moffitt, the efficient Editor of the "Kiddies' Korner" of THE SUN, made an appeal to the young people to line up in Kingdom service, since in such service there would be found real and abiding joy.

Rev. J. C. Cummings was installed as pastor of the Seagrove Church, Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Many conference ministers took part and many delegates and visitors attended the impressive service. Seagrove is one of our promising places, and Brother Cummings begins his pastorate under favorable circumstances.

Rev. T. J. Green, in making the report on Home Missions, stated that under the leadership of Brother Cummings, a substantial and costly church had been organized and built the past year at Glendon; under the leadership of Rev. W. C. Martin, a church has been organized and a lot purchased at Biscoe. Both of these churches were received as members of the conference. Through the recommendation of the Home Mission Committee, the Home Mission funds of the conference are to be administered by the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, with certain recommendations from the conference as to the ratio of their distribution.

The conference was largely attended on the first two days of its session, and the churches came up well, not only with reports of active service the past year, but with increased sums raised for missions and other enterprises.

THE SUN'S Editor was not present on the last day, when Rev. T. E. White, chairman, made the report on Education, Dr. W. A. Harper and others addressing the body on Christian Education. Dr. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro, was present and preached for the conference in its closing session.

All routine business of the conference was given proper attention.

The people of New Center Church and community were exceedingly hospitable and cared for the conference with plenty and abundance.

THE INTER-RELATION BETWEEN FAITH AND WORKS.—PART I.

Faith comes by hearing; it lives by doing. Work and self-discipline are indispensible in the Chrisitan's life and growth. The man of faith is the man of action. The man of faith is the man of works.

A question around which much discussion has centered in the history of Christianity is the division line, if such there be, between faith and works. Where does faith leave off and works begin? Or, in other words, how much has God to do in effecting our salvation and how much have we.

If by grace we are saved through faith, and that not of ourselves, then what responsibility rests upon us? If love, joy and peace, and the other Christian graces are the fruit of the Spirit, are there any fruits from our works?

There is no question that Paul laid his chief emphasis upon God's part in our salvation, but he never lost sight of our part. His epistles are shot through with the idea of personal responsibility. But to Paul, the best that man could do, in himself, availed nothing at the bar of divine redemption. To us, it may seem that he did not emphasize enough man's part in his own salvation. But certainly no Christian could criticize Paul for putting the emphasis he did on God's part.

The writer of the epistle of James, expresses the conviction that faith of itself can no more save a man than can works of itself. He is convinced that, "faith, if it hath not works, is dead." Luther did not have very much respect for this kind of doctrine, and as a consequence, he did not include the book of James in his devotional readings. Whether or not the writer of James spoke of the medieval mind when he said "faith without works is dead," he unquestionably spoke the modern mind. There is no place in the modern world for a faith that is not proved by its works. There may be a type of Christianity that boasts of its faith apart from its works, but to the thinking mind such faith is meaningless. Healthy, robust, normal Christian faith shows itself by its works.

"One cup of healing oil or wine,
One offering laid at mercy's shrine,
Is thrice more grateful Lord to Thee,
Than lifted eye or bended knee."

Modern Christianity insists that we must have a proper appreciation, both of the place of faith and of the place of works in the Christian life; that we must appreciate the fact that God works in us to will and to do his good pleasure, but we have to will it, in order that we may do his good pleasure. God cannot save us unless we will to be saved, nor can he save us if having willed to be saved, we do nothing to realize it. Salvation is not of works alone, nor is it of faith alone. Narrow minded people are just as apt to boast of their faith as of their works. And one kind of boasting is just as bigoted as the other—and both are equally offensive.

There is nothing in Paul's admonition to the Philippians that contradicts the doctrine he sets forth in other places, such as, "that by grace are ye saved through faith—not of works," when he says, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. Very likely he was here referring to the business as well as to the spiritual interests of the Church of Philippi, for he knew that his being absent would necessitate their looking after their affairs for themselves, and that if any bosses arose, or if any trouble makers made their appearance, both of which are not unheard of, even in modern church assemblies, that they would have to work out their own salvation as best they could. But there was also a personal element in the admonition—that the believers of Philippi should work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, and they should show forth the fruit of the spirit by the lives they lived that they should lay aside every weight "and the sins which so easily beset," that they might "run with patience the race" set before them. He would have them not to be conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of their minds that they might prove what was that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." He would have them in short, to be "good soldiers of Christ Jesus." While he admonished the Philippian Christians to work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, he did not fail to mention that such would only be possible provided they allowed God to work through them. By grace they were saved through faith—and by grace they could keep saved through faith, but faith that was a living, moving, working, vitalizing force in their lives.

"In true and inward faith we trace,
The source of every outward grace."

The first and largest part of Paul's message was the gospel of grace—the other and smaller part was the need for works. Truly he contended and rightly so, that the nine Christian graces, of love, joy, peace, and all the rest, were the fruit of the Spirit. But he said nothing from which one could infer that he believed that the fruit needed no cultivation in the nature of works and personal effort.

We can draw an analogy of this from the material world. When the farmer plants his corn in the spring, he realizes that God gives the increase by sending the rain and giving the heat from the sun, as well as having furnished first of all, the soil in which the seed is to be planted, but any experienced farmer also realizes that his harvest will largely depend upon the amount of care that he gives it; if there were no sun to warm the ground, no rain to moisten, and no strength in the soil, that his efforts would be in vain. So with the Christian life and growth. We are ultimately dependent upon God. We must rely on divine aid in our moral struggles. Of ourselves we do something, but we can do nothing as compared to what we can do with His help.

Cultivated fruit always brings the most in the market. The fruit of the Spirit needs the cultivation of personal effort, moral struggle, and works. The fruit of the Spirit comes at the highest premium in the lives of those who work out their salvation with fear and trembling—those who assume their personal responsibility, those who are determined to make their calling and election sure by sealing their faith fast with their works. To such Christians works do not constitute their salvation, but they serve as a sort of an insurance policy, and they would not feel safe without them. They realize that as the farmer is ultimately dependent upon God to give the increase, that all his efforts are in vain if the elements do not favor him; that so, all moral effort loses its eternal reality apart from God.

But the man who works the hardest and puts forth the greatest effort in building Christian character, the man who does the most to right the wrongs of humanity, is he who is receiving and will receive the largest salvation. "Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." "We are laborers together with God." That is the secret of Christian character—God and man working together. Man cannot save himself, nor God of himself cannot save him. But when God and man work together, Christian character in the richest beauty and power is produced.

In no other instance are the words of the Psalmist more true than in character building, that "except the Lord build the house they labor in vain who build it."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Church attendance is a concrete test of useful membership. Its value has not been fully understood as a personal obligation and as a testimony for Christ. It has been considered secondary as a means of grace and as a help to others. Yet it is a vital element in the growth of the church and of growth in grace for the individual Christian. Very few members who are regular attendants at Sunday School, prayer meeting, and the preaching services, are derelict in other church obligations.

One of the big difficulties in church progress is financial. Facts would prove that regular attendants at church services are prompt in the payment of church pledges. People who mean well get behind in the payment of church dues when they remain away from the Lord's house for any length of time. It is so in commercial circles. Financial obligations neglected seem to grow out of proportion to ability to pay them. Nothing is so easy as to meet obligations, if they are met systematically and promptly.

Regular attendance, also, has its pastoral value. It is the stay-at-home members who feel that the preacher and other members do not care for them. When at church at every service, the people come in contact with their pastor and other members, and the pastoral and social relations are kept healthy and happy. Whoever heard of regular attendants at church complaining about the pastor not coming to see them. Action and reaction are equal here as elsewhere. A member always present is missed when absent. Those who rarely attend may be sick and pastor and members know nothing about it.

Moreover, poor preaching is often the result of poor attendance. People do not know, or forget, that the congregation furnishes half of the sermon. Nothing is so difficult as to address empty benches. It is easy to talk to a crowded room; but it dulls the mind and chills the heart to try to preach to a small congregation. In fact, it is easier to listen when the church is crowded. Human contact in large numbers creates an atmosphere of interest. It creates, also, a spiritual atmosphere, and that is essential to a good meeting. All of the benefits of church life could be met by regular attendance of all the well members; and it always does the sick good to hear that, "we had a good congregation and a good sermon." The singing is improved by numbers, both of the choir and the congregation, and music is the soul of worship. The Christian religion is the only religion that has a Hymn Book, and the Psalms are in the middle of the Bible.

But attendance does not stop here. It goes back to the pastor's study and the choir practice. If they know there will be a full house, its inspires his study, his preparation, and their practice. All know how much better the sermon and the music are when it is known that there will be a big congregation. It takes the preacher and the members to prepare and preach a sermon; and the choir and the responsive congregation to sing a hymn or an anthem.

ELON LETTER.

Prayer is not auto-suggestion. It is a blessed experience. Philosophers may shake their heads and solemnly declare that prayer has no scientific basis. The trustful heart will continue to rejoice in its reality and to use it as a vestibule to the Most High.

If prayer be a fiction and God cannot hear and answer our petitions, then God has no means of communication with His spiritual offspring and never has had. This means that our Christian revalation is an imposition and that all this insistence on the part of spiritually minded men that they have experienced the presence of God is sheer non-sense. But those who pray know the reality of that divine Presence.

The practice of prayer convinces of the reality of the spiritual quality of life and of the universe. This is foolishness to the inexperienced, and has to be foolishness, because prayer is real only to those who avail themselves of it. Prayer gives strength to life and sends him who prays forth to victory where failure seemed inevitable. "We cannot do more than pray till we have prayer," says an adage of the spiritual life that has been tested in many instances and found true. But when we have prayed, our strength to achieve is increased immeasurably.

So I like the idea of beginning the day with prayer. There is an office where the first thing to be seen when the man takes his seat for the day's work is this morning prayer:

"Another day has come:
O help me, God, I pray,
To full forget the bitter things
That happened yesterday.
And give me strength, O Lord,
Each issue so to meet,
That I may face Thee unashamed
Before the Judgment seat,
Help me to rule myself
And kindly let me live,
To all my work, to all mankind,
My very best to give.
And should, in Thy great plan,
This day my labors end,
Forgive my sins, my soul receive
For Jesus' sake. Amen."

I think such a seasoning for the day's work a most wholesome practice and the result of this inspiring practice should square with that fine word of Ralph S. Cushman in a recent issue of Zion's Herald, in which he explains the secret of the joy, and peace, and radiant happiness of the Christian life. His poem reads as follows:

"I met God in the morning
When my day was at its best,
And his Presence came like sunrise,
Like a glory within my breast.

"All day long the Presence lingered,
All day long he stayed with me,
And we sailed in perfect calmness
O'er a very troubled sea.

"Other ships were blown and battered,
Other ships were sore distressed,
But the winds that seemed to drive them,
Brought to us a peace and rest!

"Then I thought of other mornings,
With a keen remorse of mind,
When I too had loosed the moorings,
With the Presence left behind.

"So I think I know the secret,
Learned from many a troubled way:
You must seek him in the morning
If you want him through the day."

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

This is the story of a great man with a big job, read it:

At a recent meeting of the Executive Board of Bethlehem College, Rev. H. W. Elder, of Richland, Georgia, was elected to superintend soliciting and collecting funds for the purpose of erecting an Administration Building for Bethlehem College, with the privilege of using his own judgment in the matter, together with the raising of the interest on the $100,000 in bonds given by the Southern Christian Convention as endowment for Bethlehem College.

Brother Elder has accepted and will enter upon his work at once. There was some hesitancy upon his part on account of his health not being very good, but he finally said: "If it is God's will, I will undertake the task if I die in the effort." But we pray that he may live to see the Administration building completed and many more buildings erected upon the College campus, and that his health may continue to improve with the progress of his efforts.

Brother Elder has had the burden of the conference work upon him, together with that of the pastorate for many years, and besides all this he has builded twenty-three churches. With such a record as this behind him, we shall have no fears about him not being qualified to put this great project across. He has never undertaken the erection of a building that he did not push it speedily to a finish. So if his health holds out, we shall have an Administration Building in due time, for he is not a quitter.

When asked why he had decided to undertake this stupendous task, when the odds were against him, his reply was: "Because I want the building erected." Herein lies his success as a builder: It can be done, and I can do it. There is no such thing as failure to those who believe that it can be done. Faith in one's self has beeen the miracle worker of the ages. There is nothing that can stand before faith in God, faith in our fellow men and faith in ourselves, neither will any good project fail. We feel that the Board has made no mistake in securing the services of Brother Elder and that we shall not be disappointed in his efforts. Let us all do our best to make his burdens lighter. Follow our leader. Let every man stand in his place and the work will be done.

IS IT FEAR OR FAITH THAT HOLDS US BACK?

By Rev. W. J. Hall.

The Christian Church holds a unique position in these days which ought to mean much to her advancement. Many ministers and especially a large number of consecrated laymen are chafing under the yoke of sectarianism and longing for a larger freedom and fellowship such as the Christian Church has professed since its beginning. There is a constant moving among the various denominations to adjust their articles of faith to meet this changing conception among their members. Why should not the Christian Church come forth now and proclaim anew its position, organize new centers, and open wider than ever its century old doors to those who have become dissatisfied and spiritually cramped by the pettiness and untenable positions imposed upon them by formalists and creed doctors? We know the answer that some of our people make to this question. We have heard it so often that it continues to nauseate, but it is the inevitable, "Lack of funds." It may be that it will intimidate our sanity to say it, but we think that is not the reason at all. It is lack of faith. They say, "Why, you cannot do anything without money, today," and our reply is, "You cannot do anything worth while without faith." We dare to make the bold assumption that faith will supply every need. Jesus said more than once to those who were stumped by some proposition, "O ye of little faith." An we believe that that is one of the big troubles with our brotherhood today.

But the faith that will build colleges and churches and orphanages, must be a constructive faith. It must be an organized faith, otherwise it is only a hope. An organized faith will work on a program, it will use the five barley loaves and the two small fishes. We have so often been using these to feed the boy, rather than to feed the multitude. Taking big things to do a small job, rather than using small things to do a big job. The former does not take any faith; the latter must have faith or fail. "Do you know what it takes to start and establish a church in a city?" is the question asked. Our answer is, "No, and we do not care what it costs. We have no right to look at it from that standpoint." If men of the past had based their endeavors on such a position, we would not have had an Abraham, a Moses, or a Peter, or a Paul. The eleventh chapter of Hebrews could never have been written. We should have been without any pioneering missionaries, and the Christian religion, if alive at all, would be confined to Palestine.

These days are different, they say, and you cannot do things today as you could years ago. Things have to be done in a very different way today, but with easy transportation, universal mail, telegraph, and telephone service, one is making a pretty big assertion when he says that these are more difficult times. One of our big difficulties is that we are afraid to venture, because we are afraid of failure; while the men of the past went out even courting failure. We are afraid of a little embarrassment; while they were willing to be made a gazing stock for Christ's dear sake. Consequently we have been curtailing, withdrawing, abandoning whole sections; which our fathers established for us. Some of this, no doubt, should have been done, but there is no reason why we should have only one-third as many churches in New England as in former days. A like condition exists in New York, and even worse conditions in Kentucky, Michigan, and among the States in our Western Convention. There has been a woful lack somewhere, which has been allowed to go on decade after decade unchecked. Where that lack has been, and who has been to blame for it, rests on the shoulders of nearly everyone in the Christian Church, ministers and laymen alike, for there has been very little effort to find the cause and apply a remedy. Oh, we have been endeavoring to apply a remedy all right, but we have never taken the time, or been willing to pay the price, to study the conditions to find out what was really the matter. And as a result, much of our doctoring may have been for the wrong thing.

For instance, year after year, our conferences have met and come face to face with cases of distress. What has been their remedy? To pass resolutions and go home and forget about them until they come up to conference next year and hear them read in the secretary's report. One of our strong conferences within ten years sold seven church buildings, and salted the money down without the apparent thought of starting a new church anywhere. Two of the fields which they abandoned and sold the church properties were in growing towns, and our churches were among the first organized there; the others were in the open country, or in small villages, where our churches were not needed! There may have been, and probably was, a good reason for selling all of these eight church buildings—we are not going into that. We are just stating the facts. Now suppose we continue this line of work, giving up fields and failing to enter any new ones—it is plain to see that soon there will be no Christian denomination. And perhaps there should not be any! It may be that we have out-lived our usefulness, and that our day and work is finished, and now the thing for us to do is to die! There are a few that have hinted something of this sort. However, there are others of us who feel that we have just come to our morning, and it is now "high time for us to awake out of sleep," and put on a program that will challenge our whole brotherhood, and then go far beyond that. Our papers never were better. The Herald of Gosped Liberty carries editorials every week that should be read by every member of our church—they are timely, sane, helpful, constructive, and Christian. Our oldest paper needs no apology anywhere; its spirit is sweet and spiritual. The first page on THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a jewel, the editorials, the letters by Drs. Staley and Harper are always good and helpful. The Vanguard, while a paper more especially for our Canadian brethren, is a valuable little sheet. Our colleges never were better, and we never had more students in them. Our Foreign Mission work is efficient and constructive, and our only difficulty here is lack of funds to enter the opportunities that are open to us. Our field men are doing a work among our churches that will surely bring results in the days to come. We are in our morning brethren, "Wherefore lift up the hands that hang down, and the feeble knees."

But we must stop having funerals and have some christenings. In the next five years, let us organize a new church in every conference. It is a self-evident fact that nothing puts new life into a home like having a baby come into it, and we have a strong conviction that there is nothing that will put new life into a conference like organizing a new church. Of course we do not mean for us to get the spirit of crowding a new church in somewhere where it is not needed, but I contend that the Christian Church has just as much right to organize new churches as any other. And I further contend that to organize new churches is not a violation of the spirit of Christian unity which we profess, but rather to help forward the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. If a careful survey is made, we believe, some spot with a fine opportunity will be found where to plant a Christian church will mean advancement of the Lord's work. These will be found in almost every instance in growing cities. There are very few opportunities in the open country for new work, although there is great opportunity in many places for the consolidation of several country churches into one, which will give the consolidated church strength to do what these churches separately could never dream of doing.

Going east, we should have another church in Bangor and a new one in Portland, Maine. There should be a new church organized on the East Side of Providence, R. I., one in New Haven, Conn., several more in Brooklyn and about New York; new ones in Schnectady, Rochester, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cumberland, Cleveland, Toledo, Cincinatti, Indianapolis, Evansville, Chicago, Detroit, St. Joseph, Mo., Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Miami, Fla. In all these places, we have quite a constituency. There are no doubt many other promising places, where work should be undertaken. Suppose we start fifty new churches. How much will that take? At least fifty strong men, and one million dollars, and, above all, the kind of faith that is wrapped up in a tiny mustard seed. Not a man who knows our folks at all, dare say we are not able to do this, only we ought to make it larger instead of smaller. It is absolutely necessary for the life of our colleges and our Foreign Mission undertakings—it is also very essential, if we are to keep our self-respect. One thing is certain, we can never enlist any help from the outside as long as our program is so meagre that it ought to cause us to blush with shame in the face of a world so much in need of the Christ. As those priests of old did not see the Jordan roll back until they had stepped down into the water up to their ankles, neither shall we see the men and the money coming for such an undertaking until we shall have faith to leave our tents and go forward.

Four years ago, the churches that comprise the Dayton Association of the Christian Church, then five in number, had only one pastor giving his full time to the work. The membership of these five churches was 789. They gave for pastor's salaries $3,348.50, for benevolences $1.080.74, and held property valued at $57,000.00. The past year, there have been six pastors giving their full time to the six churches. The membership of these churches is now 1609. They have a property value of $150,500.00. They gave for benevolences $3,272.25, and paid their pastors $12,142.30. The increase in Sunday Schools is of the same ratio. Account for it if you can. But we have no hesitancy in saying that the spirit that has been injected into Dayton by the organization of a new church is largely responsible. Our churches here have caught a vision, they are putting on a concerted program, they are pushing forward aggressively for the Kingdom. In the words of the late war, they have "gone over the top" and are driving the enemy back. Their plans are already laid to start another church here this fall.

In the name of God, brethren, let us get this spirit in the whole denomination, and we will number 200,000 in 1930.

Dayton, Ohio.

ITEMS FROM ROSEMONT AND BEREA.

Rev. J. F. Morgan became pastor of these two churches on September 1, 1925, and since that time has been kept busy getting acquainted with the folks and trying to stir up a new and enthusiastic interest.

A meeting that resulted in good, was held at the Berea Church, September 20 to 25, 1925, which was conducted by the new pastor, Mr. Morgan, and Rev. O. D. Poythress, the popular and successful pastor of the South Norfolk Church.

This church has erected a most attractive parsonage on the church lot, and is looking forward to an all time pastor for that field as soon as such a blessing is possible. Mr. Morgan is planning to begin soon in this church a night service each week in the interest of the young people.

At Rosemont the interest is very good. Since the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, a new Christian Endeavor Society has been organized, and the attendance and interest has increased in a most gratifying manner in every way.

A special evangelistic campaign was held in the Church at Rosemont from October 11th to 25th, which resulted in thirty-one additions to the church, making a total of forty members received since the new pastor has been on the field. The special meeting was conducted by Mr. Morgan, who directed the music in addition to doing all of the preaching, but he was ably assisted by the choir and members of the Rosemont and other churches. We are grateful to God for all these blessings and are looking forward to even greater things here, in the days that are to come.

REPORTER.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

Warren H. Dennison, Secretary.

NOVEMBER and DECEMBER are the STEWARDSHIP MONTHS of our Church Calendar. Make them count for much. Make the message plain. Cooperate in creating a Stewardship atmosphere. Bring Church and Kingdom Finance into its proper place.

STRIKE WHILE THE IRON IS HOT.

These weeks of November and December should mean very much to the lives of your people spiritually. The Stewardship message is primarily a spiritual message, a builder of character. We hope that all our churches and pastors are putting on a real, worth-while Stewardship program. Are you preaching a series of sermons on it setting forth the Bible teaching about it; are you studying it in a class; are you placing literature in the homes of your people; are you conducting a reading contest in it; are you using charts, mottoes, blackboard messages? Be sure to close your Stewardship campaign with an enrollment of tithers. Do not fail in this. Otherwise your impressions made will not be lasting. We are praying and hoping that this Stewardship period in our church calendar will be so thoroughly used that it will mean a great blessing to the churches. Correspondence with this office indicates a wide observance of Stewardship instruction.

ITEMS EMPHASIZED BEFORE THE GENERAL BOARD.

Organize on the Denominational Basis.

1.—That steadily our churches are adopting our five-fold program and organizing their churches with the departments of Devotion, Evangelism and Life Service, Christian Education, Missions, and Stewardship and Finance; and the conferences are organizing on the same basis, with the additional department of Publications. All churches and conferences should now cooperate in this denominational organization.

Protect the General Enterprises.

2.—That we are in a time when much church building, repairing, remodelling, enlargement, is being done by our churches. Better equipment is being provided, pastors' salaries are being increased, local enterprises are being emphasized. All this is splendid; but there should be no lessening of funds for the general enterprises of the church because of these matters, as good as they are in themselves. If the general benevolent enterprises of the church are allowed to suffer, it spells disaster for our general work, and in addition to that, it means spiritual loss to the churches. We are as definitely responsible for the work of the whole church as for the local work.

General Convention Action.

3.—That the action of the last General Convention urging all churches and organizations to increase their benevolences 15 per cent annually was a very wise and sound action. The principle of growth is basic. The percentage is fair, wise, and reasonable. We urge that this become a goal, a definite aim, a slogan for all our churches, Sunday Schools, Missionary Societies, Boards, and departments, in short, by all agencies from the least to the greatest in all sections of our brotherhood. We hope this may be kept before all of our workers and departments, and that it may become the basis for all comparisons.

Warren, Indiana, Church has just sent in forty-six enrolled tithers. Burlington, N. C., has sent in seventeen additional ones. Be sure and send in a good list from your church.

ARE WE DISTRIBUTING AGENTS?

Good things should be universal in their distribution. A men's Bible class was recently giving the reasons the Gospel should not be withheld from the heathen until there are no longer any "heathen" at home. One member of the class answered by giving an illustration. He said that if he were manufacturing some new invention which was evidently destined to be a blessing to mankind, he would be foolish to decide not to sell any of his products outside of the city in which it was manufactured until every person in that city had purchased it. The good news of salvation is the best blessing any human being can have, and it is sinful to seek to confine it to any particular locality until every individual there has accepted it. Our commission as Christians is to let every human being know that Christ died for him and that there is not salvation for him in any other name under heaven given among men. Are we doing our part as "selling agents" or distributors for the blessings of the Gospel?—Selected.

SHALL WE CALL MISSIONS CHARITY?

Read the words of one of the world's greatest missionaries, Robert Morrison:

"I am astonished to find Christians so often referring all their missionary efforts to charity. 'A missionary sermon is a charity sermon'—charity indeed! Here is a world of guilty rebels; and the world's God has put into the hands of men, pardoned and saved by mercy, a proclamation of mercy and pardon to all who will accept it; and has given a solemn injunction to go and proclaim it to the ends of the earth—to every creature—to each rebel; and these pardoned rebels think it, in themselves, a charity to do so: and this proclamation has been in their possession eighteen centuries, and yet one-half of mankind has even now scarcely heard distinctly of it; so indolently and carelessly have successive generations done their duty."

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson X.—December 6, 1925.

Subject: "Paul's Voyage and Shipwreck."

Golden Text: "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid."—Matt. 14: 27.

Lesson: Acts 27: 1-44.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 107: 23-32.

Reference Material: II. Cor. 11: 23-28.

During the World War, while one of the transports was going over, a chaplain, finding a group of men sitting idly together on the deck, joined them and began to tell them stories. Among other stories, he told them the story of Paul's famous voyage and his shipwreck as recorded in today's lesson. When he had finished, a man said to him, "Who was that guy?" The chaplain replied that it was a man named Paul. The man went below and aroused his bunk-mate. "Say," he said, "the chaplain was telling us a story up on deck about a fellow named Paul, and believe me, he was some man."

Paul was a real man. He embodied in his life to a high degree the qualities that belong to manhood at its best. And his all-round manhood is events of today's lesson. If one of the tests—perhaps the best test—of a man is his attitude and conduct during danger or a crisis, then Paul is a man in the superlative degree.

Paul had appealed unto Caesar, and unto Caesar he was to go. Accompanied by Luke, the beloved physician and Aristarchus, his friend, Paul, with some other prisoners bound for Rome, was taken on board a boat bound for the coasts of Asia. At Myra, a city of Lycia, they found a ship bound for Italy, and the prisoners were transferred to this ship. The winds became contrary and the ship was finally driven below Crete, and came to a small harbor named Fair Havens. The winter season was coming on and sailing was becoming more hazardous every day. Paul suggested, therefore, that they put in during the season of bad weather at Fair Havens and make the most of the protection that harbor offered to them. One does not know just why the centurion heeded the master and owner of the ship rather than Paul, but it is natural that he should give heed to one supposed to be in authority. One suspects, however, that like many another man, he thought that an idealist, and especially a lowly preacher did not know what he was talking about. It is simply an illustration of the fact that revelation or intuition is often more trust-worthy than mere reason. In any event, subsequent events proved that Paul knew what he was talking about.

The ship set sail for Phenice, which was only a few hours away from Fair Havens, but it never reached its goal. In fact, it never reached any goal, for it later went to pieces just off the coast of Melita or Malta as it is now called. It was during the ill-fated cruise from Fair Havens to Melita that Paul showed the stuff he was made of.

Soon after leaving Fair Havens the ship was struck by a tempestous wind or storm called Euroclydon, and so furious and so long-drawn-out was the storm that all hope for the safety of the ship and its passengers was given up by those on board, perhaps we should say, by those on board, with one exception. For in the darkest hour and in the direst strait, Paul stood forth and bade them be of good cheer. The Lord, had spoken to his servant in the hour of need, and he had given him the assurance that he needed. God was to fulfill his purpose in and promise to Paul. He was to go to Rome. His message was "Fear not." It is the message that comes to those who trust God today. Love and trust cast out fear. God keeps in perfect peace those whose mind is stayed in Him. Paul took God at his word. "Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer, for I believe God that it shall be even as it was told me." Here is the secret of a calm and powerful life—to believe God means what he says. The Book is full of exceeding great and precious promises, but they will never mean anything to us until we believe that God means what he says and act accordingly.

After being driven about for two weeks, the ship finally drew near land. Anchors were cast out to keep the ship off the shore. Under the guise of casting anchors off, the sailors were about to desert the ship, when Paul, with characteristic insight, and equally characteristic prompt action thwarted them and made them remain in the ship. "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved" is more than a statement of the fact that the sailors were needed on the ship to help save those on board; it is a pronouncement of the fact that men can be saved only in the way in which God has ordained—through repentance and faith in Jesus Christ.

Paul stands forth once more in the role of a hero. When it appeared that the crisis was at hand, he called the passengers together and insisted that they eat, in order that they might be strengthened for the struggle before them. Standing there, a prisoner, in the midst of sailors who had attempted to desert the ship, in the midst of soldiers who were his guardians, and with the winds howling around him and the angry sea threatening at every moment to sweep over him, Paul took bread and gave thanks to God in the presence of them all. There is something about this that needs no comment; one needs only to think on it to see something of the real character of the man. Paul was never any greater than he was at that moment. We might well ask ourselves whether we are brave enough to bear witness for Christ in such a way at such a time.

The ship was lost, but the passengers were saved. Things have but little comparative value when human life is at stake. The tragedy of it all is that so many times things take precedent over human values.

Teaching Points.

1. The counsel of a man of God is often more sound than that of a mere expert.
2. Revelation cannot take the place of reason, but it may be superior to reason.
3. A good test of friendship is the way friends stick to us in the hour of need. Luke and Aristarchus went with Paul in the hour of need.
4. The presence of a calm man in the hour of danger helps so much.
5. He who trusts God need fear nothing else.
6. God's message in time of trouble is, "Be of good cheer."
7. It is not enough to acknowledge God's ownership; we must express that fact in service. Paul said, "Whose I am and whom I serve."
8. That life is blessed which believes God that it shall be even as it was told.
9. Obedience to God is the only way to salvation.
10. There is no emergency in life when we do not have that for which to be thankful.
11. The obedience of one righteous man may save many.
12. Commit thy way unto Him and He will bring it to pass.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

December 6, 1925.

(Consecration Service.)

Topic: "How Can We Translate Christmas into Service?"

Scripture: I. John 4: 7-14.

Repeat in unison: "Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace, good will toward men."
Song: "O Master, Let Me Walk with Thee."
Sentence prayers.
"O Beautiful for Spacious Skies."
Prayer. (For world peace.)
"We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

Plans for the Meeting.

In the short period of worship at the beginning of the meeting, service should be emphasized. Service should be the key-note of all the talks. Twenty minutes at the close of the meeting should be reserved for practicing Christmas songs. These should be such good Christmas songs as: "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear," "The First Noel," "There's a Song in the Air," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Silent Night," "Angels from the Realms of Glory," and others.

Leader's Talk.

Jesus Christ was God's gift to the world—the greatest gift of all times. He is ours as truly as He has belonged to men and women in the past. Giving joy and comfort should be every Christian Endeavorer's aim at Christmas time. The real Christmas spirit is one of peace, goodwill, friendliness, and joy. Nice things have been done for us ever since we were babies; why can't we turn this Christmas into a time when we Christian Endeavorers give to others? Wouldn't we enjoy spending Christmas this way?

Instead of having a Christmas tree for ourselves (some churches do), let's have a Christmas tree for others. A service of song and praise could be given and gifts brought for the orphanage at Elon, some needy families in the community, or some other place which we might choose.

(Any society interested in the White Gift Service for Christmas, write Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C.)

Then, there's caroling, which is always fun for all who do it and a pleasure to those for whom you sing. Beginning to practice Christmas songs so early should mean that this can easily be done.

How about some gift for the church or Sunday School rooms? Does your church need a new communion set, Bible, or something else which the Christian Endeavor Society could give?

Christmas in the Home.

Every Christian Endeavorer should spend some time planning for Christmas in his or her home. How may I make Christmas a little better? Every home should have a tree—candles—gifts from one member of the family to another. Besides this every home should make some gift to the church, to missions, and to some less fortunate family. Nothing will give more joy at the Yuletide than deciding where these should be given and what they shall be, and the actual giving.

Questions for the Meeting.

1. Why do we think of peace at Christmas?
2. How may the spirit of Christmas make for world peace?
3. How do you think Christmas should be celebrated?
4. How will service to others make us better Christians?

PATTIE COGHILL.

ARMISTICE RESOLUTION.

(Adopted by the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference in session at Salem Chapel, November 11, 1925.)

Whereas, seven years ago at this very hour the Armistice was signed bringing the World War to an actual conclusion, and

Whereas, this conference would express its deep and abiding appreciation for the sacrifices of our men and women who made this happy conclusion of the war possible, and

Whereas, we would at the same time signally recognize the fine spirit of sacrifice in which our government and nation entered in this conflict and conducted it to a successful conclusion,

Therefore, Be it resolved:

First: That for a space of two minutes this conference stand and bow in silence in accordance with the plan and suggestion of the League of Remembrance.

Second: That a letter be addressed by the secretary of this conference, under its seal, to President Coolidge and the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate calling upon them to do all in their power to have our nation join the Permanent Court of International Justice.

W. A. HARPER.

NEWPORT NEWS NOTES.

We have had a great year with the Christian Church of Newport News. Two special features have transpired within our midst worthy of mention. The one I wrote about in a previous letter, namely, Mr. W. A. Sunday's six weeks' campaign in our city; and the other I will now write about, Rev. H. C. Caviness' three weeks' campaign in our church.

Rev. H. C. Caviness of Cary, N. C., came into our church, joining the Eastern North Carolina Conference, only a year ago, and is not known by so many of our people throughout the Christian Church. He served as a lawyer for twelve years in his State, which has given him an experience in dealing with people that the average revivalist does not have. Mr. Caviness brought with him to Newport News, Rev. M. R. Moss of Charlotte, N. C., who proved his ability at the piano and in personal work. Mrs. Caviness was also with us one week and proved her gifts in personal work as well as delighted her audience with the special lecture she has on "How to be a Successful Wife; Old Fashioned Ideas and Ideals Modernized."

Brother Caviness is a real revivalist of the "God called" type, and ought to be kept busy in the field of evangelism. He is one of the most consecrated men I have ever been privileged to labor with. He is not a man of the "wild fire" or spectacular character, but wins men to Christ by the simple story of Jesus: "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." Brother Caviness is exceedingly modest, unusually humble, considering his education and experience in the court room, meek, prayerful, yet forceful and plain, as he hides himself behind the Cross of Calvary and holds it up as the only hope for a sinful world.

I have delayed in giving an account of the great revival held here to see whether our people had been "swept off their feet" or whether the results of the meeting would last. I am now convinced that our revival here was not sentiment. It was of God. My own life as a pastor has been led closer to Jesus. Our members are attending the prayer service and taking part with a fervency such as never before.

Visible results of the revival: 10 members; 17 conversions and 20 additional in the inquiry room led nearer to Jesus; 65 promised to erect family altars, and a church revived enough to really pray in the Spirit. To God be the praise.

The Mighty Power of Prayer.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

The Kingdoms of This World or the Spirit?

Lesson: Read II. Cor. 6: 14-18.

A craving for the things and for the knowledge of this world is not a happy sign. They who have only the phenomenon of the material suffer much. Like the seasons: in summer, it is too hot, and in winter it is too cold, and in between it is neither cold nor hot but sometimes very disagreeable; so that in whatever state we find ourselves, there is suffering. Peace and contentment are not for globe trotters. These blessings come to him who is not bound by earthly ties and who walks in the path of divine love.

The material world brings restlessness and dissatisfaction. The world of the spirit and love fills the soul with eternal blessedness. In the ways of the world, flesh and dissipation, riches and segacity are most esteemed. Folks may be conquerors, but they are conquerors of lands and money, pomp and revelrie, but they are not conquerors of themselves. If we follow them, we become one of them. Like water when put in a hot pot, it becomes hot, add milk and it becomes white, mix sugar and it becomes sweet, but it is water just the same. We are called upon to be separate from them. Love, joy, peace, justice, honesty, truthfulness and sincerity, good report and service are soul qualities that make manhood. May these virtues be ours until our souls join the great soul of God.

Prayer.—Our Father, bestow Thy blessings upon us this day and may our desires and our portion in life be in the true value of life and not the false. Make us pilgrims not of this world, but of the realm of good and God and of the Spirit. Forgive us of all our sins, and that which we have lacked, and bless our souls. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

Unworthy and Unholy.

"Render to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor."—Rom. 13: 7.

Read Isaiah 43: 2.

Any one who uses his knowledge to stir up strife, impede the progress of others, block the path of commerce and produce pain and suffering, that he may himself thrive, is unworthy of the name of a gentleman and a Christian, and merits total disrespect.

The Bible says that these are they who devour widows' houses and shut up the kingdom of heaven against men. They enter not themselves and would keep out those who would enter. Woe to such an one. He must pay the penalty in punishment of soul.

Prayer.—Our Father, if we have taken anything from anyone dishonestly or unlawfully, bring us to full repentance and we will make reparation. We would return it four-fold. Make us servants of Thine in all our dealings and worthy partakers of Thy table. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

Redeeming Time.

"Take heed how ye walk exactly . . . redeeming the time because the days are evil."—Eph. 5: 15-16.

The inference is that any lost or misspent time is taken advantage of by evil and we lose our souls. W. E. Gladstone, the great English statesman said: "Believe me when I tell you that thrift of time will repay you in after life, with a usury of profit beyond your most sanguine dreams; and that waste of it will make you dwindle alike in intellectual and moral statue, beyond your darkest reckonings."

There are times when we lie in bed as a matter of indulgence, when we might be spending it with some great writer or thinker, or with our Sunday School lesson, or on some of our special jobs. There are times when we wait for dinner that might be spent in a good book, if not to say in prayer. To redeem the time, do not allow any of it to be wasted.

Prayer.—Our Father, we wish to be genuinely Christian in the use of our time as well as in the building of character. We pray for a holy living in our spare moments as well as in the main issues of life. Give us wisdom to direct our souls that carefully that nothing may be wasted. Give us power of self discipline and may we be able to sieze every opportunity to turn it to account for good. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

Self-Control.

"Yield not your members unto sin."

Read Romans 6: 12-23.

Tennyson said: "The happiness of a man in this life does not consist in the absence, but in the mastery of his passions."

There are different ways of exercising mastery. Paul did it by holding his peace when he was railed upon. Christ did it by answering nothing when he was tempted before Pilate. And we are told that we may do it not only in these ways but by exercising patience, forbearance, forgiveness and living the prayerful life.

Prayer.—Our Father, our many passions beset us and demand to be satiated immediately. Drive away their lurings, their whisperings, their claim for satisfaction. Give us strength to wait and keep silent always long enough to be careful and let heart and reason have their way—to let the heart and the soul speak that always the right may be done and said. Give us this blessing now and forever. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

The Danger of Unfaithful Friendship.

"A friend loveth at all times."—Prov. 17: 17.

It appears that the great mass of friendships are but a passing acquaintance. Emerson said: "They are hurried to short and poor conclusions because they have been made of wine and dreams instead of the touch fibre of the human heart."

One of the troubles we see is that friendships are aimed at swift and petty benefits. We try to grasp in a moment what it takes years to produce. Instead of seeking friendships sacredly we seek them for profit.

Real friendship is not glass but the solidest thing you ever saw. And the friendship that Christ brought and declared exists between Himself and His children, is brotherly, and exists to aid and comfort throughout all the relations and experiences of life and death. It is that which is found to be loyal and true not only when everything is fair and prosperous and serene, but also in the clouds, misfortunes, hard roads, ship-wreck, poverty and persecution. Our friendship for anyone should dignify that one, embelish his outlook by courage, wisdom and segacity; and add rythm and reason to his drudgery.

"Ah, friend, my friend! one true heart found tender,
That understands our troubles and our needs,
Brings more nearly to God than all the splendour,
And pomp of seeming worship and vain creeds."

Prayer.—Our Father, in realizing Thy friendship for us, make us true friends to our fellowman. Give us that spirit that adds Balm to the wounded heart, light to the dim understanding, leadership in honest and wise counsel, and renders cleanness and consistency to the thought of all. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

The Soul That Gives.

"Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it."—Mark 8: 35.

"The penalty for selfish living is a shriveled life. The soul that insists upon getting everything and giving nothing is on the steep down grade to spiritual suicide. The end of a selfish life is spiritual death. If a man will not let the inflow of his life pass to service in an outflow, he will become like a pool with no outlet, stagnant and foul. The strong man who does not use his strength becomes a weakling. The scholar who does not use his knowledge becomes mentally inefficient. The rich man who does not use his money for worthy service becomes a greedy miser. This law of life should be inscribed everywhere: Lose your life and your substance in some noble cause, or you take the risk of losing it forever!

"While other women of her age were losing their better selves in the luxuries of society, Florence Nightingale went out to the Crimea and spent her life in service among soldiers, and as she lost herself there she found herself in a richer, diviner character. Livingstone lost his life in the heart of Africa for Christ's sake and the Gospel's, but he saved it to a glorious immortality. Benedict Arnold died in disgrace, a lost American, because he was devoted to nothing but self. Nathan Hale died gloriously, and his noble words will be a perpetual inspiration so long as the republic endures: 'My only regret is that I have but one life to give for my country!'

"The essence of Christianity is nothing else but the living of our lives according to the sacrificial example of Him who told us to lose ourselves in order to find ourselves. If we so live, we shall not only save our own souls, but the souls of every one we know."

—Rev. Vincent G. Burns.

"For the soul that gives is the soul that lives,
And bearing another's load
Doth lighten our own, and shorten the way,
And brighten the homeward road."

Dears:

Thanksgiving Day has come at last! Ole Turkey Gobbler has strutted around for his last time. But we are all glad for Mr. Turkey Gobbler having strutted, for—

"On glad Thanksgiving Day
The children will be gay:
We like the dinner of Turkey and Spice,
We like the candies and nuts and ice;
And then we like to play—
On glad Thanksgiving Day!"

And, dears, while we are playing, let's not for get to say—

"Thanks to the Father, we will bring
For He gives us everything."

How about sending our little Orphanage friends a gift-box as your Thanksgiving offering? In a big, big building, not far away, there are many, many children living. This is our Orphanage home—some are big, some are little, and some are wee babies. They have no fathers or mothers, so some kind friend must take care of them. There are more children there than any of your mothers have, and it takes a lot of food and a lot of warm clothes for them. So, dears, if you have a toy or a dress, or a big ol' cake all covered with frosting, OOoo-hh-how good that sounds—why send our Orphans a part of it all, so they will be happy too, this glad Thanksgiving Day!

Your Editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

I am a little girl eight years old. I am writing you while I am out of school. I have been out of school two days with a cold. Hope to be able to go back to school Wednesday.

I was leader Sunday night for C. E. Society. Our missionary society has won the banner. We gave a play in the basement on the 22d of October, and we made $55.00 at the play. One nice big man gave us a check. Wasn't that fine? We had the biggest crowd of any play that was given yet. And we had the best time practicing.

My home is in Charleston, S. C., but I am staying with my grandmother in Burlington, N. C.

Every Wednesday we have story hour. We are sending a gift box to the Orphans at Elon.

I will close.

Heaps of love from

Your friend,

OLD APPLE TREE'S SECRET.

Old Apple Tree had a secret. She told it to the sunbeams; she told it to the breezes; she told it to her leafy green branches. But she did not tell it to the village children.

Old Apple Tree lived in a pleasant orchard close to the stone wall fence. In autumn she gave to Farmer Jones barrels of juicy red apples; and she never failed to ask Mr. Wind to shake some of her rosiest ones down into the road for the boys and girls who passed that way.

How Old Apple Tree loved to hear their merry shouts! But sometimes she heard words like these:

"I found it first!"

"That big one's mine!"

This year was a rest year for Old Apple Tree. In Maytime the children saw no pretty pink and white blossoms. "Too bad," they said; "we shan't have any nice red apples this fall!" Then no one except little Jeannie and Jamie paid any more attention to her.

Jeannie and Jamie would often stop and say, "Oh, how pretty your new green leaves are! And what a nice place for birdies to build a nest!" That was exactly what Mr. and Mrs. Robin thought.

And when summer days came Jeannie and Jamie, who had no trees about their bare cottage home, would often come and play outside the stone wall in the shade of Old Apple Tree's spreading boughs. And Old Apple Tree whispered her happy secret to Mr. Robin, who sang it to his wife.

Then one day in the golden autumn Old Apple Tree decided that it was time to give away her secret to the little friends for whose delight she had been keeping it all this while.

A merry troop of school children went by that morning and glanced up at her. "Bad Old Apple Tree," they cried, "not to give us any apples this year!" And they passed along while the little breezes laughed among the branches.

Then came little Jeannie and Jamie. "Good Old Apple Tree," they cried, "thank you for the lovely shade you gave us all summer and for all the lovely apples you gave us last year!"

"Now!" whispered Old Apple Tree to the breezes. And they parted the leaves that had been hiding the secret. "Oh-oo!" exclaimed Jeannie and Jamie, as they beheld two of the biggest, rosiest apples that ever were!

Then Mr. Wind came along with a whiff, whiff, whiff, and blew those two biggest, rosiest apples that ever were right down at Jeannie's and Jamie's feet.

"Oh, oh, OH!" shouted the happy children.

"Thank you, thank you, dear Apple Tree, for your lovely surprise to Jamie and me!" Jeannie laughed to find that she had made a rhyme.

"Oh, thank you, thank you!" cried Jamie for himself.

And Old Apple Tree had never been quite so happy before in all her life.—Edna P. Brett.

boasts of sin is a devil." Someone has added, "He that forgives sin is God."

When Christian came back to the wicket gate and cried: "Is there no hope? May my sins be forgiven?" Evangelist replied: "Thy sin is very great; thou hast forsaken the way that is good. Yet will the man at the gate receive thee, for he has good-will for men." When Christian tremblingly asked to enter, Goodwill replied, "I will, with all my heart," and it is added, "With that he opened the gate." No truer word picture of God's pardon has ever been given since the Master himself uttered the parable of the Loving Father.

Isaiah's call was to a mercantile people. Out of their extensive business operations in the land of exile had come great prosperity. They went in for the "good things" of life. Yet the lives on which so much was lavished were as the "wilderness and the solitary places." Thorns and the briars were there; heart-hunger and loneliness; sterility and famine. Beyond was the garden. There, instead of the thorn, grew the fig tree, and instead of the briar the myrtle. The Gardener would lead the ransomed of the Lord forth with song and peace. There was but one way from the wilderness to the garden. Here, at the fringe of the wilderness, was the wicket gate.

Ever since Beelzebub erected his strong castle has there been the Gateway to the Garden. Goodwill has never abandoned the Gate. His voice still calls across the waste places to starving souls: "Eat that which is good and let your soul delight itself in fatness.—Rev. A. J. Reynolds.

Prayer by one of the parents.—That we may learn that God's invitation is our opportunity and that if neglected, it may be beyond recall. Let us urge our children to seek early that closer companionship with Jesus which will be a blessing throughout life.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We are wondering what Church will stand at the head of the list this year, in the Thanksgiving offering? We are also wondering how many will give $1,000.00, $500.00, $250.00, or $100.00, to help us in this work. One hundred and ten children to clothe, feed and care for.

This is your institution.

When you sit down to your bountiful Thanksgiving dinner, please think of the one hundred and ten children in your Christian Orphanage and ask yourself the question, "Have I done my duty to the fatherless?" Then when the Thanksgiving offering is made in your Church, give as the Lord has prospered you, and satisfy your conscience.

FATHER AND SON WEEK IN THE SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Father and Son Week, November 8th to 15th, was observed by the Suffolk Christian Church, and an interesting and helpful program was carried out with good results. The week began with a special service on Sunday morning, November 8th, when fathers and sons attended the church services together and in many cases sat together. A special program of worship was used, and the pastor preached on "The Great Partnership." The sermon emphasized the fact that the father and son relationship was a great partnership, in which the father and the son made certain investments, and from which they received certain dividends. The church was well filled with a congregation made up in large part of fathers and sons.

Monday night was Father and Son Night in the Home. Fathers and sons were asked to spend the evening together in the home in games, in fellowship, and in the discussion of common problems. This was an unorganized activity, and it is not known how many fathers and sons observed this feature. One father who has three sons of his own, invited four underprivileged or fatherless boys to his home for an evening of games and fun. This was a fine way to observe this night.

Wednesday night was Father and Son Night in the Church. The mid-week prayer service was built up around the father and son relationship, and was in charge of the fathers and sons. Fathers and sons appeared on the program together and rendered an interesting and inspiring program.

Friday night was the occasion for the Father and Son Banquet, perhaps the most popular feature of the Father and Son Week. The banquet was held in the Sunday School room and was served in evcellent style by the members of the Ladies' Benevolent Social Union. It began with turkey and all the "fixin's" and ended with ice cream and cake. Miss Nina Oliver's orchestra furnished music for the occasion. Mr. Bower led the singing and sang a solo. Dr. J. E. Rawles responded to the toast, "To our Sons," and Ralph Smith responded to the toast, "To our Fathers." Chaplain H. E. Rountree delighted the banqueteers, one hundred and fifty in number, with a negro impersonation that was unusually well rendered, and which was interspersed with negro songs. Judge J. L. McLemore delivered an inspiring address on The Father and Son Relationship, and Col. E. E. Holland, who had returned the day before from an extended tour of Europe also spoke in an interesting way about his trip. After expressions of thanks for all who had had a part in the banquet, fathers and sons stood and sang "Blest be the Tie that Binds," joining hands as they sang, and Dr. Staley brought the banquet to a close with a fitting prayer.

Saturday was Father and Son Day Out-of-Doors, and the pastor, assisted by Mr. E. T. Bunch and Assistant Scout-master Ralph Smith, took a group of boys out for a short hike and some organized games. It was an afternoon of mutual fun and good fellowship.

On Sunday morning a special service was held for young men. The pastor preached on the theme, "Jesus Christ and Young Men." A quartette of young men rendered an appropriate and inspiring musical number. This service brought to a close a week that will bear fruit in the lives of fathers and sons in the days to come. This is the second year that the Suffolk Christian Church has observed Father and Son Week, and it bids fair to become a permanent feature of the church year.

THE GLORY OF A NATION.

The glory of a nation lies, not in her worldly wealth, her force of arms, or her wisdom of diplomacy, but in the ability of her people to understand and know God. . . . Nations having all these three glories have fallen before the north wind of God. The memory of the glory of Greece and the grandeur that was Rome's, reminds us that these are not everything. . . . Religion is something ethical—that is, to know God in history and in life as doing loving-kindness and right. Religion is to imitate God, to know Him spiritually and to apply this knowledge to daily life. Jeremiah says that to take delight in love, justice, and righteousness, is to know God. . . But now, on the face of the thing, the wise man who glories in his wisdom, the powerful man who glories in his might, are these not pitiful ideals when placed against the spiritual majesty of our Master? What a rebuke Christ is to us, to the things men glory in! . . . It is not wisdom, power, or wealth that I deplore, it is the exageration of them that is bad. They are the sinking sands of our lives. They are the things that men sell their souls for. But cannot buy love. . . To fulfill the chief end of life we need more. The glory of man is spiritual or it is nothing. Seek God, and these other glories will fall into line in their proper places.—Selected.

"The Bible is not being given to our children. It ought to be put back into the schools. Our children should be taught real, practical, everyday religion—a sense of justice and good conduct, and the way to do this is to put the Bible into the schools where it belongs. I'm interested in getting the Bible back into the public schools because of what my hearing the Bible read in public schools did for me."—Henry Ford.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas it is not given to finite mind of man to understand the infinite will and love of his Creator, and yet because of that limitless love God has for His children, it is given us to have faith and hope in contact with life, more especially eternal life in that better land;

Therefore, Be it resolved:

1st. That though one dear to us, Sister Libby Winner, has preceded us into God's heavenly realm, not grief alone should govern our spirits but rather should that grief be tempered with joy that her soul has found perfect peace and joy in the better land.

2nd. That we express to her family through these resolutions our assurance that their grief is ours and that a part of the loss, at least, is borne by her friends, knowing that our lives have been enriched by our contact with Sister Winner, and that the memory of her kindly presence will be with us always.

3rd. That it is our pleasure to spread a copy of these resolutions on our book of records, publish a copy in The Christian Sun, and to send a copy to her well beloved mother.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

While God, in His infinite wisdom, thought best to remove from our midst Sister Annie Welch, one of our loyal and faithful members of our Woman's Aid Society of Providence Memorial Church, Graham, N. C., we feeling very keenly our loss and missing so much her genial presence, Resolve:

1st. To try to emulate her many virtues and commend her family to walk in her foot steps.

2nd. That we extend our sincere sympathies to the bereaved husband and children, praying God's richest blessings upon them.

3rd. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy spread upon our minutes, and a copy sent The Christian Sun for publication.

NELSON.

Edna Nelson, the daughter of Brother and Sister William Nelson, was born on August 12, 1920, and died September 16, 1925, age five years, one month, and four days.

Edna was an unusually bright and interesting child, beloved by all. She was one of twin daughters. Her twin sister died at the age of two years. Only one child is left, William, age seven. Brother and Sister Nelson have had much of life's sorrow, but they do not sorrow without hope, for they are Christian people and know their loved ones are with the Saviour. C. E. NEWMAN.

HART.

Mrs. Adline Irene Hart died October 19, 1925 at her home in Chatham County, N. C. She was a consistent member of Antioch Christian Church for many years. She was in her fifty-third year at the time of her death. She will be greatly missed by her church and community.

She leaves to mourn her going a devoted husband, many relatives, and friends. On October 20, she was laid to sleep the long sleep of death in the Antioch Christian Church cemetery. May the Spirit of the Lord comfort the hearts of the loved ones. The funeral was by the writer. J. S. CARDEN.

INGOLD.

Boston R. Ingold passed from his labors to reward on October 22, 1925, being 43 years, 8 months, and 8 days old. He was married to Martha A. Barber on December 22, 1902. To this union 5 children were born, 3 daughters and 2 sons, Mrs. Sallie Slate, Earlie S., Ora, Maylee, and Vester Ingold, all of whom are living. Besides these he leaves a mother, one sister, and a half-brother, and many friends to lament his going. Early in life he professed faith in Christ and joined the Lutheran church at Friedens', but recently moved his membership to Apple's Chapel, where the rest of his family belong, at which place he was buried. A large congregation attended his burial and his grave was covered with pretty flowers. He will be much missed in his home, church, and community. May the Lord comfort the bereaved. T. J. GREEN.

SAWYER.

Joseph Silvester Sawyer was born in Caswell County, N. C., December 9, 1868, and departed this life at his home in High Point, September 20, 1925, age 56 years, 8 months and 20 days. He married Hulda Susan Miles, November, 1898, and the home was blessed with six children, Clarence, Lilian, Nannie, Alton, Felix and Robert. All of them are living.

Bro. Sawyer had a host of friends in Caswell. His body was buried at Concord Christian Church.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Foreign Students Dined.—

The churches of Chicago dined about three hundred foreign students studying in that city. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee and Dr. Charles W. Gilkey were the principal speakers, while responses were made by students from several countries. This is suggested for the churches of other cities. And it would be well to become better acquainted with the foreign students among us, for they will be the leaders in their lands soon, and peace must come that way. There is something about dining together that brings men closer together.

Needles and Pins.—

The Census Bureau estimates that in 1923, there was an output of needles, pins, hooks and eyes, and snap fasteners worth more than twenty-three million dollars. Forty-nine concerns were engaged in this business, employing 7,674 people, of whom 6,834 were wage earners. The wages paid to these workers amounted to 6,703,493, and the value added by manufacture accounted for $14,351,493. These figures show that small though needles and pins are, they amount to a great deal in the nation's business. Small things are not to be despised because of their smallness.

If often repeated, they make a great impression.

In the Newspapers Again.—

A few years ago one of the most talked about men in the Newspapers was Sergeant Alvin C. York, one of the most noted war heroes. He was a tall red-headed young man from the mountains of eastern Tennessee. Now he comes into prominence again, but a far different kind of prominence from that achieved a few years ago. It is a high devotion still, but this time it is with a hundred and fifty thousand dollars raised from the lecture platform and in other ways, which he is to devote to the building of a school for the education of the boys of his neighbors. He is this time representing a cause which ultimately will make unncecessary the first kind of heroism.

Financial Depression in Japan.—

Japan is undergoing a financial depression which threatens to be disastrous. School boys are forced to leave school and sell newspapers on the streets. Their spirit is excellent, however, but to see them work so hard is saddening to the heart. Some of the Japanese papers are insistent on a complete overhauling of financial machinery, while others point out that imports for the first nine months of this year are only six per cent higher than for the same period a year ago, and that the exports for the same period are thirty per cent higher, and they feel that a better day is in the dawning for the business life of Japan. At any rate all are agreed that the business life of Japan is in a deplorable state.

Another Summerless Year.—

The scientists are predicting another year like 1816, which is known as the "summerless year." Cold weather persisted through the whole of the year 1816, and no crops grew. The scientists tell us that this year is to be repeated in 1926. They base their predictions upon the increasing number of sun spots which lessen the number of rays radiated by the sun, and consequently the heat discharged. The summerless 1816 is attributed to the sun spots and to the volcanic eruptions which began in 1812 and closed in 1815. This chain of eruptions approximately belting the earth, threw so much dust and ashes into the atmosphere that the rays of the sun were obstructed. The sun spots are attended by certain tidal phenomena which will bring to the surface of the ocean great quantities of cold deep-sea water which will cool the atmosphere. The results of these predictions are yet to be seen, but it is certain that we are passing through many of the phenomena at present which are charged with having produced the icy summer of 1816.

Entertaining Japanese Royalty.—

America is now engaged in entertaining Japanese royalty. The Prince and Princess Asaka, who are now visiting with almost breathless haste the historic shrines and fashionable golf courses of this country, have been in Europe studying Occidental civilization during the past three years. They have acquired thoroughly modern ways. Prince Asaka is to report to his government on economics and social affairs of Europe and America, and after that he will take his place at the court with the leaders of his country, and set the pace for what a well-dressed man ought to wear. The Princess is a sister of the present Emperor Yoshihite, and is a direct descendant of Jimmu, who twenty-six centuries ago ascended the Japanese throne. Japan, since the Emperor Meiji swore his great oath, has been acquiring Western civilization and taking knowledge from all the earth. They have built factories and navies, and are manufacturing all the Western articles of manufacture, and now the Prince and Princess are taking home the last words in Western fashions and Western sports. According to the Princess, physical culture and sports are being advocated for the girls of Japan, and tennis, basket ball, and swimming are being taught in the schools. She believes that this sort of education will result in fairer and more efficient women for the Flowery Kingdom. All of these things have not diminished the reverence for the tombs of their ancestors, and they will return in January to the land of ancient gods to make their report. This is the third time that America has been privileged to entertain Japanese royalty.

Facing a Problem.—

We have been locking men up for crime through the years, and we have had on our hands a problem of what to do with them when their terms were up. We haven't known at all. The thinkers on the problem came to the conclusion a while ago that we didn't catch criminals and lock them up for punishment, but for purposes of reform. They have succeeded sometimes very well in the reforming business, and sometimes they have done the opposite. The Ohio State Penitentiary is doing something commendable, though how much it will do in reforming men is yet to be seen. Chaplain Reed of that institution was also librarian of it. He noticed that men took out books on technical subjects and returned them in a few days. He knew that those books couldn't be assimilated in a few days, and looked into the matter. He found out that thirty-two per cent of the prisoners could neither read nor write, and forty-seven per cent of his charges had called it an education when they reached the third grade. He set himself to meet the situation, and the Intra-Wall Correspondence School of the Ohio Penitentiary resulted. Now the men are using their one-time idle hours for self improvement, and are learning something which will fit them to become useful citizens instead of useless criminals. To take a case in point of what Chaplain Reed and his school are doing: There was a chap named Spike in the Penitentiary. He was only twenty-six, but he was what the world called a hopeless criminal. Seventeen of the twenty-six years had been spent as a guest of the government. His story ran something like this. He had never seen his mother. She died getting him into the world. A switch engine got his father when Spike was eight, and a little less than two years later the reform school got Spike. He has been on the inside looking out most of the time since. One day he went into the office of Chaplain Reed and sheepishly asked for a course. He had to promise to stick to it through to a finish, and he got the course he wanted, which was one in chicken raising. His term expired, and he went to work on a chicken farm where he was "chamber maid" to a large flock of Plymouth Rocks. He has been out a year, which is eight months longer than he has managed freedom before. It may be, as critics say, only a flash in the pan, and Spike may come back, but he didn't have to go to work. He might have gone back to the old crowd, but he didn't. That is a hopeful sign. It at least proves that the Reed system is building up scruples, which is a long step in the right direction, and we join No. 49,068 in saying, hats off to Chaplain Reed and his school. It is one of the great promises of the modern world that one of its problems may be successfully solved.

Rev. W. J. Edwards, Steeds, N. C., of the Western North Carolina Conference, is open for church work the coming year and will be glad to serve any church within reach that needs him. He is one of our consecrated, faithful workers, and should be engaged.

Last year the Seventh Day Adventists asked their people for a "Harvest Ingathering" to relieve their Mission Boards, and that church of 208,000 members responded with gifts that totaled $597,022.18. Is it too great a task for the Christians of the Southern Convention to raise $25.0000.00? How much are we going to overshoot the mark?

The Christian Church at Liberty, N. C, is certainly looking upward, outward and forward. The substantial brick building is attractive and comfortable, the Sunday School is wide-awake and growing, the congregation is large and prosperous. They are to add some Sunday School rooms to the building, a need long since felt, and a necessity if the Sunday School is to continue to grow.

Our Riedsville, N. C., Christians are building a home for their pastor. In this they are wise. The pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, writes: "Work has begun on our parsonage, located on Montgomery Street, the street on which the church is located. It is to be a modern eight-room house and will add much to the comfort and convenience of pastor and family. Our people here are indeed workers."

The total Foreign Mission Budget adopted by our General Mission Board for 1926 is $69,-689.17. Of this budget (when raised) $13,896 is for our work in Porto Rico, $36,250 is for our work in Japan, $10.000 for miscellaneous work, and $9,543.17 is to pay on deficit. It will be more than a pitty, it will approach a tragedy for us Christians of America not to raise the coming year this $69,687.15. That would be just a fraction over 60 cents per capita of our church membership. Just that much from us in carrying out our Lord's program.

Brother W. D. Harward writes: "During the week following the second Sunday in November, we held protracted services at the Windsor Christian Church, afternoon and night, the pastor doing the preaching. The meeting was well attended and there seemed to be a growing interest in the services, the last meeting seeming the best of all. There were six additions to the church. We are trying to stress the matter of setwardship during this period designated for the study of this question and we are glad to note signs of an awakened interest along this line."

Rev. O. D. Poythress and his band of faithful workers, are certainly accomplishing wonders in South Norfolk. Such a display of faith and works we do not often find in these doubting days. Under date of November 20th, in a personal letter, Brother Poythress writes: "We are still going forward with our work at South Norfolk, thanks to our gracious Heavenly Father. We are working about thirty men this week, pouring cement, plastering, plumbing, and finishing up our electric wiring, in addition to the work of the carpenters. I don't know where we are going to get the money to pay off Saturday. We had $170 on hand at the end of last week and we have got to have the money from somewhere to pay off our workmen. I know the Lord has plenty of it, and this is His work, and we are His children, so I have faith to believe that it is coming from somewhere, but we are not sitting here and waiting for Him to throw it into our lap." Such faith has characterized Brother Poythress and his workers from the beginning in their endeavor to build an adequate house of worship that is to cost upwards of $75,000.00. Our work at this point has demanded such a house many years, and now that the work goes forward, Brother Poythress takes fresh courage and dares to press on. Surely God will reward such faith and crown such work with due reward.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

To Pastors of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference.

The Christian Missionary Association meets on Tuesday, December 8th, four weeks from this week. That is not long off—so get ready.

We feel the pastors should present the work of the C. M. A. in their fields and should endeavor to hold the membership strength of last year, and where possible to increase it by securing new memberships.

The campaign last year resulted successfully, but it was simply a temporary success. For permanent results, the members secured last year must be held and new members must be secured. We are not requesting an intensive campaign such as we had last year, but simply that the ministers will interest themselves in holding the C. M. A. up to last year's strength.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is publishing the C. M. A. memberships by groups of churches. So watch for the memberships in your church or churches. The C. M. A. membership is also listed by churches in the LIII. Volume, or 1925 Annual, pages 161-165. If you do not find your church listed it is because it is one of the eighteen churches in the conference in which there are no C. M. A. memberships. This does not include the Webster Community Church, for they joined with a church membership, October 28, 1925.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, President,
For Executive Committee.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

"ROBERT MORRISON, MASTER BUILDER."

The United Council for Missionary Education chose Marshall Broomhall, M. A., to write a biography of Robert Morrison. He has written. His volume is not only interesting and instructive, but in many instances it is thrilling and inspiring. Dr. Robert Morrison was one of the world's truly great heroes. Under the severest difficulties, trials, and hardships, he went to China, in 1807, when the Chinese didn't want him there, and the English Government from which he went did not want him to go there. He actually had to sail by way of America, landing in New York, and then going thence to Canton, China, to get into the "Celestial Empire" at all. From 1807 to 1833, he lived in China constantly, only enjoying one furlough at home during that period, and he was under constant threat of being beheaded. He was forbidden to print tracts or religious literature in China, and yet this man translated and printed in Chinese not only some of the Gospels in separate tracts, but the entire Old and New Testaments. He carried daily his life in his hands, for the Chinese wanted nothing that the foreigner had for them in that day and time.

He preached seven years before his heart was gladdened with a single convert; and after twenty-five years of incessant toil and perpetual hardship, he had baptized only ten. He died in China, in 1833, away from wife and children, having spent the most part of a quarter of a century in lonely toil without friends and loved ones, from five and six in the morning until his strength was exhausted late at night. He was only fifty-two when he died, and yet the work of this man in translating the Bible into the Chinese language, in making a Chinese Dictionary, and in preaching the gospel in China, began the building of the Empire of the Kingdom of Heaven among the Chinese.

It would look like a mad dream. It indeed seemed to be folly and nonsense for one man, single handed and alone, to go out to carry the gospel to four hundred million people, one-fourth of the world's population, especially when there was not a soul of that vast number who wanted him or what he had to say, and who for many years regarded him as a "foreign devil" and treated him as such.

In reading this wonderful biography, one is reminded that heroes since Paul's day have wrought for the gospel and suffered in preaching the gospel even as Paul did himself. It is doubtful if the hardships of Paul were any heavier or more grievous to be borne than those of Robert Morrison. In fact, one would judge that Morrison had the heavier burden to bear, and cross to carry, because Paul did at least labor among some friends and followers, whereas Morrison, after wearing his life out—a strenuous, an energetic, a laborious life, in trying to win disciples to his Lord, could count all that he ever won on the fingers of his two hands. Though dying exhausted with labors and worn with toil in the name of his Lord, and without witnessing the outcome of his efforts, Robert Morrison was indeed a Master Builder of the thousands of missionaries and hundreds of thousands of converts in China today, who are the fruits of the labors of this pioneer man of God.

One seldom reads a book that reveals such sterling traits of character, such unswerving determination to do his Master's will and such indomitable energy in executing the cause that he had championed and the task to which his Lord had called him.

Robert Morrison was the pioneer missionary to the great closed land of China. But he wrought so faithfully and laid foundations so securely that the gates of China were finally flung open to the Christian world, and on the foundation that he laid the Christian Church of China has arisen.

Mr. Broomhall has laid the Christian world under obligations in portraying so graphically the career of this Master Builder, Robert Morrison. The Geo. H. Doran Co., of New York is the publisher, but the book can be had, we are sure, from THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Richmond, Va., at $1.50 per copy. And it is worth ten times that amount to every soul that reads it.

THE SCRIPTURAL SABBATH.

Many of our people will remember Rev. H. G. Cowan as a former minister in our church. At this time Brother Cowan is living in Freewater, Montana, and is with the Church of the Nazarene. He did not enjoy very good health in the Eastern States, and in Montana we have no Christian Churches, so he is doing service for his Master in a sister denomination, of which he is now a member. Brother Cowan has just published a book of slightly more than a hundred pages dealing with the topic which captions this article. The book is published by the Nazarene Publishing House, 2109 Troost Avenue, Kansas City, Mo. The introduction to the book is written by Dr. John W. Goodwin, General Superintendent of the Church of the Nazarene, who says:

"This book from the pen of Brother Cowan should have wide and extended circulation among all Christian people. I believe the truth therein stated will become authority among spiritual people everywhere."

Brother Cowan says in regard to his book and the purpose in writing it:

"That one day above all others should be kept as a true, Scriptural Sabbath day, and that that day is Sunday, will be the theme of the following pages."

Brother Cowan in his discussion brings out the fact that Saturday worship has never been a part of Divine economy as a weekly cycle Sabbath, either before or after Christ, that the true Sabbath of God is more especially concerned with true worship from the heart than in keeping any one particular day.

The Seventh Day Adventists will not, of course, agree with this position, neither will the Jewish leaders concede the finality of his arguments. The Protestant world, however, is thoroughly convinced that Sunday is a suitable day as Sabbath and are satisfied with the three reasons which Brother Cowan gives for making this day a memorial:

(1) Of God's finished work of redemption through Christ.

(2) Of the deliverance of men from a more galling bondage than that of Egypt, through the resurrection of Christ from the dead, and,

(3) A sign of the sanctification of God's people by faith.

Any who are interested in a very careful and exhaustive study of the question of the Sabbath will find this book very valuable. Brother Cowan discusses the Sabbath as regulated by the Hebrew Calendar, as determined by the authority of Jesus Christ, the Lord of the Sabbath, and as fixed by the practices of the early Christians, and to this method of approach there can surely be no exception.

TWO NOBLE SPIRITS.

An angel chorus announced the Advent of the Son of God. It had to be that way. Song is the native expression of the soul's rejoicing. Music speaks a universal language. Music never fails to touch the heart.

The great spiritual awakenings of mankind have always been accompanied by music. Moody had his Sankey; Torrey, his Alexander; Ham, his Ramsey; and Billy Sunday, his Rodeheaver. The preaching of the Word is ably supported by the ministry of music, vocal and instrumental. I know two noble spirits whose lives are dedicated to the cause of evangelism through music. I want you to know them too.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis, whom to know is to love, are among the devout and deeply consecrated musical evangelists of our day. Brother Davis is blind. Many great pianists have been so afflicted, but what he lacks in vision, he makes up in a tense and spiritual musical emotion. His soul's eyes see the inspiring possibilities of his instrument and with a power born of spiritual genius he interprets the deepest longings of the human heart in its quest for fellowship with God.

And what shall I say of Mrs. Davis? She is consecrated; she is spirit-filled. In her singing and in her exhortations, she nobly compliments her talented husband's spiritual endowment. And so they twain are one in their service for their Lord and ours.

God bless them in their ministry of love and make them a blessing wherever He shall lead them to serve Him and His Kingdom.

"A GREAT BOOK."

Little-Brown & Co., Boston, Mass., has recently brought out a great book. The title is "One Increasing Purpose." The author is A. S. M. Hutchinson. It is a book of fiction, but one which may be read and interpreted seriously. Mr. Hutchinson has already made his fame as a writer of fiction with his other books, "If Winter Comes" and "This Freedom," being among the number. But in his latest volume, the author gets at the interpretation of the real need and the real spirit of our time. He paints in remarkable colors a strong man in pursuit of a real purpose and that pursuit is never satisfied until that purpose is firmly fixed in his mind. The hero in quest of his purpose interprets to his friends and associates about him, who are in quest of wealth, fame and wickedness with which to satisfy their souls, that it is the spirit and not the body that must be satisfied, and that the soul of man in its flight through time must have that on which to feed that is more stable than food or raiment, fine houses or fine clothes, or millions of money. The hero has a brother who is a prince among financiers and commands untold influence in the financial world. But this brother's home is not happy, and before the end comes that brother is calling upon the hero, poor in this world's goods, to give him comfort, real comfort, and something worth while to stand on in life.

The author interprets the fact that the spiritual meaning in life is life's real meaning. The author seems inspired by this great theme, the greatest theme in the world, and he inspires the reader to have a firm fixed purpose and pursue it at any hazards. He makes Christ the common denominator, this hero does, and reduces all deeds and acts to a numerator that will square with the denominator. It is a marvelous book and will bring to the distinguished author even greater fame than his fertile pen has heretofore produced. J. O. A.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, through its authorized committee, has issued the call and program for the week of prayer in all the churches. The date is fixed beginning January 3, 1926, and closing January 9th. It is a clarion call to the churches and all auxiliary organizations and all the peoples thereof to observe a week of prayer at the beginning of a new year.

The topics for meditation and prayer and the outlines are exceedingly significant and interesting and are based on scripture readings. On Monday, January 4th, the topic is "Thanksgiving and Humiliation; for Tuesday, January 5th, "The Church Universal—The One Body of Which Christ is the Head"; Wednesday, January 6th, "Nations and their Leaders"; Thursday, January 7th, "Missions"; Friday, January 8th, "The Family, Schools, Colleges and the Young"; Saturday, January 9th, "The Home Base." A large four page folder is issued giving outlines of the topics, scripture readings for the program and sufficient material for every day's service. These programs can be had by addressing the Federal Council of Churches, 105 E. 22d St., New York. The price of the programs is $1.50 for 100 copies. J. O. A.

A "LOVE OFFERING."

Southern Baptists find their Foreign Mission Board $1,800,000 00 in debt and their Home Mission Board over a million in debt. So instead of retreating or retrenching, the Baptist churches have decided to give a great "Love Offering" on Sunday, December 27th to retrieve this indebtedness.

Now that strikes one as a mighty good name to use in "lifting" missionary indebtedness—a love offering.

The Christians in our conferences have voted to set apart, in some conferences February, in some, March, as Missions Month, in which we are to give all members of Christian Churches the opportunity of a "love offering" to help retrieve our embarrasment and raise an emergency fund of $25,000.00. And if we really love our Lord and His gospel as we say we do, the entire emergency fund and more will be raised. How we do trust that our people may look upon it, not as a burden offering, but as a "love offering." J. O. A.

MISS OLIVE WILLIAMS.

Elsewhere in THE SUN this week, Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., gives an account of the going away of our dear sister, Miss Olive Williams, who for many years was our faithful missionary in Porto Rico. She gave the best of her life to this work. She wrought nobly and accomplished much in the name of the Lord. She now rests from her labors and her works do follow her. Not only do we of the States mourn her going, but there are hundreds in Porto Rico whom she has helped and who will miss her from their ranks and shed a tear because a dear friend and great heart has been taken from them. There was no more self-sacrificing and willing worker, no more consecrated and devoted missionary on the foreign field than dear Sister Williams.

While we mourn her going and revere her memory, we devoutly pray that God will give us not only one but many workers to fill up the ranks now so sadly broken becouse of her decease. J. O. A.

WHY OUR ELON COMMUNITY SHOULD BE THANKFUL.

By Mrs. W. A. Harper.

We have reason to be thankful, decidedly I think, for the good health of our community. During the past year only two persons have passed away in our community, a young man and an aged lady. In this connection, too, we should be thankful that both of these had made their peace with God, and we have every reason to believe that their eternal welfare is a happy state.

We should be thankful too because persons who have lived in our community dislike to move away, and always speak kindly of it as a Christian community. There is a fine feeling of brotherliness which cannot fail to make a strong appeal. I do not recall any citizen of our community who left it without regret and always those who have lived here love to come back. This is not to say that all citizens of our community heartily contribute their part to the making of our community spirit. I wish I could say this, but it is entirely true that whether they have contributed to the making of the community spirit or not, former citizens always speak in highest terms of our town. For this we should be thankful.

We should be thankful too that our community is provided with a beautiful place for public worship and a magnificent educational building for the training of the Christian life without cost to us. Other communities are put to great expense and sacrifice to provide themselves such facilities for the spiritual life, but our community has these items furnished them without money and without price as to their cost and also as to their maintenance. I think, however, that this situation imposes upon us the necessity as a community to contribute relatively more toward benevolent enterprises of a general character, as a sort of expression of appreciation for these peculiar advantages which we enjoy without the expense to which others must go for them.

I think too that we should not fail to express our appreciation for the boys and girls who constitute our community. Not all of them are perfect, but they are taken as a whole a fine group of promising children and they are willing, as I know from experience, to be taught and trained to do the right thing and to live properly. We should express our very special thanks for the Week Day Religious Instruction which is supplied our boys and girls in the department of Christian Education of the college. No other community, so far as I know, has such instruction provided for them as ours has in this splendid department. We will see the value of this excellent work in the character of the community a dozen or fifteen years hence even more strikingly than we see it today.

There are many additional reasons why we should, as a community, be thankful, but I shall mention only one other, and that is the fact that the spirit of sectarianism is absent from our church life; a situation in which all Christians of all names and faiths shall unite in a common and unified worship of the Heavenly Father. We have that situation here and we devoutly give thanks for it.

P. S.—I have purloined this from Mrs. Harper's room. She will be surprised to see it in print.—W. A. H.

DON'T BREAK THE EGGS.

"He's counting his chickens before they're hatched," has become such a favorite expression for the discouraged man, that he thinks it strange when the whole world fails to applaud his pessimistic warning.

Please! please! do not conclude now that pessimism is here referred to with any thought of discrediting the average pessimist. Perhaps some over enthusiastic optimist is more largely responsible for the brother's pessimism, than is the victim himself. But, in spite of this fact—and it is a fact in some instances—we shall do well to put forth our best efforts to rescue any brother from the blighting effects of pessimism who may chance to be afflicted therewith.

Perhaps we may be able to get him started on the road to recovery from his acute attack of indigestion by pointing out to him that he counts as many chickens before they're hatched as the optimist does. There is this difference, however: He counts dead chicks, while the optimist counts live ones. Seeing these dead chicks in prospect, he conludes it were better to let the incubator remmain idle.

Before we may wisely determine whether it will be to our advantage to go into this chicken-raising industry, it may be well to inquire as to the particular breed of chicks under discussion.

The quotation with which this article begins, is used so frequently with reference to our Christian enterprises which we believe have much to do with ushering in a reign of righteousness in the world, that it may be well for us to determine whether we should, or should not allow the incubator to be idle. Most incubators do bring forth some dead chicks. But they also bring forth live ones. Perhaps one reason for a reduction in the percentage of eggs producing live, healthy chicks is to be found in the fact that some over-anxious soul will persist in breaking the eggs—or a portion of them—before the day of "coming forth" has arrived.

Of course the optimist who persists in selling his chicks before they are hatched, and spending the money which he hopes to receive for them before it is earned, is soon likely to have no money with which to buy more eggs for future flocks of chicks. But there is a happy medium to be found between these two extremes—the bombastic optimist who ignores difficulties, and the benumbed pessimist who refuses to act for fear he will fail—the man who, recognizing, and properly evaluating obstacles to be overcome, sets himself to the task of becoming the master of circumstance.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Most local churches feel that they do not get full financial credit for what they do in the local church and beyond themselves. This feeling rests upon facts, and a little system and careful work would correct this almost universal lack. The suggestion made here may help to correct this deficiency and, at the same time, increase liberality among the members of the congregation; for members of the congregation, as well as members of the church, are under obligation to support religion and religious causes. Christianity has done more to improve industrial conditions, increase wealth, and further prosperity among the people, than anything else in human history. Wealth is indebted to Christianity. Labor is indebted to Christianity. Safety is indebted to Christianity. All men are indebted to Christianity. Non-church members are indebted to the church as well as members. The only difference between church members and non-church members is, that members have assumed this obligation, while non-church members have not assumed it in any positive and formal way. Some non-members of the church are honest and liberal enough to contribute to church expenses and benevolent causes. Such contributions bear witness to their sense of right and their liberal dispositions. They are in harmony with Christian requirements while they do not openly profess their allegiance.

But to return to the matter of such reports by local churches to conferences will give real credit for what the congregation does in the field of finance for the Kingdom. All the Auxiliary organizations in the local church, as Sunday School, Missionary and Christian Endeavor Societies, organized classes and other societies, should keep a record of all money received and paid out during the year and, through a written report made and read at the last conference of the church before the Annual Conference, tell exactly how much money has been received for the year, how much paid out, and the balance on hand. This will enable the secretary of the church to report to the Annual Conference the financial operations of the entire church for the year.

In addition to this, the financial report should show how much has been paid on Men and Millions for the year; and, where individuals have made donations, find out as far as possible how much has been given in that way and add to the total, under the head of for other purposes, so that the local congregation would have credit for the financial contributions for the year. More simple business should enter into the work of the church and its records. The pastor should see, at the beginning of the conference year, that this matter is impressed upon the organizations and the people. Such reports read at the last conference of the year in the local church, by some member of each organization, make an interesting meeting, besides developing a business-like method in the church.

ELON LETTER.

Our church has been slow to appreciate history. Our early leaders were so abhorrent of any force or fact that might impede the free expression of life that they actually burned all records of their public meetings. The difficulty, therefore, of accurately settling many points in our early history can be appreciated, but we should not give up on that account.

With the thought in mind of quickening a growing concern in our early history, the second day of the North Carolina Conference, which meets in Greensboro, N. C., December 9th and 10th, will be devoted to the consideration of a series of papers and addresses to which the group title has been given of "An Historical Presentation of the Achievements of the Christian Church in North Carolina and Adjacent Sections of Virginia."

The program, under this general head, continues throughout the day and is as varied as our achievements as a people have been. I have no doubt that every one who attends that day and listens to these addresses and reports, will go away with a higher appreciation of and love for the Christian Church. I can safely say this despite the fact that I had the honor to make this part of the program and the more so because others will present the subjects discussed.

Mr. W. E. MacClenny, the official historian of our Southern Church, will present the history of the Conferences and Churches of the Christians in North Carolina. Dr. W. C. Wicker is to give a history of deceased ministers of the North Carolina Conferences, while Prof. P. J. Kernodle will do likewise for the laymen and lay-women.

The Statistical History of our Church will be given by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, while Rev. P. T. Klapp will present a paper on our Missionary History. This address will conclude the morning session.

Capt. W. H. Turrentine and Dr. W. W. Staley are to give papers respectively with reference to our earlier and later educational history. Supt. Chas. D. Johnston will picture the history and development of the orphanage. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell will give our literary history, while Prof. Leo. D. Martin of the Elon Faculty will present an interpretation of the Rev. James O'Kelly.

The evening session will hear three great men of our church speak. Dr. W. D. Parry will discuss our principles; Dr. L. E. Smith will present Christian Union as a goal of our Brotherhood; and Dr. G. O. Lankford will conclude the great and uplifting program with an address on "The Christian Church Facing the Future."

I trust that large numbers of our people will attend this conference and enjoy the program. I certainly expect to come away from this conference imbued as never before with the greatness, the goodness, and the righteousness of our beloved Church.

MISS OLIVE GORDON WILLIAMS.

Miss Olive Gordon Williams, for many years a resident of Troy, Ohio, and well known throughout the Miami Valley, because of her earlier associations in newspaper work, passed away at the Home for Ministers of The Christian Church, Lakemont, New York, recently, at the age of fifty-eight years and six months. For the past eleven years she has been actively engaged in missionary work in Porto Rico, to which field she was appointed by the Mission Board of the Christian Church.

Though born at Gordonville, Smith County, Tenn., Miss Williams as a little girl came with her father and mother, Captain and Alice Gordon Williams, to Troy, Ohio, where many years of her life were spent. Following her high school work she took a commercial course in Dayton, and became secretary to her father during a decade or more of service in the lower house of Congress at Washington. She became well known in this section during these years as the Washington correspondent for several Miami County papers. Upon her return to Troy, she was for a number of years associated with her father in the editing of The Buckeye, of that city, and after his death, continued to edit it for some time.

Twenty-five years ago she made a tour of the world with her uncle, Judge H. H. Williams and family, and many of her articles were published in papers in this section. This trip seemed to crystalize her missionary interest which had been growing from childhood when she had contributed the first dime to a newly organized missionary movement called The Children's Mission. Following the death of her parents, she turned her life entirely into the channels of missionary service and went to Porto Rico early in 1915.

Much of her service was in one of the most difficult towns on the island, both from the standpoint of opposition to her work and unsanitary tropical conditions. She suffered innumerable ills, but stuck to her task with remarkable energy and will power and succeeded in accomplishing fine work, the most important of which was along industrial lines. She broke down prejudice and turned opposition into co-operation by helping the poverty strickened children of her field in Porto Rico to help themselves by teaching them how to make strands of beads and fine drawn work for which she paid them reasonable wages. With this kind of an opening, she was enabled during these years to accomplish a really remarkable work along missionary lines.

Nine months ago she became seriously ill with a tropical disease which had been bothering her for a long time, and which eventually caused her death. She was sent home and after partially recovering during her stay in Troy, went to the Home for Ministers at Lakemont, New York. She was given every possible attention, but the disease had developed beyond the power of medical skill to stop.

Miss Williams leaves no immediate relatives, but has a host of friends and acquaintances throughout this section. Her father was a Captain in the Union Army during the Civil War, and in addition to her church activities she was prominently connected with the W. C. T. U and the local Troy and State Woman's Relief Corps.

She was buried from the First Christian Church of Troy, Ohio. The pastor, Rev. A. E. Kemp, D. D., had charge of the service, and Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., President of the Mission Board of the Christian Church, who as her former pastor had much to do with placing her under appointment, preached the sermon. A number of officials of the church attended, including, Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., Executive Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, and Rev. W. H. Martin, a former missionary to Porto Rico.

A later number of The Christian Missionary will be devoted to tributes to her life and work.

REPORT OF CENTENIAL CELEBRATION COMMITTEE.

It must not be understood or inferred that the Christian Church is but a hundred years old, nor is it true to say that this is the hundredth session of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference. We know that a session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference was held in the city of Raleigh in 1807, and it is very likely that this conference goes back to 1794. As a matter of fact, the North Carolina and Virginia Conference first included all the work of the Christians in the South and some churches in Pennsylvania. This statement is based on a communication written by Rev. William Guirey, from which I quote as follows:

"We have churches in every State South of the Potomac, also a few in Pennsylvania."

The first division in the ranks of the conference came in 1810, at Pine Stake in Orange County, Va. The subject over which the conference divided was as to the proper mode of baptism. Rev. William Guirey and others held that immersion was the proper mode. Rev. James O'Kelly and others held that sprinkling or pouring was the Bible method. However, some of the Eastern Virginia churches held with O'Kelly, so that the North Carolina and Virginia Conference included all the churches in North Carolina, some along the border in Virginia, and also some in Eastern Virginia. In 1827, the Eastern Virginia Conference voted to send Rev. Burwell Barrett and Rev. Mills Barrett to a meeting to be held in 1828 at O'Kelly's Meeting House, Chatham County, N. C., "To bring about a greater union among us."

In 1842, the Eastern Virginia Conference passed this resolution: "That in consideration of the wishes of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and others now wishing to join with us, and for the union and prosperity of the churches in this vicinity, we will be guided by such resolutions as this conference deems best for the future union and prosperity of the Christian Churches." As a result of this resolution, churches and ministers who were more convenient to the Eastern Virginia Conference were asked to join that body. This accounts for the fact that the Eastern Virginia Conference has certain churches associated with it in Gates County, N. C., and that the North Carolina and Virginia Conference has certain churches associated with it in Halifax and other counties in Virginia.

It may be interesting to know that in the beginning, the Christian Church had circuits just as the Methodist Churches had, and that the ministers were assigned to these circuits at the annual conferences. Some of these circuits included a great many churches; for example, in 1843, Haw River Circuit had the following churches: Huffines (now Shallow Ford), Pleasant Hill, Pisgah, Union (Va.), Shiloh, Christian Union, Brown's, Liberty, New Salem, Antioch, Hank's Chapel, O'Kelly's Chapel, Wilson's, Mt. Zion, Union (Orange), Liberty (Caswell), Concord, Bethlehem, Apple's, New Providence, and Pleasant Grove; a total of twenty-one churches. New Salem in this group is the church in which we are now meeting, presumably, and at that time had three members.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference later divided into the Deep River Conference. In 1894, they united, and then the two conferences by mutual consent divided into three, which became known as the Western North Carolina Conference, the Eastern North Carolina Conference, and the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. In 1918, these three bodies came together in one and took the name of the North Carolina Christian Conference. These conferences are now working together in this general conference in matters of inspiration and general enterprise, but they meet in separate groups to handle local matters. At one time or another it will, therefore, be seen that every church in North Carolina and many of those in Virginia of the Christian Denomination have been officially connected with the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference is truly the mother of all the conferences of Christians in the South, and not merely in the sense that this conference was organized first in point of time, which is beyond dispute, but also because of the initiation of enterprises and in importance of work achieved since 1794.

We quote the following paragraph from the historian of the Southern Christian Convention, Mr. W. E. MacClenny, of Suffolk, Va.

"The North Carolina and Virginia Conference was the first to do Home Mission work, the first to build a church in the capital of your State, the first to send its influence to other States, the first to have a church school within its bounds, the first to begin a church paper, the first to send a foreign missionary to foreign fields before the War between the States, and the first to furnish a missionary to Japan for the Christian Church in the United States. Within its bounds the Southern Christian Association was organized, as was also the Southern Christian Convention, and the General Convention of the Christian Church, South. It furnished the man to put out the Government and Principles of the Christian Church, it was the first to have a college within its bounds, also first to have an orphanage within its bounds. It was the only one of the Southern conferences that was able in any manner to hold together during the war of 1861 to 1865, and was the first to rally after that struggle, and hardly had the smoke of battle cleared from Appomattox before work was begun to organize the colored people of the State into a conference, this being the first that we have known of in the United States."

So far as we are able to find , the following churches of this conference are at least one hundred years old:

Apple's Chapel,
Bethlehem,
Pleasant Grove, Va.,
Salem Chapel,
Union, N. C., and Union, Va.

Your committee has pleasure in saying that on the second day of the North Carolina Conference, which is to be held in the city of Greensboro, December 9th and 10th, many of the important events connected with the history of the Christian Church in North Carolina and in adjacent counties of Virginia will be given. According to the program of this conference, the entire day is to be given to the consideration of these important items covering the history of our church, our ministerial and lay leaders, its enterprises and principles, and the future door of opportunity that faces the church at this time. It is hoped that every member of this conference will be present at that time.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENNISON, Secretary.

WHAT ARE YOU AFTER?

It is well in your Stewardship program to keep certain practical, definite objectives in mind. Ask yourself what are you really trying to accomplish in your study and program. Some of the really important items that should be secured are:

1.—That your people, all of them, should come to know what the Bible teaches about Stewardship; its meaning, importance, spirituality. Many d onot understand how really fundamental it is to their life and character. When you have finished your treatment of it, they should at least know and recognize their responsibility to God as stewards; that it is a, great vital, Bible doctrine, to which they cannot be indifferent.

2.—A definite commitment to the principles and practice of Stewardship. There should result an acknowledgement of their Stewardship by the actually setting aside for the service of God a real measure of their time, money, talent, energy. Just to listen and agree to the teachings of stewardship without acknowledgement will not mean much permanently for their lives. There should be a new feeling of personal responsibility.

3.—A new and careful study and analysis of your own church's present methods of church and Kingdom finance. How can your method be improved, made more Christian? Are you using the approved methods of church finance—the annual every member canvass, duplex envelopes, two treasurers, the making of real budgets for local current expenses and the same for benevolences? Is the ration between what we spend for ourselves and for others Christian? Are we training the whole congregation, even the children, in stewardship and proper giving, or are we just raising money for the present to pay bills? Do we send reports and statements and keep all subscribers informed as to the needs and conditions of the church's finances? Do we pay by check and have all books audited?

4.—The campaign should always close with an enlistment and endollment of tithers. This for old and young, husband and wife. No one should wait on another. Great emphasis should be placed on this . Thousands feel that they should tithe, but no one has enlisted them. We have enrollment cards and wall charts free for the asking.

5.—There should be a new atmosphere in the homes of our people. Many children are growing up in an atmosphere of getting all one can and giving as little as possible. Others are growing up in homes where pleasure, luxury, selfishness in spending, is the rule. Many have never been taught what money is, how it should be used, what proportion should be given. Many homes in your congregation should learn a new atmosphere from your teaching, as to the use of their lives and money.

MAKE A BUDGET.

If you have not yet secured the 1926, 25 cent "Diary and Budget Account" book for yourself, for your children, or for the young people whom you teach in Sunday School, you had better not delay. They are fine and important.

Miss Margaret H. Morey reports having received the following articles for the Fancy Gap wark during the month of October:

From Circle No. 4, Woman's Missionary Society, Burlington, N. C., 6 boxes of clothing.

From Woman's Bible Class, Burlington, N. C., 1 box of clothing.

From Palestine, Ill., 1 box of Sunday School literature.

From Ingram, Va., 1 box of Sunday School literature.

TWO WORTH WHILE AND INSPIRING QUARTERLY REPORTS.

The Mission Secretary has received two reports recently that he feels SUN readers should see. They are remarkable. Many of our pastors even who are most concerned for our Mission Work and the growth of the Church, and very many of our good people in churches where there are no Woman's Missionary Societies, have begun to realize what our good women in the Missionary Societies are doing.

Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Holland, Va., treasurer of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference, kindly gave us a carbon copy of her fourth quarterly report and it is as follows:

Dues to General Board	$ 150.00
Home Special, Richmond	834.30
Foreign Special, Japan	760.00
Kitano's Salary from Suffolk Woman's Society	140.00
Kitano's Salary from Suffolk C. E. Society	100.00
Matsuno's Salary from Dover Women's Society	50.00
Sunday School in Japan from Suffolk Women's Society	12.50
Mary Gilbert at Elon Orphanage from Suffolk Women's Society	15.00
For Rocky Ford	86.00
Elon Baby Home from Cradle Roll Dept.	128.64
Santa Isabel Pastor's Salary from Y. P. & W. W.'s	542.78
Mountain Work in Va., Y. P. & W. W.'s	542.78
Painting the Elk-Spur School from Suffolk Girls' Society	75.00
One life membership	10.00
Total	$3,597.42

Mrs. Leathers adds that of the Rocky Ford fund $16.35 is a special from Waverly Woman's Society, and $5.00 is for the same fund from the Union (Surry) Young People's Society. It also should be mentioned that $100.00 on a previous amount sent in for the Rocky Ford Fund was given as a special by the Woman's Society of Christian Temple, Norfolk, and this is in addition to the gifts of that church through which they support a teacher in our mountain school at a salary of $75.00 per month.

Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C., is the treasurer of the North Carolina Woman's Conference, and her quarterly report is as follows:

Regular Dues	$ 313.38
Richmond Work	300.00
Rocky Ford Fund	408.06
Japanese Student Fund	75.00
Foreign Missions	79.45
Mrs. Fry's School	30.00
Dora Delfina, Porto Rico	100.00
Cradle Roll	75.02
General Purpose Fund	100.00
Total to Mrs. W. T. Walters, Nov. 4th	$1,480.91
Rocky Ford, Oct. 21st	259.62
Total	$1,740.53

It will be understood that the women transmit their funds quarterly, and these reports are for the final quarter of the year. However, it may be added that the final quarter is generally the best of the four. The annual reports have been printed in THE SUN, but these quarterly reports are certainly worth a re-reading. Our heartiest congratulations to the good women of the Christian Church, who are showing the men how to put on the whole program of our Lord, which program SUN readers can find in full at Mark 16: 15.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

REPORT OF DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

TO THE GENERAL BOARD OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH, OCTOBER 22, 1925.

DR. W. P. MINTON, Foreign Secretary.

A year ago the Foreign Mission Department presented to this General Board twelve definite propositions which it hoped to carry out as a part of its effort to make a normal gain in our overseas service. It is not an easy task to accomplish worth while goals even under the most favorable circumstances, and it is especially difficult to do so in dealing with the uncertainties of work in a foreign country. We are profoundly grateful, therefore, to be able to report that with the exception of one proposition and the partial exception of two others, we have been able to complete our undertaking substantially as planned.

1.—We proposed to give Miss Stacy a furlough year of special study in America and return her to her work this fall. She spent a most satisfactory year at Defiance, did a good piece of deputation work and is now back in Japan, where she and Miss Crew are to spend the coming year in the Sendai field. Miss Crew graduated in June from the two year language school course and is now a full-fledged missionary.

2.—Our second proposal was to bring the McKnights home this year for their regular furlough, which was to be spent in special study. They are now located in Boston, where both are pursuing special courses in Boston University, School of Religious Education, and they have already been doing some good work among our churches and conferences.

3.—Our third proposal was to begin if possible the church and kindergarten building in Tokyo this year. The contract has been let and the work is now under way, with funds already in hand. This will give us a splendid plant in the Naka Shibuya, Tokyo, field, with a pastor's home, and also a building so arranged as to accommodate the church, a night school, and the flourishing kindergarten. The Garmans moved into the newly completed mission home in February.

4.—We planned to continue the training of seven theological students and two kindergarten training students in Japan, and we are happy to say that this has been done and another theological student and two kindergarten training students added.

5.—Our fifth proposal for the Japan work was to send out this fall Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Fletcher, but circumstances made this impossible at this time. They are now located in the pastorate at Dewittville, N. Y., and hope to sail a year hence. The year in the pastorate will be valuable training for their missionary service later.

6.—In Porto Rico we planned to send the Mortons from Ponce to Salinas to take charge of Miss Williams' work because of her illness. But though ill constantly, she stuck to her work for many months, and the Mortons were thus able to move to the challenging Santa Isabel field, where they have not only co-operated with the pastor in his work but have also had charge of the industrial work and assisted in the launching of a kindergarten and Daily Vacation Bible School. Miss Williams was eventually forced to come home and is now in the Aged Ministers' Home at Lakemont, N. Y., fighting to regain her health. She has given her life to the work. (This last sentence is literally true, for since the writing of this report, Miss Williams has been called home to the land of happiness and bliss.—Ed.)

7.—Our next proposal for Porto Rico was to put fifteen hundred dollars into new buildings. We have secured a suitable house and lot for a much needed parsonage at Arus, at a cost of $1,100, and have funds on hand for a chapel, which we would have built this year had we been able to secure the land needed. Funds for another chapel have since been secured.

8.—Our eighth proposal was to have Miss Kirkpatrick, who was placed under appointment last year, complete her year of high school teaching and begin this fall a course in religious education. She is now in the midst of her studies at Northwestern University, and we hope to put her into Union Mission School next year.

9.—We planned to assume our full share of co-operative work which is becoming increasingly vital to every mission field. We have done this by representation on the faculty of the Theological School in Tokyo, in the American School, the Union Church, the Japan Christian Council, The Union Seminary of Porto Rico, the Union Evangelical Association and the Union Book Store and Printing Press in Porto Rico, the Foreign Missions Conference, the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America, Missionary Education Movement, World Alliance for International Justice and Goodwill, etc. We also had a fine representation at the great Foreign Missions Convention held in Washington in January, and its message was carried effectively into many of our churches.

10.—Our next proposal was to vigorously push Missionary Education throughout the church. This has been done through the columns of The Christian Missionary, the Herald of Gospel Liberty, the Sunday School Herald and Junior Herald. We have also issued a thousand copies of a poster and nine different leaflets, totaling about ninety thousand copies. These were used in special programs by about a hundred churches. Church Schools of Missions were conducted in fifty churches for the study of Foreign Missions, and 209 churches informed us that they used the leaflets in some form of instruction. It is possible that others of the 509 churches contributing to Foreign Missions this year made some use of this literature. We also co-operated with the Board of Christian Education in furnishing missionary material for its various publications and in the Young People's Congresses and the summer schools, Miss Morrill and Miss Stacy assisting materially in this work. The secretary also gave a great deal of time to personal visitation of churches, conferences and institutes, besides conducting a vigorous campaign by mail.

11.—Our eleventh objective was to move steadily forward in all lines of the regular work, in spite of the heavy deficit, because we believed our people wanted us to. We have not succeeded in every way, but some real progress has been made. At Ishinomaki, Japan, our old property has been sold and a much more valuable lot and buildings acquired in a much better location. The total value of our property holdings in Japan are now estimated to be 338,725 yen, or approximately $169,362.50.

We had 113 baptisms in Japan last year, a gain of 24; resident membership increased from 730 to 789, a gain of 59; enrolled enquirers decreased from 170 to 123, a loss of 47; Sunday School enrollment decreased from 2436 to 2198, a loss of 238. A readjustment after the resignation of one of our Bible Women necessitated the discontinuance of one Sunday School in Tokyo. Some of Mrs. Fry's work in branch Sunday Schools was interfered with at the time of the Japanese-American Immigration difficulties. These two items account for losses that total 530. The total loss for the Sunday Schools in Japan is only 238, as the work outside of these two points has shown decided gains. Total contributions from the Japanese church decreased from 7,154.65 yen ($3,577.35) to 6,965.65 yen ($3,482.83); a loss of 189.20 yen ($94.60); but pastoral support increased from 2,129 yen ($1,014) to 2,225 yen ($1,112), a gain of 96 yen ($48).

In Porto Rico, church membership increased from 317 to 340, a gain of 23; Sunday School enrollment increased from 902 to 920, a gain of 18; C. E. enrollment increased from 214 to 236, a gain of 22; total contributions from Porto Rico churches increased fro $994.26 to $1,170.83, a gain of $176.57; pastoral support increased from $437.45 to $507.00, a gain of $69.55. Our property in Porto Rico is worth approximately $50,000.00.

12.—Our last objective was to win at least one hundred fifty to Christ during the year and to train and develop our national church membership in both fields. There were 38 confessions of faith in Porto Rico and 113 in Japan, making to total of 151—just one beyond our goal.

While we lost one of our oldest pastors in Japan (Rev. Matsukawa) by resignation, we ordained two well trained young men, Mr. Taizumi and Mr. Tanaka, both having already been tried in settled pastorates in Tokyo. Two of the four kindergarten training students are giving part time as assistants in the actual work; some of churches during the summer vacation. We have eleven teachers in five kindergartens and five helpers in two day nurseries.

Mr. Victor Rivera, who served us two years in Porto Rico has resigned to take up teaching. A new worker has been added and two laymen who have been loyal workers for two years, have been named lay-preachers and are assisting in two fields.

Other evidences of growth on the part of our nationals is found in the fact that two Japanese churches have raised substantial sums for new buildings and the Sendai Christian Orphanage, so long supported by our church, no longer needs help, being entirely supported and directed by the Japanese. Self-support in both fields shows some increase.

A comparison of Foreign Mission receipts for the past two years follows:

	1924	1925
General Fund	$ 33,483.33	$ 42,046.51
Designated Funds	17,611.28	7,058.13
Forward Movement	12,500.00	5,238.00
Tatal	$ 63,594.61	$ 54,342.64

While this shows a total loss in revenue of $9,251.97, the General Fund, which best indicates the interest of our people, shows a gain of $9,563.18. There was a loss of $7,262.00 in Forward Movement Funds and $10,553.15 in Designated Funds, the latter partially accounted for in the fact that $8,139.76 of last year's receipts were Earthquake Emergency gifts. Last year, 455 churches gave regular offerings amounting to $14,830.47, and this year 509 churches gave $17,588.84, a gain of $2,758.37. We added during the year $3,514.66 to our permanent funds.

Your secretary has continued to edit and publish The Christian Missionary, which now has its largest subscription list, and has given about 140 addresses in 17 different conferences and 65 different churches, including 15 conference sessions, and a number of missionary institutes. He traveled over 16,000 miles, has spoken to 17,280 people and has represented the department in a number of interdenominational meetings.

(Note.—The above is the report of the accomplishments during 1924-25. In an early issue we will give the remainder of the report, which deals with the plans for the coming year.)

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson XI.—December 13, 1925.

Subject: "Paul in Melita and Rome."

Golden Text: "I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Romans 1: 16.

Lesson: Acts 28: 1-31.

"Whosoever would be great among you must be the minister (or servant) of all." Paul was great on many occasions, but he was never greater than he was on the island of Melita. For one of the real tests of greatness is a man's willingness to humble himself and become the servant of all. There is a world of meaning in the words, "And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks." Here was one of the greatest men of all times, gathering sticks for a fire, when all around him there were men who were his inferiors in practically every way. One who knows anything about Paul can readily imagine the zeal and the thoroughness with which he did the menial task, and the humble and at the same time exhalted spirit of service which he manifested in the doing of the task. If this lesson teaches nothing else, let it teach us the glory of humble service performed in the spirit of Him who took a towel and girded himself and washed the disciples' feet.

Paul spent three months on the island of Melita. We do not know what he did, but we do know that he did something. Paul was too good a steward of life to allow three months to go by without doing some constructive work and rendering service. We have an inkling of some of the things he did in the story of how he healed Publius' father and also those who were brought to him. The man dedicated to the service of Jesus Christ can find anywhere and everywhere opportunities for service.

From Melita to Syracuse, to Rhegium, to Puteoli, were the next steps in Paul's itinerary. At Puteoli he found brethren, who not only welcomed him but kept him with them for a week. It must have warmed his heart to find friends in a strange land. And then he "went to Rome." This one thing Paul did, forgetting the things that were behind, and unmindful of the things that were to befall him ahead, he pressed on toward Rome. Like the Master, "he set his face" to go to Rome.

A group of Christians, who evidently had been informed of Paul's approach, came forty-three miles out of Rome and met him at the Three Taverns. "Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God and took courage." The sight of fellow Christians who had come that comparatively long journey to meet him stirred his heart and inspired him with new courage. "And so they came to Rome." Rome had seen many triumphal entries, some of them over that road that Paul traveled. But never before or since had there ever been an entry by a group that had more effect on the history of the empire or the life of the world, than that lone prisoner and his fellow-Christians had that day as they entered the city. Christianity was to conquer Rome, and alas, it was later to be conquered in a way by Rome.

Paul was allowed to live in his own hired house, but he was a prisoner, chained to a soldier day and night. Three days after he reached Rome, he called together the leaders of the Jews and tried to win their allegiance. They were rather non-committal at first, but desired to hear more of the sect which they had heard so much about, and which was everywhere spoken against.

When Paul had an opportunity to explain the movement which he represented, and when he testified concerning Jesus from both the law and the prophets, some believed and some did not. There was a disagreement, and to those who did not believe, and who turned away, Paul declared that they were those who having ears to hear, heard not, and having eyes to see, saw not. Prejudice and bigotry had blinded their eyes and stopped their ears and hardened their hearts. But the Gentile world was open to the message, and during Paul's two years at Rome he preached the gospel effectively. Writing from Rome to the Philippians, Paul says that his bonds in Christ had been made manifest in all the place and in all other places.

All things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are called according to His purpose. Paul, a prisoner at Rome, continued to preach the gospel to all who came to him. He preached the Kingdom of God and taught those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with all confidence. He was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it was the power of God unto salvation. It was good that he had an opportunity to preach the gospel.

But better still, at Rome Paul had an opportunity to think and to write, and some of his finest letters, and some of the Bible's best literature were produced during the Roman imprisonment.

If Paul had been free it is more than probable that these letters, certainly not all of them, would have been written. God in his providence was showing Paul a more excellent way, and leading him into a more fruitful and abiding service. And yet in all his literary activities, Paul always kept open house for all those who wanted to see him and to hear the good news. As Alice Freeman Palmer said, "It is folks who count. Invest your life in other folks." Ministers will do well to follow Paul's example as a student and writer, but they will do even better to follow his example in keeping his door and his heart open to all those who seek, or need to know the Way of Life.

Teaching Points.

1. It is not so much a matter of where a man is as of what he is.
2. Kindness speaks in a universal language.
3. Humility is always a mark of true greatness.
4. The man who has given himself to the service of Jesus Christ can always find some form of service.
5. Wherever there is human need there is a challenge to service.
6. The true man of God exercises a healing ministry wherever he goes.
7. Real gratitude expresses itself in action.
8. He who extends Christian hospitality to another, renders a high type of Christian service.
9. Christianity needs fellowship on the part of Christians.
10. The thought that others care for us gives us inspiration and courage.
11. God fulfills his purposes in strange, but certain ways.
12. A Christian's vocation is witnessing for Christ; all else is his avocation.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

December 13, 1925.

Topic: "Bible Principles of Giving."

Scripture: Lev. 27: 30; I. Cor. 16: 1-4, 14.

Plans for the Meeting.

Service and giving to others is the thought running through all of the Christian Endeavor topics for December. This thought will be a fitting preparation for whatever your Society may be planning for Christmas. For this reason twenty minutes or longer should be used either at the beginning or close of the meeting to practice Christmas songs. The committee at work on the Christmas program should be given an opportunity to report what plans have already been made, and for further suggestions. The thought of "something for others" should be kept uppermost in the minds of the members.

Program.

Prayer by the leader.

Scripture references read by two people appointed before the meeting.

Duet: "Have Thine Own Way."

Sentence prayers.

Song: "We Give Thee but Thine." (p. 157, "Worship and Song.")

Leader's Talk.

A steward is a keeper. "We are responsible to God as stewards of everything we are and have—life, time, talents, possessions, spiritual resources.

Stewardship is primarily spiritual. Its great objective is character. It is the principle on which daily life must be organized to be fully Christian.

"Stewardship grows out of our obligation to God as Creator, Owner, and Giver of all things, material and spiritual, and is indispensable to a life of obedience, love and gratitude."

We bring nothing into the world when we come and we take nothing out when we go. What we have while here is the gift of God and for us to use for his service and ourselves. We are partners together with God. It should not be how much we should give for Kingdom service, but how much of God's money should we use for ourselves?

Thoughts for the Meeting.

Hermon Eldredge says: "I began tithing when working in a store for $5.00 a week and paying $3.50 for my board and washing. Fifty cents was a lot to give, but then I had a dollar margin. The practice has been a great blessing."

Dr. J. O. Atkinson says: "I 'supposed,' 'estimated,' 'thought' for years that I was a tither. However, I finally . . . began to keep accounts and render strictly to the Lord His tenth.

"Since then tithing has had a new meaning: 1st. By having something to give and knowing what I could give to every church and benevolent appeal. 2d. By being enabled to give cheerfully and systematically, because the Lord's treasury in my accounting always had something. 3d. Whatever beyond the tenth I have been permitted to give has been a source of real joy and sacrificial delight."

Benefits of Tithing.

Let different members read these statements:

1. It has God's promise of personal blessing. Mal. 3: 8-10; Prov. 3: 9-10.
2. Tithing makes possible "cheerful giving." Ask the tither.
3. Tithing promotes success in business, by promoting better business methods.
4. It saves a person from the perils of love of money. The conscientious tither will never love his money more than his Master.
5. Tithing provides a surplus on hand; for every proper Kingdom cause.
6. Tithers do not become impoverished.
7. Tithing increases spirituality.
8. Tithing increases consecration.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

THE BELIEVER'S DUTY.

"Whosoever shall confess me before men."
Lesson: Luke 12: 8-9.

Thousands of churches are holding special evangelistic meetings. Many will stand at the cross-roads; some will make the good step; others will cast away what may be a last opportunity. Said an irresolute man to the evangelist at such a meeting: " I dread the public confession; I am timid in public; I cannot face the ordeal!"

By way of admonition to such, let us consider an evangelistic meeting held in the year 64 A. D., as revealed by the records. This meeting of more than eighteen hundred years ago was held on the outskirts of ancient Rome. Nero reigned. Christians were under persecution; many had burned at the stake, others thrown to the lions, some crucified. So this meeting was held in a grove and at night, with only the light of a fitful moon.

In the background stood a young Roman. He heard and believed. Always he had been perplexed by the multiplicity of pagan gods. This preaching about Christ was reasonable. The Spirit whispered to his heart. But the enemy! Who could tell what spy was skulking behind the bushes, waiting to inform the authorities? If he accepted Christ, torture and death might be the guerdon. So he did not confess that night.

On the next night, however, he faced the group of believers and the shadows, and made his confession of Christ. That was the year 64—a period marked by a carnival of death. What shall be said in defense of one who, in this peaceful era, lacks courage to publicly proclaim Jesus?

—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Lord's Prayer.—All joining.

TUESDAY.

ARE YOU STANDING THE TEST?

"For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man . . . which went out . . . to hire laborers into his vineyard."
Lesson: Matt. 20: 1-9.

Why does God ask service of men? Why does He bid us who are strong to bear the burdens of the weak? Why does He appoint unto each of us some task to do for His name's glory? Surely there is not one service that He requires of any of us but what He could perform infinitely easier and better for Himself. Why then must the Kingdom of heaven be like unto a man who goes out to hire laborers into his vineyard?

God's request is our testing. He knocks upon our door with the demands of duty, because we need Him to help us prove ourselves. If our faithfulness toward Him consists merely of words, then no one knows, not even we ourselves, how good or bad it really is. But if our faithfulness has borne the burden and the heat of the day, and has endured uncomplainingly unto the end, then it is proven genuine and sincere before the gaze of all who care to see.

Our real worth is proven in our work. Service is the barometer by which the degree of our faith is measured. There is not a man among us who is not called upon to serve, that he may thereby be enabled to test and prove himself before God and men. You are called, and so am I. The question is: Are we standing the test?

Rev. G. E. Lenski.

Prayer by one of the parents.—That we may learn to value the opportunity to become faithful and earnest co-workers with our Lord and Master, never grudging the cost or fretted about the reward.

WEDNESDAY.

"OVERCOMING THE WORLD!"

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the World."
Lesson: I. John 5: 1-5.

To be in bondage to this world is one of the most galling forms of slavery. Look at the man who is in bondage to his millions, or the woman who is fettered by the false but exacting standards of the social set, nobody has less real freedom than they. Freedom from the bondage of the world of sight and sense is one of the blessings conferred upon those who are born from above.

The world here spoken of is not so much the physical world, nor the world of men and women. It has reference to the worldly spirit. The worldly spirit is contrary to the spirit of the Kingdom of God, and to be dominated by it is to lose the sense of eternal values. The worldly spirit functions through the carnal mind, and we are assured that the "carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither can it be." The carnal mind makes up its judgments mainly upon a basis of time and place, and dollars and cents, forgetting that godliness is profitable both for this world and the next.

He who hath overcome the world has been raised to a higher level of spiritual conceptions than the worldly spirit knows anything about. For him the horizon has lifted and his sordid, earthly shains have been broken.

—Rev. E. V. Cole.

Closing Prayer.—That we may be filled with the Christ-Spirit, and learn of Him who overcame the world, and who has shown us how to live, not for time but for eternity.

THURSDAY.

THE PRICE OF HIGH PLACE.

"Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."
Lesson: Matt. 25: 20-23.

During the darkest days of the War between the States, it is said, a certain banker wrote to Abraham Lincoln saying that if soldiers were needed, he would be glad to serve in the capacity of a general. Lincoln's reply was an eminently fitting one: "We have plenty of generals, but if you can serve in the ranks, come ahead, for you are sorely needed."

A willingness first to serve in the ranks and where the need is greatest, is one of the tests that these must pass who would lead and command others. How shall we know the fitness of any man for a high place of responsibility and power, unless he first demonstrate his worth in some more lowly service?

Jesus, being in the form of God, did not hesitate to make Himself of no reputation and take upon Him the form of a servant, that He might prove Himself worthy of all honor and acceptation. We as His followers may be very ambitious, and we may desire high place and power; but are we willing to pay the price He paid, and to walk the way He has pointed out?

—Rev. Gerhart E. Lenski.

Closing Prayer by Dr. Shelton (to be read by some member of the family).—With thankful hearts we raise our song of praise for all the blessings that money cannot buy; for friends, for immortality, for forgiveness of sin, for companionship with the divine, for the love of little children, for the sweet inspiration of the spiritual forces. Amen.

FRIDAY.

PRESSING ON!

"One thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before."
Lesson: Philippians 3: 13-16.

One can dwell with doctrines until he knows nothing else, and they enslave him. Doctrines are necessary, but they must retreat into the background to our growing personal acquaintance with Jesus. Knowledge and likeness to Him is the ultimate object. If one travels back and forth over the same teachings and definitions, they become husks of emptiness. Doctrines appeal to the intellect, but "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness."

One can dwell with his victories and his joys until the memories absorb him, and he is at a standstill. And how apt he is to think that the past implies present perfection, and to have a reeling of pride. Living in the past is not going forward! To become wiser and better, one must grasp new truths, and have new victories.

If one broods over his past errors and imperfections, his steps will slacken, and he will sit down and mourn. He is unheeding of the race and of the declining day. Mourning will not atone for injuries to others nor repay their damages. It drains one's enthusiasm, chills his hopes, brings defeat.

Does one repent? The fruit of repentance will be a changed life. Overflowing mercy and grace will bring joy and a vision of triumph. "The fruit of the Spirit is joy, peace." So to your feet, mourning one! Run, forgetting the past, eager for the future! —J. H. Mills.

Closing Prayer (by one of the household).—That God in His goodness may so guide us in our spiritual struggle that we may trust all the past to His mercy and forgiveness in Christ Jesus, and keep "eyes front," and our entire attention rivited on the race before us.

SATURDAY.

THE UNIVERSALITY OF OUR BIBLE.

"The word of our God shall stand for ever."
Lesson: Isaiah 40: 3-8.

Once more the pendulum of the world swings back to the Book. Somehow, this fall and winter there seems to be a longing in the air for the Word of Truth. In hundreds of circles, church groups are again bringing their candles to light them at the Light of lights. Publishers announce record sales of books that handle the imperishable theme of the Bible's message.

We are thrilled when we learn that the Scriptures are now being read in almost every land on the globe. To the ends of the earth, missionaries and colporteurs are now carrying Bibles, translated into 775 different languages and dialects. Imagine the patience, fortitude, perseverance and monumental labor which have gone into these precious translations. It represents a labor of love which will do much to make the whole world Christian.

Without steady Bible study, it is hard to see how any Christian can maintain, fresh and pure, the deep springs of the spirit. It is the Bread of

Dear Christmas Candles:

I'm calling you a Christmas name today, for Thanksgiving has passed, and Mr. Turkey Gobbler is all stewed up with cranberry sauce and mince pies and loads of fun—Thanksgiving's the time for fun!

But who would like to see a thousand candles on your Kiddie Tree? Oh, think of it dears—another Christmas is coming soon. And, dears, I know some precious little folks up in the Hills that need gifts sent to them to remind them that it's Christmas time, and that our Lord was a wee baby once—and that He belongs to them the same as to us. Who do you suppose could help them remember this year? Story-hour babies are going to send a great box full—upto the brim. Why not ask your Sunday School teacher to help you send them a nice box of good things too. I would. It will make you as happy as can be. In the upper left hand corner put who it is from, and in plain letters mark across the middle of the box: REV. M. T. SORRELL, FANCY GAP, VA. That's all!

Next week, I expect you would love to hear about Santa's New Home, up in the cold North—Yes? Wouldn't you, now?

Your loving editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

DEPENDING ON JOE.

Early last spring while I was staying at a delightful old farm house, my curiosity was aroused by continual talk of "Joe." Since I had little to amuse me, I decided to listen carefully and then guess what he was like; later I could see how my guess agreed with the character and looks of the real Joe.

The family consisted of Mr. Jenkins and his wife and three grandchildren—Bob, aged twelve; Violet, ten, and Mary, six. The day I reached the farm, each member of the family planned something for Joe to do when he came.

"Oh, look, grandma!" cried little Mary. "Elsie's arms and legs are all fell off! What'll I do?" Then before Mrs. Jenking could reply, "Oh, I know! Joe'll mend her for me!"

Why, of course," said grandma. "And I know he'll put leg bands on my pretty new white wyandottes. I don't want them to get mixed with the other chickens."

"Yes," said Mr. Jenkins, "and I think he'll enjoy setting out those plants for me, and Bob will enjoy it too, if Joe leads the way!"

" 'Course I would!" spoke up Bob, as we took our places at the dinner table. "It's fun to work along with Joe!"

"Well," said Violet, "I hope he won't be too busy to remember his promise to me! He said next time he came he was going to bring me some pretty colored raffia and show me how to make baskets with wire grass and pine straw."

"Now all I want him to do," said Bob, "is to help me fix my fishing tackle and go fishing with me."

"I hope he will," said Mrs. Jenkins. "I never feel worried if two of you are fishing; besides Joe is such a level headed fellow!"

The more I heard, the more I speculated on Joe. Nearly every day someone spoke of him.

"That closet door sags badly; I must get Joe to fix it!" said Mrs. Jenkins.

And again it was Violet who said, "If you could buy a good, strong rope, grandpa, we could get Joe to fix a nice swing under the big oak."

By the time the day for Joe's arrival came I had decided that he must be going to stay at least a month and that he was a clever, muscular young man, with a genius for work! I felt almost as excited as the children. They all went to the station in the automobile with Mr. Jenkins. Mrs. Jenkins stayed at home to cook the best supper she could.

At the first sound of the horn as they came round the bend in the road, I went outside and watched as the car drove into the yard and they all began to jump out. The big fellow must have sat with the two little girls on the back seat, I thought. I rubbed my eyes and looked again. There was no big fellow! Instead, into the house came tearing the jolliest-looking boy I ever saw! He was just Bob's size and had red hair and laughing grey eyes.

As I shook hands with him, I noticed that his expression was wonderfully sweet! His look seemed to say, "Now you and I are buddies, and I'm always ready to help you!"

When I heard that his visit would last only two weeks, I wondered how in the world he could do all that was expected of him. But when supper was over he began to mend the doll, and an hour later little Mary went to bed with Elsie Elizabeth "just as good as ever," in her arms.

And so it went on until Joe's visit was over. He had helped each of the family, and all the time he seemed to be having the jolliest sort of holiday. He even found many little ways of doing me kindness, so at last I said to myself, "That boy has found out the secret of happiness: 'Whatscever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.' FAMILY ALTAR.

Life to the hungry, and Living Water for the weary man or woman, struggling along life's dusty highway. This Bible of ours is a Gospel which holds the very power of God unto salvation. It is the message for every soul, in every land, in all the coming ages. It is the impregnable Rock from whose heart will ever flow those fountains of spiritual helpfulness that minister to the deeper needs of the human soul!

—Rev. Vincent G. Burns.

Closing Prayer (by one of the parents).—That the opportunity to spread the Gospel to the remotest parts of the world may have the heartiest support of all believers, and that we may be cheerful sharers in the enterprise.

SUNDAY.

THE BENEFICENT MINISTRY OF SORROW.

"For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me."

Lesson: Psalm 32: 1-6.

When Naomi returned from Moab to the fatherland, an old acquaintance peered into her grief-furrowed face and asked, "Is this not Naomi?" There is a terrible bitterness in her reply: "Call me not Naomi, but Mara; for the Almighty hath dealt bitterly with me." She had emptied her cup of bitterness without tasting the sweet nectar of God. This was the greatest tragedy of her tragic life.

This singer in Israel had learned that the heavy hand of God may be weighty with benediction. We have in the Psalm a burst of rapture from a heart that has tasted the sweets of forgiveness. We have the chart of the mountain path from the depths to the summit. It was the heavy hand of the Guide that had led him to glowing heights. The heavy hand in this instance seems to have been physical suffering, the sense and shame of sin, and the thirst of a droughty soul.

There is a picture illustrating Dante's immortal words, "Upon a day came sorrow unto me." The poet is reading in his chamber. Outside his door a funeral procession, with lighted tapers, is bearing the sacred clay of his beloved Beatrice. "Florence sat solitary, the poet was broken hearted. But sorrow is pictured as a timid angel holding in her hand a bunch of rue and holding out her right hand to the poet. The poet draws her to his heart. He has felt the throb of divine love in the heavy hand. He understood the beneficent ministry of consecrated sorrow.

—Rev. Alfred J. Reynolds.

Closing Prayer.—That we may ever remember that our heavenly Father is ready to forgive, "even to the uttermost," him who confesses his sin and sincerely asks forgiveness.

OBITUARIES.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—CRAVEN.

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in His Almighty wisdom has removed from our midst, Deacon Wm. A. Craven, and

Whereas, in his removal our church and community have suffered a loss which will be felt for many years to come, his wife a devoted husband, and his children a kind father.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well;

Second, that we express our gratitude to God for the gift of such a consecrated life to our church;

Third, that with deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, we commend them to the Lord, who will comfort their wounded hearts and when their final summons may come they may meet each other around God's white throne.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of Shiloh Christian Church, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MATTHEWS.

On the eighteenth day of November, 1925 Coley Matthews, son of J. D. Matthews, fell on sleep at the age of thirty-four years. Coley was a member of Pleasant Union Christian Church and was said to be, by those who knew him best, one of the best men in the community. He had lived for thirteen years with Brother "Billy" Green, who misses him almost as much as if he were one of the family.

Brother Matthews suffered much before the end came. He leaves a wife and three children to miss him, also father and mother, and friends. The interment was in the new cemetery at the church. May God bless and keep the bereaved.

COPELAND.

On Wednesday night, October 21, 1925, the Death Angel most unexpectedly visited the home of Bro. J. S. Copeland and took his beloved wife, Mrs. Effie V. Copeland to her reward. She was a faithful wife, a loving mother, and a true Christian, being a faithful attendant at all of the services of the church. She leaves to mourn their loss, her husband and nine children.

The writer, her pastor, conducted the funeral services at Mt. Carmel Church, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, and her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

We pray for those that were near and dear to her that God may comfort and strengthen them, bless them and make them a blessing. May they honor the life of the departed one and bring glory to God. I commend to God all who weep, knowing that He is a safe refuge in every time of need.

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Tut's Coffin Opened.—

The exploring of the tomb of King Tut has excited much interest, and has brought to light many interesting facts. The inner coffin has at last been opened. It, as well as the outer coffins, contained vast treasures of gold and jewels. The body of the king was that of an eighteen year old boy. A crown of gold rested on his head, and gold stalls and jewels adorned each finger and toe.

What Would Happen?—

The death sentence has been imposed on twelve Russian officials for misappropriation of State property. Should we follow Russia's example in this and put to death those practicing corruption in high places, what would happen? We would not advocate Russian severity, but it would be beneficial if we could handle severely instead of honoring those engaged in using for selfish ends the property of the several States and the Nation.

A Small Potato Crop.—

The white potato crop is smaller this year than it has been in many years, and prices are consequently soaring to unprecedented heights. In Chicago, Wisconsin potatoes are worth $4.50 per hundred pounds, and Idaho potatoes are a dollar higher. For the past several years the growers have produced large crops, but exceedingly low prices have caused loss of money. This year they cut their acreage very materially, but even so, with present prices they will reap large profits from their investment.

Persia Becomes a Republic.—

The Persian people, through their assembly, have thrown off the rule of monarchy. The Shah has been deposed by a vote of eighty to five in the assembly, and a republican form of government set up. The deposed Shah came to the throne of Persia at the age of sixteen. He has been much more interested in leading a gay life than in ruling his people. Most of his time has been spent in riotous living at Paris. It is said that the deposed Shah has in his possession jewels worth more than four million dollars.

Baptize in Whiskey Vat.—

The county of Robertson in Tennessee has been mightily moved these latter days by a revival. It was conducted by the Rev. C. M. Crooswy of Senatobia, Miss. When the time of ingathering came, the Bethel Baptist Church had no baptistry equal to the occasion. The resourceful Mr. Crosswy commandeered a whiskey vat in a deserted distillery. This former liquor making instrument did valiant service in aiding in the reception of members. Of all the multitude of uses to which the liquor making tools have been put, so far as we know, this one forges to the front, and has no rival for the place.

Macartney Goes to Princeton.—

Clarence E. Macartney, who has taken the lead in the fundamentalists rank of the Presbyterian Church, has been elected to the Princeton Theological Seminary. He is to be in the chair of Apologetics and Christian Ethics vacated by Prof. William Brenton Green on account of age. His nomination was made last spring while Dr. Macartney was still moderator of the General Assembly, and it made such a commotion that no action was taken at that time. Princeton is known as an extremely conservative institution, and Dr. Macartney will support the tradition.

Radio Saves Missionary.—

Early in November, Bishop Edwin F. Robins of the Angelican Diocese of Athabasea came into Edmundton, Alta., with word that a Miss Masters was seriously ill at Wabasca. Because of the condition of the roads it was impossible to reach her. The physicians formulated a treatment, broadcasted it, and the little colony of which Miss Masters was a part picked it up. Word has now been received that the missionary is much improved. The radio, it is thought, will lessen greatly the perils of those isolated on the foreign fields.

Report on Faith Healing.—

Some time ago the Canadian General Ministerial Association appointed a committee of professional men to investigate the results of faith healing. They turned in their report recently, which reads as follows: "Of 278 supposedly cured persons examined, only five seemed to be improved. No improvement could be found in the condition of 212, although at the time of anointing they had declared that they were cured. 22 were distinctly worse than they had been before going to a 'faith healer,' and 39 had died."

If this report of the Vancouver professional men appointed by the Ministerial Association means anything, it speaks in no uncertain terms against the "faith healers" amongst us.

Chapman Fights for Life.—

Gerald Chapman, the notorious desparado, who was condemned to die for the murder of a policeman in New Britain, Conn., has refused the acceptance of a pardon from President Coolidge relieving him from the necessity of serving the twenty-five year sentence imposed previously for the robbing of the United States mails. He was refused a new trial by the Connecticut Supreme Court, and now he is going to test the question of whether or not a pardon from the President must be accepted. If it is not necessary to accept the pardon, Chapman's execution by the State of Connecticut is in the distant future. If he must accept it, then he will be immediately executed. To follow this test case will be a most interesting legal study in technicalities.

How Fords Increase.—

The Ford Motor Company literally turns out cars while you wait, and you do not grow tired of waiting. Recently the company turned out 8,165 cars in one twenty-four hour day. The officials expressed a hope that 8,500 cars might be the daily production by December 1st. During November the company expected to turn out two hundred thousand machines, which would be the largest monthly output in the company's history. These figures will give some idea of the enormous increase in Ford cars in this country. When we consider that these are the output of only one company, and that many other motor companies are turning out large numbers of cars, it would seem that we should soon be literally a "nation on wheels," as we have been already rather aptly called.

Some Pension Facts.—

During the past 135 years, 1790 to 1925, the United States has paid out a sum amounting to more than seven billion dollars in pensions to its war veterans. Of this amount more than six and one-half billions have been paid to Union veterans of the Civil war. The veterans of other wars have received grand totals as follows: Revolutionary war, seventy million; War of 1812, forty-six million; Indian Wars, twenty-six million; Mexican War, fifty-six million; Spanish-American War, 127 million; retired members of the regular army and navy, sixty-eight million; World War, 170 million; unclassified, sixteen million. These figures include paid to widows of veterans, of course. It is interesting to know that the government is still paying pensions to ten widows of veterans of the War of 1812. The last veteran of that war died in 1905. Wives of veterans are frequently much younger than their husbands, and so it happened that the last widow of a veteran of the Revolutionary War died in 1906, while the last veteran of that war died in 1869. About fifteen veterans of the Mexican War are still alive and drawing their pensions, while 1,200 widows of veterans of that war are still on the pension rolls. During the last fiscal year, which ended June 30, 1925, the government paid out a total of over 217 million dollars in pensions. These figures reveal how costly wars continue to be, long after their battles are history, and the glory of them is remembered no longer. Fifty years hence, we will still be paying for the World War. The government ought to pay in pensions those who served it in crises, and the figures quoted show that as a government it has done its duty well by those who did serve in the wars.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Conference Minutes for the "Annual" wanted.

Round up the year and be ready to keep Christmas.

The last conference for the year 1925 is now over, and all the conferences attest a successful year's work. Begin now to make the next year even more successful.

Several of our minister have letters in this week's issue. Read them, they are worth while. Who will be the next to let us know what is being done in their territory?

Rev. A. W. Andes, Secretary of our Virginia Valley Central Conference, reports that the meeting of the Executive Committee, on November 28th, March was designated as Missions Month throughout the Valley Conference.

Mrs. C. C. Ryan, wife of the pastor of the First Church, Richmond, who was called to Toledo, Ohio, several weeks ago to the bedside of their daughter who had presented them with a fine grandson, has returned to Richmond. Dr. Ryan radiates happiness everywhere he goes since her coming home.

A good brother—or sister—who does not give his name, writes the Mission Secretary, in answer to the request in last week's SUN: "I know a church without a pastor. It is Oak Grove, near Sunbury, N. C. A pastor can get four churches in this section. Send us a preacher, for his message is needed and we will be glad." We thank the unknown correspondent. Names of available pastors have gone forward and here is hoping a suitable pastor will be secured and located from the names sent.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, on November 28, 1925, the following were chosen as delegates to the Southern Christian Convention: Rev. W. T. Walters, president; Rev. A. W. Andes, secretary; Rev. R. P. Crumpler, Rev. D. B. Seal, R. A. Larrick, J. C. Bradford, W. C. Wampler, J. E. Foster, Roy Hosaflook, Miss Verdie Showalter, Samuel Earman, Mrs. A. W. Andes, E. A. Hillyard, R. A. Rothgeb. Alternates: E. W. Cather, Walter N. Oates, R. A. Burke, J. E. W. Bryant, C. W. Louderback, R. C. Myers, Floyd Showalter, J. Warner Stearn.

Oakland Church, near Chuckatuck, Va., recently rebuilt and greatly enlarged, was dedicated on Sunday, November 29th. Dr. I. W. Johnson is the esteemed and much beloved pastor who has wrought laboriously and sacrificed with his people in the building of this church. Dr. J. U. Newman of Elon College, N. C., preached the Dedicatory Sermon, and Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., read the Dedicatory Formula and preached in the afternoon. Dr. Newman is our authority for saying that Dr. Staley preached one of the greatest sermons of his life, and if anyone thinks that Dr. Staley is through thinking and too advanced in years to preach a great sermon, he should revise his scheme of thinking, for according to Dr. Newman, Staley is seemingly in the prime of life, and not only is now capable of doing, but is really doing the best work of his life. A great concourse of people enjoyed the day of dedication, filling to its capacity the large church and gathering on the lawn thereof for a magnificent dinner, served in Eastern Virginia's most royal hospitality. It was a great day for the pastor and his people, and we congratulate both Brother Johnson and his faithful co-workers in their splendid achievement. Dr. J. U. Newman, Elon College; Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, and Rev. C. E. Newman, Virgilina, are all sons of this church.

REVIVAL MEETING.

I had a very busy summer. In fact, beginning with the first Sunday in July, until the middle of September, I was engaged in evangelistic work the whole time except during the Chautauqua. In that time I had three meetings in my own churches. In fact the first week of July the meeting at Berea was going on. It was carried on for several weeks by the members of the Burlington Federation, the church and the community. There was very little preaching, the meeting being conducted on the Federation plan. The church seemed to be greatly revived. It was due to the fact that it became interested in striving to bring others to Christ. As a result, I received fifteen members into the church before I left. There were cards signed by several others to come in, that had not been received formally. The other churches got several members as a result of the meeting.

The next meeting was at Monticello, the week following the second Sunday in August. We had two services each day until the third Sunday, at which time the meeting closed. The pastor did the preaching, but did not by any means conduct the meeting. The members gave as loyal support as I have ever seen. They went out into the homes and in personal work strived to win souls, and by the help of God we had a great meeting. I feel that I should especially mention the help of the young people just here, of our church and the other churches in the community. Their support in every way was of the best. There were eleven members added to the church. They are all promising workers in the Kingdom. The most of them are members of a Christian Endeavor Society and have had training in the same.

The third and last of my meetings was at Pleasant Hill. Again the pastor did the preaching in the afternoon and a few times at night. Again the help came from the church and the community. The South Alamance Federation was in charge of the evening services and carried them on another week after the pastor left. I have been informed that a large number of conversions took place during the extra week. There are many more to be received into the church later. Before I left, nineteen additions had already been made. I believe that the Federation will continue to do a great work along the line of continuing the work. The Federation is headed by members of Pleasant Hill Church. Dr. Foust is president, and Brother David Lashley is in charge of the music. The church members were very enthusiastic over the work and helped to do it.

I was greatly blessed in my revival work during the past summer, and also in the work with the churches for the whole year. May the Lord bless and keep every member.

PRAYER A FACTOR IN THE CURE OF TUBERCULOSIS.

There is doubtless in the minds of many who have not stopped to think, a feeling that diseases are ordained of God as punishment for sin. Others eliminate control of disease, arguing that if we but do our part in avoiding exposure, our bodies will not be subject to the ravages of infectious agents. There is an element of truth in both of these ideas, yet they are not the whole truth, for we know that thousands of people who live in open sin escape disease, while many saints on earth suffer its ravages.

As Christians, we believe the Bible as the word of God infallible. Hence we believe that "the effectual, fervent prayers of righteous men will avail much." And we can claim the promise of "two or three who agree" for the cure of an awful malady.

But there are two elements necessary to an effectual, fervent prayer. The first is that of unselfishness. The second is that of faith. In the former regard, it is admitted that only an ingrate would ask God for a gift—even of healing—if it were not that he or she might live a life of definite service for Him who gave the gift. In the latter respect, those who have exercised their faith will testify that faith begets faith. After we have seen an answer to a prayer of faith, it is easier to exercise greater faith. And just as truly as "faith without works is dead," so we who believe our prayers will be answered will do everything in our power to see that they are answered. Combining these, the Christian will realize that if his prayers are not answered as he desires, it is because his will is contrary to God's will. So prayer must exert a healing influence in the life of him who prays and at the same time make him realize the mercy and forbearance of God, who ever "loves and cares for His own."

Therefore the Tuberculosis Prayer League was organized here last March by the patients of this sanatorium. We observe 11 A. M. each day for united prayer that God will give a permanent cure for this dreaded disease, "Tuberculosis." And we want all the world to join us in this prayer. We are asking the churches and Sunday Schools to form chapters, which is done by offering a prayer once daily for God to give us this cure for which men have searched for years. Then each church or Sunday School reports the number of members to The Tuberculosis Prayer League, Catawba Sanatorium, Virginia.

This is our opportunity to help the world, so let us pray.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

This body met in annual session with Liberty Church, Vance County, November 24th to 26th. Liberty is one of our great, strong rural churches and a church always reflects its life and power through the proceedings of conference. The people of Liberty were most happy in the privilege of entertaining the conference and of giving a royal welcome through its retiring pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks, which welcome was manifested not only in the hospitality of the homes but in the entire spirit of the conference sessions. In the absence of Rev. J. C. Cummings, who was appointed for the work, Rev. J. D. Wicker, the venerable and beloved of the conference, conducted the devotional services the first morning and called upon many in the congregation to take a part through testimony and prayer. It was a sweet and solemn service.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson, the president of the past year and session, very appropriately responded to the address of welcome and declared the conference ready for business. After the enrollment, which showed a goodly response from churches, the election of officers made Rev. H. C. Caviness, president; Rev. J. Lee Johnson, vice-president; Dr. W. C. Wicker, recording secretary; Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, assistant secretary; Brother W. J. Ballentine, treasurer. Brother Caviness, who had been appointed to the service, requested the indulgence of conference, and the annual sermon which he was to deliver was appointed at the eleven o'clock hour the second day. The Executive Committee made a report, and also the treasurer, of the work of the past year. In lieu of the annual sermon at this hour, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, delivered an exceedingly powerful and timely address on Stewardship. The conference was thrilled with this great utterance and its members desire to have it in print. It will doubtless appear in THE CHRISTIAN SUN at an early date.

A bountiful dinner was spread for the great audience that had gathered. Brother J. A. Denton, of Catawba Springs, led the song service, and Rev. R. L. Williamson conducted the devotionals, opening the afternoon session of the first day. Rev. B. J. Howard, chairman, submitted the report of the Committee on Social Service, which report evoked lively and interesting discussion. The feeling was expressed that not only individuals in Society must be reached with the gospel but that the corporate activity of Society must be prompted and directed by the spirit of Christianity if our civilization is to endure. It was a brief and practical report, but it was to the point and worth while. Rev. R. L. Williamson submitted the report on Religious Literature and urged, with feeling and interest, loyal support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, The Christian Missionary, and the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and all of our own Sunday School literature. Brother Williamson feels that the best way to build up a better literature, if such is desired, is to be loyal to our own and that our own is best for us. Interesting talks were made on THE CHRISTIAN SUN and our other Christian publications, and it was found that practically all of the delegates to conference, as well as all the ministers, were already subscribers to THE SUN and were using our own literature.

The Ministerial Reports were read and showed that the ministers of this conference had been faithful to their work through the year, loyal to their conference, and had been permitted to add many members to the various church rolls. Some ministerial reports revealed over-churched pastors, or at any rate, over-worked pastors, as some had seven or eight different churches to look after, to preach to and to care for. After the Entertainment committee had assigned homes for the large delegation present, conference adjourned.

There was an evening session, and a large congregation gathered for the same. Dr. W. C. Wicker, chairman of the Committee on Education, had charge of this part of the program and Dr. W. A. Harper, President of Elon College, was presented as the speaker of the evening. Dr. Harper delivered a very powerful address on the vital topic, "When is Education Christian?" In this address Dr. Harper sought to apply the test that differentiates the Christian from the non-Christian type of education; and brought to the fore the fact that the real test in education is the production and building of Christian character. The great audience was delighted with the address. And the feeling was prevalent that our own Elon College is seeking through its President and Faculty not only to hold up Jesus Christ as the world's greatest teacher, but to build Christian character in all the youth who come and have instruction there.

Rev. J. C. Cummings opened the morning service with devotionals, reading the 13th chapter of First Corinthians and commenting to the effect that the salient fact in history is the Cross of Jesus Christ, for out of it have come those streams of love and saving power which are to redeem men and restore the Kingdom of Israel.

Rev. J. E. Franks, chairman, submitted the report on Home Missions. His report showed that a church had been organized at Cary, N. C., and that the newly organized church was ready to go forward and desired a pastor to lead them the coming year. An appropriation was made to Cary; also an appropriation was made to enable Antioch and Bethlehem, in Warren County, to secure a pastor for the coming year. It was reported that the Clayton church needed further equipment and desired to negotiate a loan for this purpose; and this was granted. The report advocated the idea of Mission Month as requested by the Executive Committee of the Convention, and recommended that March be designated as Mission Month for all the churches of the conference.

Brother K. B. Johnson made the report of the Committee on Superannuation, and Brother J. D. Gunter that of the Committee on Apportionments. Brother C. H. Stephenson, of the Board of Religious Education, made the report on Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor, showing considerable growth and activity in these departments of church work the past year, stating also that Miss Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C., was Field Secretary and that she was accomplishing much in her work for Christian Endeavors and Sunday Schools.

At the eleven o'clock hour Rev. H. C. Caviness, who had been chosen by the Program Committee, delivered the annual sermon, taking for his theme and text, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Brother Caviness is a man of eloquence and power in the pulpit and delivered a sermon that delighted his great audience and one which will not be forgotten. He made a passionate plea for truth, declaring that the errors of the day, particularly in our theological thinking and attitude, were appalling; that evolution as a theory was one of the curses of the present that clouded the minds of many in the quest for truth. Brother Caviness holds, and rightly, that Jesus Himself is the Truth and that those who live in Him and learn constantly of Him, walk in a light that keeps them from stumbling and falling; Christ and the Cross are the solution of the problem of our time, and it is Christ alone Who is able to lift men and women, young and old, to the high and solid plains of living and activity. A large audience was present, the school having adjourned and come in a body for the service and the people were delighted with the message of the hour.

The afternoon of the second day was given to a consideration of the report on Education. Three men were licensed by order of conference: D. M. Spense, M. R. Moss, J. A. Denton. These are promising young men and Brother Caviness, the president, was very impressive in his reading of the ceremony and conducting the service that gave these brethren license to preach as probationers of the Christian Church.

The committee recommended Elon College as worthy not only of our patronage as parents, but of our hearty and liberal financial support; that the College is doing a great work and is seeking to build Christian character and send out men and women worthy of all the sacrifice and service the church renders in their behalf. Miss Pattie Coghill, following the report of the committee on Sunday Schools, made an exceedingly practical talk on the necessity of securing the interest of our young people. She was assisted in her discussion by Miss Ruth Johnson, who also made a plea for a deeper interest in Christian Endeavor, and told of the work of the Christian Endeavor Movement in the conference the past year.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell made the report of the Committee on Evangelism and emphasized the need of evangelistic services and evangelistic efforts throughout the year. The report also recommended Rev. H. C. Caviness as Conference Evangelist and also commended him to all churches that may desire a most faithful worker in the Evangelistical field.

The address of Dr. W. W. Staley, which was due to have come at this hour, was postponed to the following and final day of the conference. Dr. Staley was present to the delight of the conference and of course was heard with great pleasure and profit.

At the evening hour of the second day, Rev. J. Fuller Johnson made the report of the Committee on Foreign Missions, in which it was shown that there have been assigned to us Christians a million souls in Japan, and 70,000 souls in Porto Rico, whom we are to reach for Christ or they will not be reached. Brother Johnson in an impassioned appeal stirred his audience with the thought of the larger task which the church must undertake if it is to come into its own, showing that we can only hope to grow as we become missionary in giving and in activity. His report also urged that all the churches have Mission Month the coming year and that March be designated as Mission Month.

THE SUN'S Editor also spoke on this report and urged that on one Sunday in the month, at Sunday School some one elected for the purpose make a talk on Missions; on the next Sunday someone make a talk before the whole school on our Christian publications; on the next Sunday about the Christian Orphanage; and on the final Sunday of the month, someone discuss before the whole school our program of Christian Education, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and College work. If some such program could be adopted in all of our Sunday Schools, it would not be long until we would have grown a generation of those who are fully acquainted with the work we are trying to do and the principles and polity of our dear Christian Church,

THE SUN'S Editor was not permitted to be present at the final session and so missed the closing service of a great conference. Brother Chas. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage, was on for the last day but, it having been announced that he could not be present then, place was given him on the program of the second day, and in his usual impressive manner he presented the claims of the Christian Orphanage and urged that a liberal Thanksgiving offering be made.

It was a great conference. Brother Caviness, though new with the gavel amongst us, presided with grace, dignity and in a most impartial manner to all parties and interests concerned. He showed himself a president exceedingly anxious that every enterprise and cause coming before the body should have due consideration.

The conference voted most hearty appreciation of the hospitality of the Liberty people, and the hope was expressed that it would not be many years until the conference should be entertained again by the same church people.

DOES MISERY LOVE COMPANY?

The Presbyterian of the South says that the true Christian does not like to see his brother in trouble, but thinks that the old saying still approaches some feeling of comfort. No one likes to see another in trouble, of course, but the fact that others are in trouble brings a certain sense of companionship and a feeling of friendliness. The paper quoted then proceeds to declare that the Home Missions Board of the Northern Presbyterian Church reported last year a deficit of $440,000, and the deficit of the past year to November 1st, is an additional $598,000, which makes a total deficit of $1,038,000, for this one agency of that church. The Presbyterian is not seeking comfort when it declares that the other Boards of other churches are in about the same predicament, but is calling for someone "who will discover the cause of this trouble and suggest a practical remedy," saying that such a one will certainly confer a great blessing upon the various churches. The Presbyterian closes its dissertation with this assertion: "There have been times when the explanation of such a state of affairs was due to the poverty of God's people; but the plea of poverty cannot be used today in this country."

So far as THE SUN'S Editor has observed, the Mission Boards of all the denominations are in about the same trouble, except that each realizes more than the other the necessity of some effort on the part of the church to prevent curtailment of work already begun and the shirking of obligations already made.

This writer is of the opinion that under favorable financial conditions during and immediately following the World War, special efforts in Kingdom work were put forth to meet, in a measure, the sinful catastrophe of war, and the destructive forces then operative to the pulling down of the strongholds of righteousness. Plans and purposes and obligations made in Mission work cannot be changed, nor vitally altered, in a day, and so a program of missionary endeavor put on in one period may require and usually does require years to execute it.

Take our own situation. Men and Millions Movement, with kindred attempts at securing money for Kingdom service, gave promise of large funds for missionary work at home and abroad. This Movement has resulted in much; but the returns have not been sufficient to meet the obligations incurred in the promise of such returns. When a Mission Board makes an obligation, it can no more withdraw from it than can an individual from a bank note, to which his name has been attached. So our Mission Month, and the present attempt to raise a fund of $25,000.00 for Missions is simply an endeavor to meet obligations that are binding and to carry to completion work which was undertaken under favorable conditions. If the churches of the Convention in Missions Month shall contribute as much as an average of $1.00 per member, the entire $25,000.00 will be more than donated. This will be easy if all will do their part. Such a movement will certainly not hurt any individual. It is not a question of whether we can or not, it is simply a question of giving every man, woman and child in our churches the opportunity of making a contribution, and sufficient information about the need to prompt the giving for such a need.

If pastors, Sunday School superintendents, Christian Endeavor presidents, Sunday School teachers and loyal members of every church will see to it that all are given an opportunity to do their duty in Mission Month, the Board of the Southern Christian Convention will be in position to push forward with heart and hope in the great task assigned to it. Misery may love company, but it loves more to get out of such company.

THE INTER-RELATION BETWEEN FAITH AND WORKS.—II.

Any person who is truly desirous of becoming better—really bent upon developing with his life a character paterned after that of Jesus Christ, will not be left without the divine aid necessary, if he will but draw upon it. It makes no difference what habit one has fallen a victim of—it makes no difference how irritable and repulsive a disposition one may have—it makes no difference how far from Christ one may be when he starts, if he will but keep his eyes upon the Cross, and with fear and trembling work to overcome the habit in question or the sin which has so easily beset him; if he will but daily strive to supplant his irritableness with winsomeness, his repulsiveness with attractiveness, in God's help he can do it. He cannot do it by himself, nor can God do it for him. But the two working together can. You have known people who from a distance may seem beautiful in character, but when you get nearer to them they are as cold as an ice-berg.

When we were returning home from England, one night the boat passed near two large ice-bergs. The watchman who day and night kept feeling for ice-bergs by taking the temperature of the water, said that when we came so close to the ice-bergs, the temperature of the water went down close to thirty degrees. The passengers in their cabins did not know until the next morning that we had passed so near ice-bergs, but at the time they knew that for some cause or other the temperature had fallen greatly, and most of them began immediately to search for extra coverings.

There are some people that are spiritual ice-bergs. They lower the temperature of a church by their very presence because of their critical mood, and fault-finding attitude. They send a chill over every one when they come into your home—they even chill the air when you meet them on the street, either by their frown or an artificial smile. These people who are often so cold and indifferent as actually to be impolite, can overcome their coldness by working and striving to see the good in their neighbors instead of the bad—by commending the virtues of others instead of deploring the faults—by giving sunshine instead of casting shadows—by letting their lives play a pæon of love instead of the dirge of complaint. It is possible for one to work out his salvation from such a disposition of coldness and indifference. God can help one some, but one has the bulk of the task on his own hands. I believe that God dislikes such dispositions so much that if He could change them by Himself, that He would do it without a moment's delay. He certainly likes the pleasant, joyful, sunshiny disposition so much that He will do His part in helping a person with the opposite type to choose and attain the better part. Grouchiness is a sin. Whatever one may have in one's character that is disagreeable, he can by God's help remedy it, if he will but strive earnestly and work out his salvation.

"Holy strivings nerve and strengthen,
Long endurance wins the crown."

Jesus Christ sought to save men from sinning, he never claimed to save a man from work. He called men to the hardest work there is—to follow him. His invitation is not to a holiday picnic—but to work in his vineyard. The Christian is called to a hard work and long hours, and because the pay seems small there are many who leave their task and go their way. But the work to which Jesus calls us, even though it be hard, it is made joyful by the constant presence of his gracious spirit. We are not left alone in the work. He is with us every hour.

"All unseen the Master walketh
By the toiling servant's side;
Comfortable words he speaketh,
While his hands uphold and guide."

"Grief nor pain, nor any sorrow
Rends thy heart, to him unknown."

A MIRACULOUS BOOK.

God's Word is a miraculous Book, and those who wark with it secure miraculous results. A wealthy ship owner in Glasgow became so enthusiastic over the idea of giving God's word to people to make them strong in the Lord and to win them to Christ, that he gave 65,000 Testaments to a worker to give to soldiers in Scotland who would enlist in the "Pocket Testament League." A stock-brocker helped distribute the Testaments. The stock-broker became so on fire with love for the Word and for souls that he gave up his business, and now goes about to the neediest places in Great Britain, doing personal work, and holding evangelistic meetings, and giving away Testaments. He recently purchased 10,000 Testaments just to have some "on hand" so he would not run short!—Selected.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Sunday, November 29, 1925, was a great day at Oakland Christian Church, in Nansemond County, on the Highway between Suffolk and Smithfield, Virginia. It was the occasion of the dedication of the remodeled church; and it was the third dedicatory service in the course of its life.

It was organized by Dr. W. B. Wellons in 1869, and the dedicatory services were conducted by Dr. Wellons. It was remodeled the first time in 1893, under the pastoral labors of Rev. Harrison Butler. Mat W. Crumpler played the organ at the dedicatory service in 1893, and he played the organ at this dedicatory service, thirty-two years apart, and he plays regularly at Oakland. The church was remodeled this time under the pastoral care of Rev. Dr. I. W. Johnson, who has served Oakland for twenty-seven years. The following ministers have served Oakland as pastor: W. B. Wellons, E. W. Beale, J. U. Newman, J. T. Kitchen, Z. A. Poste, M. L. Williams, H. H. Butler, W. J. Laine, and I. W. Johnson.

Dr. J. U. Newman is the only surviving ex-pastor, and he was chosen to deliver the Dedicatory Sermon. His theme was "The Greater Church for the Greater Day," based on Haggai 2: 9—"The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of hosts." The sermon was historical and expository, with fine local application. It was a great sermon to a great congregation. That church has sent out three brothers who are widely known as Christian Ministers: J. U. Newman, N. G. Newman, and C. E. Newman. C. E. Newman was absent, which was very much regretted by the pastor and his congregation.

Christian ministers present were: J. U. Newman, N. G. Newman, J. M. Roberts, H. E. Rountree, W. B. Fuller, I. W. Johnson; E. K. Emurian, Presbyterian; G. W. Sawyer, Baptist; all but one took part in the service, and he was invited.

A great choir with help from Portsmouth and Suffolk filled the temple with praise. After the sermon, Rev. W. W. Staley, who dedicated the church thirty-two years ago, read the Dedicatory Service, while the great congregation stood reverently and at the close responded with, "Amen and Amen." The offering was over $700.00.

A great dinner was served in the yard to a thousand appreciative people, and then they returned to the church for an afternoon service and a sermon by this scribe. It was a great day that demonstrated the growth of a great people.

The new building, for so it is, has a main auditorium with movable partitions between it and the old church; Sunday School class rooms, furnace heat, electric lights, modern pews, fine stained glass windows, piano and organ, with practically every convenience and artistic beauty of a city church. The cost of this great improvement is between fifteen and twenty thousand dollars. It is hard to tell whether pastor I. W. Johnson or his loyal congregation is the prouder and more thankful for their achievement. It is safe to say that when the people of God give and do something worthy, they enjoy it. Isaiah said of Jesus: "He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied."—53: 11. What was true of Jesus is true of His followers. The only unhappy church members are the members who do nothing; and those who have the least happiness are the members who do the least. The old Oakland church in her new beauty is proud of the Newmans, and the Newmans are just as proud of the new Oakland. The same is true of pastor Johnson and the congregation.

ELON LETTER.

I write this on December 1st, just one month before the day when Uncle Wellons will be one hundred years of age. He was born on January 1, 1826, and on the first day of the New Year he will have accordingly rounded out a full century of honorable and profitable living. It is a benediction to have known and loved this grand patriarch of the faith.

My first recollections of Uncle Wellons was when I was a boy less than ten years of age. He was soliciting for Elon College, then in the process of building, and he had come to see my grandfather for a donation. I had heard something about his coming that day at dinner and it had been decided to give him fifty dollars, but his plea was so earnest that the donation was raised to five times that amount. I have always remembered that day with keen interest and join it in association with that other day when Dr. J. O. Atkinson convinced my grandfather that it would be good for me to complete my high school education in the preparatory department of Elon College and then enter the University of Virginia. Dr. Atkinson was a wise man. He knew if the boy ever got started in at Elon, he would likely continue through to the end. So I was introduced to Elon by two great, good men.

Uncle Wellons has loved Elon devotedly, has sacrificed for it, has prayed for it times without number. His counsel has always been wise and his judgment of prophetic quality. As a member of the Board of Trustees, he has remained active in the conduct of the College since 1888. Well do I recall his visits as a trustee during my college days and his ardent prayers for the college and for the students. He in those days addressed God in his prayers as "Kind Parent," and because the idea was novel, we students knew this good man among ourselves as "Kind Parent." He has grown richer in his prayer life, as he has ripened in years, and we can understand why he thought of God as a kind parent. He was thinking of His great loving heart, the very central idea in our conception of the gospel today.

On January 1st, at 10:30 A. M., Uncle Wellons is to celebrate his 100th anniversary. Of course it is to be in the college auditorium, in the great building dedicated to the worship of God and the memory of Leonard Hume Whitley. The Honorable Josephus Daniels is to speak a word of greeting for the public generally. Dr. Staley is to speak for the ministry, and Uncle Wellons is to preach. He says it will be his last sermon, but here is hoping otherwise. Moses lived to be 120 years of age and God may graciously spare Uncle Wellons to that great age. So long as he lives, his consecrated life will be a sermon to all who know him, whether he undertakes to preach or not.

The college invites all of Uncle Wellons' friends to come for the celebration. A simple luncheon will be served all who will partake, following the service, and we hope that a host will honor us and themselves and our venerable brother and Christian saint on January 1, 1926.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

At a meeting of the Executive Board of Bethlehem College, which was held at the College, December 1, 1925, Rev. H. W. Elder submitted plans for the new Administration Building, which were approved by the Board, with instructions to proceed at once with the work of raising funds and collecting of the material necessary for the erection of the much needed building, that our educational work may continue to make progress.

The Board feels that we must build Bethlehem College and establish it on a better financial basis. While we need buildings, we also need money to pay our teachers and to carry on the work of the school. We hope that folks who can, will send us a Christmas donation. We need at least $2,000 by January 1, 1926, to meet our deficit on the running expenses of the school over what we take in from the students. We will hold our $100,000 in bonds as an asset to the college, but they are non-producing unless the people of the Southern Convention will take a certain portion and pay the interest on them, which is $6.00 on the hundred per year. If we should be able to raise the interest on the entire amount it would give us enough money to operate the school this year with what we take in from the student body. Something must be done. We are passing through a financial crisis, which is much more appalling since the price of cotton has fallen so low. We must have assistance from individuals and churches throughout the entire Convention of our Southern Church.

Some would ask, Why build colleges anyhow, when they have to struggle so long before they get thoroughly established so our folks will feel that they are worthy of their support? What are colleges for? Are they just places for young people to spend two to four years making friends, acquiring social graces, and deriving various intangible benefits from what they call "the associations of college life"? Are the colleges impressing upon the country a false notion of themselves; is this the reason for their inadequate support from the church and the general public? If this is the reason for the general attitude of the public which leads to non-support of our educational institutions in a worth-while way, let us in the name of reason and education seek to impress upon the minds of this generation that colleges stand for a complete education that fits a man to perform justly and magnanimously all the offices, both private and public, which are to be filled—that education is the preparation of the individual for an understanding and willing co-operation in the world's affairs. The best the college can give a man is: self-knowledge, accuracy of mind and habits of strong intellectual exertion, coupled with the building of a strong Christian character. The college should seek to develop in the student the faculty of concentration and independent thinking.

The main reason for teaching is to open the student's mind to the possibility of questioning the fundamentals of current thinking. I want to turn out men who cannot be lead naively by current judgments, but who will subject their judgments to the tests based on the validity of their underlying assumptions. In short, socially sophisticated thinking men. At best, the active-minded young man should ask of his teacher only the mastery of his tools. The young man himself, the subject of education, is a certain form of energy; the object to be gained is the economy of his force; the training is partly the clearing away of obstacles, partly the direct application of effort. Once acquired, the tools and models may be thrown away.

What can be done to more deeply interest our own people financially in our own educational institutions? Is the laying up of money of more value than the education of our youth, which requires the financial support of our colleges? The conscious glorification of money is to give it away!

IN SOUTH GEORGIA.

Dear Brother Editor:

If you could have taken a glimpse of the public highway that leads from Roanoke, Alabama, to Ambrose, Georgia, on the morning of Wednesday, November 11th, you would have seen a Ford car, with Rev. J. D. Dollar at the wheel, steering his way to South Georgia, with a preacher and his family as passengers. We travelled all day Wednesday and until about one o'clock Thursday morning.

We parked the Ford at the home of Brother Oswell Vickers. Here we found a hearty welcome. They are loyal members of the Christian Church here.

About seven o'clock Thursday morning a Ford truck came puffing in with our household effects.

We spent the greater part of the day getting things straightened out, and night found us with our own beds ready to rest on.

Friday came, bringing with it blessings and surprises for us. About nine o'clock, a rap was heard on the front door. My wife answered the call, and, Lo! and behold! there stood a great crowd of school children holding in their hands packages and bags of every description. They were led by Mrs. Siler, wife of the principal of Ambrose school. She acted as spokesman and said that the choldren had brought us something to warm our pantry shelves. And believe me, they filled them to overflowing.

At four o'clock she came bringing another company of school children, but larger than the first ones. They, too, brought groceries and supplies.

Brother T. J. Holland, one of the deacons here, and Brother H. B. Vickers, have supplied us with meats, flour, sugar, coffee, lard, canned vegetables and fruits, and other things too numerous to mention.

The people of the town have shown us their appreciation in different ways. Never have I met with a people so big hearted. They possess a wonderful spirit. They are ever ready and willing to lend a helping hand, speak a kind word, or do anything that will bring comfort or cheer to those in destitute circumstances. Just a few days ago, they put their heads, hearts and pocketbooks together, and buried a poor deceased widow, thus relieving the financial burden of a widowed daughter and child.

We are very grateful indeed for the many kindnesses shown us by these good people since we came here. If you have ever been here, you know something, I guess, of how they treat a fellow. If you have not, turn your canoe down stream and come to South Georgia. We will give of our best for your comfort.

I am very favorably impressed with our work here. When I get better acquainted, I will write again.

Always remember the work in your prayers. Pray that I may be used to the best advantage in every way. May the Lord give you strength from day to day.

Yours in Him,

S. D. LANKFORD.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

On the night of November 20th, at about 7:30 o'clock, our attention was directed to a stream of automobile lights moving down the street toward the parsonage. In just a few minutes our yard was filled with cars, with seemingly all of them blowing horns. This was a signal for us to come out, I suppose, which we did.

It did not take us long to discover the secret: between sixty and seventy of our good Bethlehem members and friends had come to the pastor's house to bring him and his wife an old-fashioned pounding. When these good people had filed in and loaded our table and laid the things round about, it was a sight which brought us delight such as children often feel at Christmas time. We lived over again the childhood thrill which we used to have when Santa Claus came to see us.

We shall not soon get over this, for among the many other good things to eat, we have enough sugar to keep us sweet for a long time to come.

The pastor tried to make a speech, but words failed him to express the deep feelings of his heart, which his wife was sharing with him, too.

I remember saying something like this: We have travelled over the country quite a bit during our ministerial life and have met many good people and have had a lot of friends, but none who have received us more cordially than the good people in this field. And I am still of the opinion that it is better to have friends than money. We have had many friends, but little money, and we are still happy.

After prayer by the pastor we had a song. The committee who led this movement, Mrs. R. D. Hunter, Mrs. H. W. Williams, and Miss Annie Ashley, served refreshments.

Then followed an address by Bro. W. B. Byrd, speaking for the number present and for the church, after which he led us in another prayer.

Then all joined in singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds." Thus ended a very happy hour and these good friends filed out bidding us adieu and wishing us many happy returns, for this was on the eve of our 26th marriage anniversary. We want in this way to express our sincere appreciation for this token of their interest and friendly feeling.

RECENT MEETING AT LINVILLE, VA.

On Sunday evening, November 1st, we began a series of meetings in the Christian Church at Linville. Rev. Van T. Crawford, the new pastor of our Winchester Church, came to our assistance on Monday and did the preaching from then on. Brother Crawford is a very able preacher, and preaches the un-adulterated Gospel of the Christ of the Bible. He is one of the most deeply consecrated men we have seen in this section in many a day. He soon greatly endeared himself to all the people of our community, regardless of church affiliations. Mrs Crawford also came along; and rendered assistance in the meeting for two weeks; but Brother Crawford became seriously ill from Sinus trouble and had to go home on Tuesday of the second week. So we had to bring the meeting to a close on Tuesday night, when the "revival" had just got fully started. However, as it was, there were three conversions and as many accessions to the church; and the religious life of the community seems to have been much revived.

We hope for Brother Crawford a speedy recovery from his severe illness; and, also, hope to have him assist us in other revivals in the near future.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENNISON, Secretary.

A DOZEN REASONS WHY.

Why Should I Tithe? Dr. L. E. Lovejoy is at the head of the Stewardship department of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is the author of that great book, "Stewardship for All of Life." It has been adopted by the United Stewardship Council and recommended to all denominations. It is used in many of our churches. It is used in our Sunday Schools. In that book he sets forth a dozen reasons why he personally must accept the practice of tithing in his own life. He speaks with authority. The message is to us. Will you enlist as a tither now? Look at these reasons prayerfully:

1.—It has been deliberately recommended as the standard of Christian giving in the church of which I am a member. I cannot believe that this would have been done without adequate and convincing reasons.

2.—It is a mode in constant use in Scripture history, is honored from the beginning to the end of the Old Testament, receives the unqualified, even if incidental, commendation of Christ, and brings upon itself no word or intimation of disapproval.

3.—It has been commended and urged by the prophetic voices of the church through the Christian centuries.

4.—It seems to be rapidly gaining favor with devout, enlightened and educated disciples.

5.—It is systematic, business like, and modern in its application, and has been repeatedly proved productive of material benefit through wiser methods of personal and domestic economy and a better ordering of finance.

6. It is on the whole more equitable in the distributions of the burdens of Kingdom support than any plan I have ever known, presenting far fewer inequalities than any conceivable plan of haphazard, voluntary, or apportioned giving.

7.—It is not more burdensome than I can well endure, in this age and land of opportunity and plenty, if I give due regard to a reasonable balance in my personal expenditures.

8.—It is urgently needed, to meet the present and prospective demands of Kingdom promotion and support, as nothing less than this proportion from each disciple will suffice for the providential program of the present age.

9.—It is apparently adequate, if offered in like proportion by all of Christ's followers, to meet every demand for Kingdom enterprise as at present expressed or contemplated.

10.—It is a practice which yields me constant satisfaction, contentment, and spiritual joy, and relieves me of the embarrassments, discomforts, and inconveniences of occasional or spasmodic giving.

11.—It is a method which seems everywhere to have brought new courage, moral prosperity, and spiritual life to such individuals and churches as have adopted it, and to give promise of a more perfect unity, wider fraternity, and more intelligent piety among Christians of every denomination.

12.—It is altogether the best method of church finance which I have been able to discover, and is therefore accepted, without question, as God's present plan for me.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

One of the things that the Christian denomination ought to be doing is laying definite plans for church extension. We have been largely a rural people, with churches planted out in the open country, or in a small settlement. The automobile has practically annihilated rural communities, or made it as easy for the rural folks to go to some center, as it is to go to some church that stands out alone. This does not mean that there are not a great number of country churches that still have a great mission to perform, and they could not be closed without much harm to the Kingdom. But there are a great many churches out at the cross roads, or a few miles out of a thriving and growing town, which inevitably will be impossible to maintain. We have a lot of these kinds of fields. Then we have groups of country churches that ought to get together and build a house that will be adequate for the educational and social needs of the community as well as for worship. The opportunities to plant new churches in the country are few, but in our cities there are great sections which have been newly built where there is a great need for churches. This is a period when denominational life is waning. As the peace propositions and the justifiable war against war somewhat puzzle the governments in their military programs, so the growing feeling of co-operation and union among the churches rather dampens the ardor of many for church extension. It is a pretty difficult proposition to establish a sectarian church in any community, but the Christian church with its principles of the union of all Christians, can unite any community in the service of Christ. Because of its willingness to leave the non-essentials to the judgment of the individual, it has a peculiar appeal to people from all denominations. And it seems to some of us that we ought to make much of our opportunities today, not only for denominational growth, but also for the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour.

We have but few conferences but what could establish a new church every year. Our people are willing and want to do this thing. I think there is hardly an appeal outside of the distinctly spiritual appeals, that so arouses the interests of our people as that of extending our work through church extension.

But it takes more than a wanting to do a thing and a willingness to do a thing, to do it. It has to be wisely planned, and then started in some way. Often we have gone as far as appointing a committee, and then the committee turns out to be a standing committee. When the report is asked for next year, they modestly report that they have had one meeting but have done nothing so far. They undoubtedly met with old Mr. Discourager, who lives down the line in the house that his great-grandfather built, or they may have gotten to the place where the next step was going to take money, and none came rolling down the hill to them. It takes a great deal of courage to start a new church today, and a whole lot of "sticktoitiveness"!

Perhaps the first thing to do is to find the man who has the courage and the perseverance to tackle the job, and put him in the field. He ought to have a chance to make some surveys and study the community before the lot is selected and bought. In some cases where there is no doubt as to the best location this is not necessary. Then the next step is to get out plans and build the first temporary building. We say no one is wise enough at the start to know what the dimensions or the character of this permanent building should be. While this building is in process of construction the plans for the organization of the Sunday School and the selection of superintendents and teachers can be made, and if a place is available, it can begin holding meetings. The actual organization of the church could well be held on the Sunday of the dedication of the new building. Now the work has been actually started and with the help and encouragement of all the pastors and churches of the conference ought to make good headway, and in a few years become a great asset to the other churches of the conference and the work of Jesus Christ.

Now are we not making some great mistakes as conferences in not getting down to some simple plan like this and carrying on our work of church extension? We would find that one new church in some promising field would put new life and energy in every church of the conference. We can talk it and talk it and talk it, but until we actually get down and do it, we shall accomplish nothing. If we are waiting for men and money to do this, we shall keep on waiting, and keep on doing nothing but dying. When we begin to do the actual work and look up to our Father who has the men and the money, and not down to the discouraging elements that lie at our feet, we shall find that there are windows in heaven, and that they have been opened and are pouring down upon us all that we need. These windows do not open upon the untilled soil, nor waste their valuable substance where there has been no effort that has been worth while. There is no greater sin that the leaders of our conferences and of our denomination can commit than this worldly spirit which some seem to have in limiting Almighty God. God's promises and blessings are always toward the active and not the passive, to the positive and not the negative. That God who answered Muller with his orphanages, and Moody with his schools, and many men and women who have called upon Him all along the way, is the same God today, and He will not fail us when we undertake great things in His name and for His sake.

REPORT OF DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

DR. W. P. MINTON, Foreign Secretary.

TO THE GENERAL BOARD OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH, OCTOBER 22, 1925.

For the coming year the Foreign Mission Department hopes to do the following things:

The McKnights are to complete their year of furlough study, spend part of next summer in deputation work and return to Japan in September for their second term.

Miss Stacy and Miss Crew are to co-operate with the Japanese workers in the northern field, taking over as much of Mr. McKnight's work as possible and giving special attention to the work among women and girls.

The new plant at Naka Shibuya is to be completed this year and we plan to add about $750 in equipment for the kindergarten in this building.

We plan to provide a long needed parsonage for our national pastor at our strongest church, in Azabu, Tokyo, the cost to be about $2,500.

The eight theological students will be continued in training and at least one of them is expected to graduate next spring and enter the active service.

The four kindergarten training students are to continue their training, two of them now assisting in one of our nurseries, and two of them expecting to graduate this coming spring.

Dr. Woodworth will continue his regular work of teaching in the theological school and government schools along with his evangelical work. Dr. Fry will continue his oversight of the middle field, and the work of treasurer of the mission, and Mr. Garman will direct the kindergarten work, the building operations in Tokyo and represent us on the various inter-denominational organizations.

We are still hoping that the health of Mrs. Llewellyn Fletcher will improve so as to enable them to go to Japan when the McKnights return next fall.

Miss Kirkpatrick, who is taking post graduate work in Northwestern University this year, will be ready for service a year hence, and we are planning to send her to Japan, if possible as our representative on the faculty of the Japan Union Christian College for Women, or if not, then as a regular missionary who will give her time to teaching as the major part of her missionary work.

Miss Williams has practically given up hope of ever returning to Porto Rico for missionary service. (This report was submitted before Miss Williams' death.) She has given her life in sacrifice to this cause and the Board expects to give her every care in the best possible manner from now on.

We plan to put at least $800 into the building of one or possibly two small chapels in important outposts, in Porto Rico, where there seems to be unusual opportunity for service. If possible, we shall add another worker to our present force.

We are investing more heavily this year than formerly in the development of the Union Seminary in Porto Rico, believing that in the strengthening of this leadership training institution we are building permanently for the future church. We hope to have another student in the seminary this coming year.

We have appointed a committee to make a careful investigation of a proposed plan for a closer federation of the different missions in Porto Rico, in what is to be popularly known as "The United Evangelical Church of Porto Rico." We favor the principle of union involved, and if the plan is found to be feasible, we propose to recommend to the General Convention a year hence that the Christian Church enter this closer federation.

We are hoping to be able to extend our territory in Porto Rico on the east by entering the large city of Guayama, where at present only one mission is working, and where we have been invited to come in and give our assistance. This plan will be worked out as soon as suitable arrangements can be made for a representative to undertake the task.

We hope to continue the development of the national church in both fields by substantial gains in membership and by bringing them to larger self-support during the year.

We shall follow our established practice of stressing missionary education throughout the church. We are happy in the fine co-operation existing with the Board of Christian Education in this work. In addition to this co-operative work we shall continue to push the Church School of Missions and regular missionary programs throughout the year and at the time of the Foreign Mission period.

Since we are planning our twenty-fifth year of service in Porto Rico, we plan to make this event the basis of our literature, to be used in the forthcomnig Foreign Mission period. This is especially appropriate as it will enable us to work in conjunction with the plans for Foreign Mission study of Latin America, which is the interdenominational course for the coming year.

The following budget was adopted:

Japan, regular work	$ 27,000.00
Japan, special work	9,250.00
		$ 36,250.00
Porto Rico, regular work	$ 10,242.00
Porto Rico, special work	3,654.00
		13,896.00
Miscellaneous work		10,000.00
Deficit		9,543.17
Total		$ 69,689.17

This total is far below the actual requests for this year's work, which amounted to a minimum of $92,235.17. It seems a tragedy to have to cut so much from the actual needs, but there seems no other way to do until the church more fully awakens. We would call the attention of the General Board to the fact that the Foreign Mission work is a definite attempt to project the whole work of our church as it is carried on in this country, into the foreign fields. That means that in Japan and Porto Rico, we have a definite evangelistic work corresponding to that department here, we have a home mission work in both fields, we have a definite program of Christian Education, including colleges and seminaries, we have a growing publication enterprise, all of which need the most faithful support, if we are really to win our share of souls in the countries in which we work.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson XII.—December 20, 1925.

Subject: "Paul's Summary of His Life."

Golden Text: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith." —II. Timothy 4: 7.

Lesson: II. Timothy 3: 10-11; 4: 6-18.

Devotional Reading: Rev. 21: 1-7.

Reference Material: Romans 8: 31-39; 12: 1-2; I. Cor. 15: 1-7

"It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." And God will judge us for the deeds done in the flesh "according to that man whom he hath ordained, Jesus Christ, the righteous." It might be a good thing if we would keep that fact in mind. Inasmuch as we must all come at last to death, it might be well to think about what kind of summary we could make of our lives. Today's lesson is Paul's summary of his life. Happy is the man who can come down to the close of life with such a pleasant retrospect and such a happy prospect. Only a life lived in the fear of God and spent in the service of men can have such a happy end and such a hopeful future.

Paul is writing to Timothy, his beloved son in the ministry. Paul had taken him as a young man and had trained and used him in his ministry. There had grown up between the two men a warm and inspiring friendship, and in this letter written only a short time before Paul's death, he opens his heart to his young friend and speaks only as a friend can speak to a friend. He reminds Timothy of his teaching, conduct, purpose, faith, long-suffering, love, patience, persecutions, sufferings, and of all the things he had experienced in his Christian ministry. And yet Paul would not capitalize these things. The only reason he has for mentioning them was to bear witness that out of them all the Lord had delivered him. Paul had had confirmed in his life the gracious promises of God. His faith had helped him in all his experiences, and his experiences had deepened his faith.

And now the time for Paul's departure—he spoke of it as a departure—was at hand. The aged apostle was convinced that at last the end of his earthly life was at hand. In the figure of speech which he uses, he represents himself as being poured out as a drink offering to God. In a large measure his whole life had been poured out as a sacrifice to Jesus Christ. The time of his departure was at hand. And he bears testimony to the way in which he had rendered a stewardship of that life.

"I have fought a good fight." Life for Paul was a war-fare. Christianity was a militant thing, and he who would be a good soldier of Jesus Christ must not only put on the whole armour of God, but he must endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. It is a great thing to be able to say in all sincerety that one has fought a good fight. To have refused to compromise with the forces of evil, to have stuck bravely at the post of duty, to have endured hardness as a soldier of Christ—these are the things bring abiding joy in the sunset hour of life. After all, we are to be judged not so much as to whether we won, but as to how we fought. Let us fight the good fight.

"I have finished the course." Here the figure is that of athletes running a race. And here again there is that challenge to the sterner aspects of life. And here again it is not so much a question as to whether one finished first in the race, but as to whether he finished the course.

"I have kept the faith." Paul certainly did not here refer to a formal creed or set of dogmas. Faith for Paul was something far more vital than that. Faith for Paul was that act by which a man came into living fellowship with God through Christ. It was something that was growing, and he had kept it alive in his heart and had manifested it in his life. He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved.

As retrospection ended, prospection began. The Lord is a rewarder of all them that diligently seek him. Paul had never done his work with an eye to the reward, but now that his work was over, he felt sure of the reward. The Lord had for him a crown of righteousness, and not only for him, but for all those who would be faithful unto the end as Paul had been. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

There is a touch of loneliness in the letter. The old man, in prison had had friends with him through the years of his imprisonment, but now on the eve of his departure, only Luke was with him. He urges Timothy to come quickly and to bring Mark with him. The apostle had been firm in his dealings with Mark when Mark had deserted him on the first missionary journey, but he evidently had come to see Mark's good qualities, for he says he is profitable to him for his ministry. He also wants the books. Paul knew as many others have learned, that he who has a good book is never without a friend.

Once more Paul bears testimony to the goodness of the Lord, and to the way in which He had delivered him in the hour of need. Paul could say with the Psalmist, "I had fainted unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living."

Teaching Points.

1. The present is the time to prepare for the end of life.
2. Happy is the man who can appeal to his manner of life in his own defense.
3. The Christian life in its best aspects is an offering poured out for God.
4. God is a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him.
5. The joys of the Christian life is in itself a reward.
6. He who trusts God need not fear death.
7. God is a righteous judge and we will get a square deal at His hands.
8. In the hour of death, men prefer their tried and true friends.
9. He who has books is never without a friend.
10. Nothing but ourselves can separate us from the Love of God which was in Christ Jesus.
11. They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength.
12. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

December 20, 1925.

Topic: "Why is Christmas a Time of Joy?"—Matt. 1: 18-23; II. Cor. 9: 15.

Plans for the Meeting.

Final arrangements for the Christmas service should be made, if your Society has planned a program. If not, arrangements for the Society's gifts to others. Time for practicing Christmas songs for the service or for caroling should be given at the beginning or close of the meeting.

Program.

Hymn—"O Come, All Ye Faithful."

Story—"The Birth of Christ," (as related in Luke 2: 14,) by some member.

Song—"O Little Town of Bethlehem."

Prayer (all standing), by Leader.

Song—"The First Noel."

Open expressions of praise and joy by members of the Society.

Sentence Prayers.

Song—"Silent Night, Holy Night."

Leader's Talk.

The celebration of the birth of Christ should be a time of joy—not boistrous—but with smiles and feelings of friendliness for all. Christ was the greatest gift the world has ever known. This suggests to us that we should give gifts when they are needed and where they will bring happiness and joy.

The word pictures of the birth of Christ in the Bible are so beautiful that reading them must make us joyous. The message of the angels rings in our ears, "Peace on earth, good will ao men." We may be thankful and joyous that the world is not in arms and fighting at the present time. We may be thankful for what has been done to promote a lasting peace.

Topics for Short Talks.

"Santa Claus—a Symbol of Joy and Happiness."

"Joy and Happiness through Cards and Letters."

"Joy in the Home." (The Tree, Candles, Holly, and Home-Coming.)

"The Joy of Christmas." (A fifteen minute talk by your pastor.)

Some Bible Hints.

We rejoice because heaven is evidently interested in earth, seeking to help men to a higher life. (V. 20.)

Christmas has brought to us the joy of salvation. Without Christ we were overwhelmed in sin; with Him we are delivered. (V. 21.)

Christmas gives us confidence in the Bible. It is the fulfillment of prophecy and shows plan and purpose in history. (V. 22.)

We rejoice in God's gift of His Son because He reveals God and brings to us hope, courage, power, and a life of peace and love. (V. 15.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

Christmas corrects our tendency to grow away from the simplicity and sincerety of childhood. It puts the child in the midst and makes us forget ourselves in service.

Christmas gives us a King, a leader whom we may confidently obey, knowing that He will lead us onward and upward to increasing good.

Christmas brings to us the joy of giving, the joy of spreading happiness, which is the joy of heaven. It is God's constant occupation.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our children had a happy Thanksgiving and a good dinner. The good women of our Burlington Church made it possible for us to have a good dinner by sending us sixteen dressed chickens, cakes, cranberry sauce, preserves, and other things. The Durham Ice Cream Company, of Durham, N. C., sent us eight gallons of Ice Cream and the Chapin-Sacks Corporation, Burlington, N. C., sent us six gallons of "The Velvet kind" of Ice Cream to help make Thanksgiving dinner a perfect dinner and a joyful occasion.

Our little folks were happy indeed and enjoyed their dinner with Ice Cream to their hearts content.

Our Thanksgiving Offering is starting off nicely. All churches sending in one hundred dollars or more get on our "Banner List." Liberty (Vance) Church, N. C., Holland Church, Va., and the First Church, Richmond, Va., have been enrolled. What Church will be the next to enter on this list? We ought to have twenty-five churches on this list this year. Will your church, dear reader, be one?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Christmas brings the joy of confidence in God. As Jesus was taken care of when He was born, so does God take care of His people in their need all through life. Rejoice!

A Few Illustrations.

Christian Endeavor carol-singing at Christmas not only develops the Christmas spirit of joy in those that sing, but also in those that hear the songs. This is an echo of the angels' song.

Endeavorers' gifts to poor children at Christmas, their playing Santa Claus, their Christmas trees, and so forth, bring out the spirit of good will which is joy and peace.

One says that his happiest Christmas was spent in a Manchester slum, helping to feed the hungry. Why? Because that work is the result of love, and love grows as we serve. Love is joy.

The great joys of life—love, friendship, home, service—are not for the rich alone, but also for the poor. So is the joy of Christmas. It is for all, since love and peace may be enjoyed by all.

To Think About.

What makes a truly happy Christmas?
How may our society spread joy at Christmas?
How may we carry the Christmas spirit throughout the year?

"One of the joys of Christmas is the happiness of being remembered."—Anon.

"At Christmas, heaven's light—the glory of God—shines about us, revealing our need and God's provision, revealing heaven, inspiring hope."—Anon.

"If we would do God's will on earth as the angels do it in heaven, we must praise Him when He exalts others above ourselves, as the angels did when human nature was exalted above that of angels."—Wordsworth.

Alice Archer Sewall James puts these words in the lips of Mary:

"It is I who would climb to Thy breast,
Oh hold me there and let me rest!
It is I who am weak and weary and small,
And Thy arms can carry me;
So put them under me, God my All,
And let me quiet be."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF PRAYER.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33: 3.

MONDAY.

LOYALTY TO DUTY.

Lesson: Jude.

"I honor any man who in the conscious discharge of his duty dares to stand alone; the world with ignorant and intollerant judgment, may condemn; the countenances of relatives may be averted, and the hearts of friends grow cold; but the sense of duty done shall be sweeter than the applause of the world, the countenances of relatives, or the hearts of friends.

—Charles Sumner.

Prayer.—Our Father, send Thy light and Thy truth to us and let them lead us and bring us into Thy holy place and to Thy tabernacles; then will we go unto Thy altars with exceeding great joy. In Thee and Thy ways alone may we make our boast and give Thee thanks. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WORK IS OUR MISSION.

"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground."—Gen. 3: 19

"And he that gathereth by labor shall have increase."—Prov. 13: 11.

And his "sleep shall be sweet whether he eat little or much." (Eccl. 5: 12.) This is some of that "meat which perisheth not, but abideth unto eternal life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you." (Jno. 6: 27.) And this is that rest our Lord gives unto those working ones that come to him. (Matt. 11: 28.)

"Work is the mission of mankind on earth. A day is ever struggling forward. A day will ever arrive, in some approximate degree, when he who has no work to do, by whatever name he may be called, will not find it good to show himself in our quarter of the solar system, but may go and look out elsewhere if there be any idle plannet discoverable. Let all honest workers rejoice that such law, the first of Nature, has been recognized by them."

—George Bernard Shaw.

Prayer.—Our Father, keep us busy at things that yield fruit and blessing. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE POWER OF THE WILL.

Lesson: Psalm 23.

The first essential of a good will is that its objective be placed outside of self in something worthy to be achieved by the self. "Not as I will," said Christ, "but as thou wilt." "Not my will but thine be done."

And the second requisite of a good will is that it be set with determination before entering into action. It is rather fine to have a tense bracing of the will before a thing worth doing can be done. Arnold Bennett said that this is the chief thing that differentiates one from the cat by the fire, so great was the importance he attached to the setting of the will before action.

Prayer.—Our Father, set our heart's affections on Thee and Thy ways. Fortify our wills for the temptations and trials, and for the achieving of good and worthy things. Forgive us of all our sins and weaknesses and hold us true to Thee, now and forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LETTING YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5: 16.

"The manner in which one single ray of light, one single precious hint, will clarify and energize the whole mental life of him who receives it, is among the most wonderful and heavenly of intellectual phenomena."—Arnold Bennett.

Prayer.—Our Father, if we have divine responsibilities to carry the light of God and salvation to others, impress us with it more and more until Thy will shall be done in us as it is in heaven. Forgive us of our shortcomings and sins and save us today. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FRIENDSHIP.

"Love is the fulfilling of the law."—Romans 13: 10.

"A friend loveth at all times."—Prov. 17: 17.

"God is Love."—I. Jno. 4: 8.

"If ye have love one for another, ye are my disciples."—Jno. 13: 35.

Friendship is the highest degree of perfection in Society. Blessed are they who have the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but, above all, the power of going out of one's self, and out of one's way to help others, and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in others.

Prayer.—Our Father, we desire the full experience of being born again of the fulness of Thy spirit that Thou mayest call us Thy friends and that we may be friends for Thee to others. Forbid that we should be unfaithful, and may we always know Him who is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A SHEPHERD OF THE LORD.

LESSON: Psalm 23.

He lives—the soul of his delight—
A shepherd of his sheep
His flocks are thoughts. He keeps them white;
He guards them from the steep.
He feeds them on the fragrant heights,
And calls them in to sleep.
He roams the hills and all that's bright,
Descends the valleys safe and deep,
And in his tender heart at night
The angels of God may peep.
He lives—the soul of his delight—
A shepherd of his sheep.
He keeps his little thoughts in sight,
Though gay they run and leap,
He is so careful to be right;
He has his soul to keep.
He lives—our Christian, a delight—
He's the shepherd of his sheep.

—Adapted from
Alice Meynell's "The Shepherd."

Prayer.—Our Father, we know we have a soul to account for every minute. Often we are tempted to wrong—to dark places and byways. Give us the power to pass them all until our hearts throb blissfully in Thy bosom. Help us not to fail Thee, now and never. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LIVING RIGHT.

"Look therefore carefully, how ye walk, not as unwise, but as wise; redeeming the time because the days are evil."—Eph. 5: 15.

"We are spinning our own fates, good or evil, never to be undone. Every smallest stroke of virtue or vice leaves its never-so-little a scar. The drunken Rip Van Winkle, in Jefferson's play, excuses himself for each fresh dereliction by saying, 'I wont count this time!' Well, he may not count it, and a kind heaven may not count it; but it is being counted nevertheless. Down among his nerve cells and fibres the molecules are counting it, registering it and storing it up to be used against him when the next temptation comes. Nothing we ever do is literally wiped out.

"Of course this has its good side as well as its bad one. As we may become permanent drunkards by taking so many separate drinks, so we may become saints by so many separate acts of righteousness.

"Let no one have over anxiety about his future, whatever the line may be. To keep faithfully busy each hour of the working day warrants leaving the final result safely to itself. One fine morning he will wake up to find himself one of the competent ones of his generation in whatever pursuit he may have singled out. Such a pursuit results in the power of good judgment as a possession that will never pass away.

"Young people should know this truth in advance. The ignorance of it engenders more discouragement and faint-heartedness in young people embarking on life's career than all other causes put together."—William James.

Prayer.—Dear Father, suffer us not to yield to the temptations that come, but give unto us the strength to overcome them and to be strong in faith, character, Christian service; and competent and efficient in affairs. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

NO SPEED LIMIT FOR REFORMS.

The United States abolished the Slave Trade in 1807. In 1810, Madison is calling on the Nation to put down the illicit traffic. In 1817, Monroe is calling for the enforcement of the laws. In the thirties, the illicit traffic blazes into 200,000 slaves smuggled across annually. But in 1871, we find in our Congressional Record the last act against the Slave Traffic. It took more than five short years after the Prohibition Slave Law was enacted to enforce it. It took two generations.

Take again our Constitution, passed in 1787. It made us a nation—on paper. Then came the struggle to enforce the law. Washington died in 1799 in despair that the Constitution would ever become a working reality. John Marshall took up the fight against de-centralization and for federalism. He died in 1835 in despair that we should ever become a nation. But we came through despite the Doubting Thomases and the men who saw more money in local option than in nationalism. But it took more than five years to come through.

Would any great reform have come to pass had five years been the limit given in which to bring the unconvinced minority up to the new ideal and work out all the intracacies of enforcement?

Read a little history, think a little longer, probe a little deeper, and join the ranks of those who enlist, not for five years, but for the duration of the war.—Elizabeth Tilton, National Chairman, Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Santa Claus:

Will you PLEASE come to Story Hour this Wednesday, at four o'clock—that is, dear Santa, if you can get off and it won't be too much trouble; for we need you—indeed we do. We want to start our Christmas packing, and our Christmas thinking—oh, oh, oh, and we need you SO bad—all of us. Kiddies have been so good and so sweet—and they want to see you so bad—won't you please come, Santa?

Your Christmas helper,
KIDDIE KORNER EDITOR.

NOTE.—Kiddies, if you possibly can do so, urge Santa in every letter you write, to come to see you before Christmas and tell you about our little Mountain Kiddies that need some clothes. Ask Teacher to insist that Santa come to see you once, and I know he will tell you heaps of wonderful things—'specially does he want you to know about how our Orphans at Elon are getting along—and the Mountain Children, too.

So write him at once—I am expecting him at our Story Hour this Wednesday. Wish you could all be here with us.

Love from your Editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

A LETTER

My dear Miss Moffitt,

You've no idea how surprised and happy I was when I found out that I had got first prize in the "Pollyanna" game. Although I know I didn't deserve it, I was as happy as I ever have been. It was so good of you to send me that lovely box of paper. You are the first person I have ever written to on it. I think it is just beautiful.

And my dear little "Polly-John" got the second prize. He deserved it because he was so nice. I just wish all of the "Kiddies" could have got a delightful prize, but I guess they will get a prize some other time.

I had a fine Thanksgiving, and I hope you and all the "Kiddies" did too. Again thanking you for the nice present.

ALICE RUTH SCHOLZ.

Macon, N. C.

AND ANOTHER—AND SOME POEMS.

Dear Miss Moffitt,

How are you this fine morning? Fine I hope.

We are all glad to know that our "Pollyanna" and "Polly-John" won in the game and hope that they enjoyed their presents very much.

I am sending you two poems that my girl-friend and I made. If you wish, you may put them in the "Kiddie Korner."

Your friend,
LORENE RUSSELL.

FREEDOM.

America, the land of the free,
No other land can better be.
Free, free to the ones that fall,
Freedom! freedom is her call.

This is the land of good will,
And where we all want to live.
Freedom rings from all the trees
And sounds the trumphet in the breeze.

—Kathryn Allen.

FREEDOM.

No other land could be,
Like America with her free,
Made by those who fought so
Long years, long years ago.

Other countries and other lands,
Cannot quite understand
How this country could be
A land of the free.

—Lorene Russell.

THE PARTY DRESS THAT STAYED AT HOME.

"Oh, mother, isn't it a beauty?"

Lucile held up her new party dress that had just been finished and sent in. The light from the chandelier fell across the soft folds of dainty blue silk, and Lucile's eyes rested eagerly on it as she spoke.

"It is lovely, indeed, dear," said Mrs. Morton, admiring it as much as even Lucile could desire. "And when is the party to be?"

"On Thursday afternoon; and there are fourteen children invited, and we are to play games out on the lawn."

Lucile ran happily out of the room then to put away her blue dress until the day of the party arrived.

The day came at last, and with it Lucile's small friend, who lived five miles out of the city.

"Isn't it nice that you can go to the party, too?" exclaimed Lucille, as she ran down to the gate to meet her, and then they went in to get ready.

"I only have to fix my hair over," said Lucile's little friend. "You see, I didn't know about the party until too late to get a new dress."

Lucile looked at her simple white dress for a moment before she spoke.

"My mother says that white on little girls is always in taste," she said, "and I think you look very nice indeed."

Then Lucile turned away and stood looking at her own lovely new dress that was all ready for her to wear. Mrs. Morton saw a wistful look flash across her face for a moment, and then as quickly pass away, as she chose a white one that hung beside the lovely party dress and hurridly slip it on.

"Now you both look very sweet and party-like," Lucile's mother said as she kissed them both goodbye. "And the little girl who chose an old white dress instead of her lovely new one has made her mother very glad," she whispered into Lucile's ear. And then the two little girls ran happily away, while the new party dress stayed quietly at home.—Exchange.

HOW I PICKED NUTS.

When I was a child, we had as a neighbor a dear old man whom we all called "Uncle Lewis." We despoiled his strawberry bed, climbed his apple trees, and robbed his grape arbor, while he sat by and smiled.

One Saturday morning in October I slipped through our garden fence into Uncle Lewis's lot and over to a great hickory tree, which bore the finest nuts I have ever seen.

Suddenly some deamon of selfishness overcame me. I knew that we children would get the nuts as we always had done. But I wanted them all. I ran back for a basket and worked joyously as a lark for three or four hours, picking up nuts and carrying them to our attic.

After dinner, Uncle Lewis came slowly over to our house. Catching sight of me, he called, "Nuts are falling, girlie. Run and call the other children and we'll have a nutting party."

My heart stood still. I felt utterly crushed as I realized the enormity of my crime. I had not only taken the nuts, I had also stolen the pleasure of a lovely October afternoon from Uncle Lewis and my half-dozen playmates. I stammered my thanks, and as soon as Uncle Lewis had turned away, I rushed to my mother, sobbing as if my heart would break.

Quickly I poured out the whole miserable story, and as quickly she found the answer. We fairly made those nuts fly into the big clothes basket, slipped back through the fence and scattered them beneath the tree. Then I ran to do Uncle Lewis's bidding.

When the shadows grew long, we children kissed Uncle Lewis good-by. As I trotted home with the little basket of nuts which was rightfully my share, I was one of the happiest little girls alive.—Mrs. F. H. L.

You want to be true, and you are trying to be. Learn these two things: never be discouraged because good things get on slowly here, and never fail daily to do the good which lies next to your hand. Do not be in a hurry, but be diligent. Enter into the sublime patience of the Lord.—George MacDonald.

"Christ stands at the bar of the world today
As he stood in the days of old:
Let each man tax his soul and say—
Shall I again my Lord betray
For greed, or my goods, or my gold."

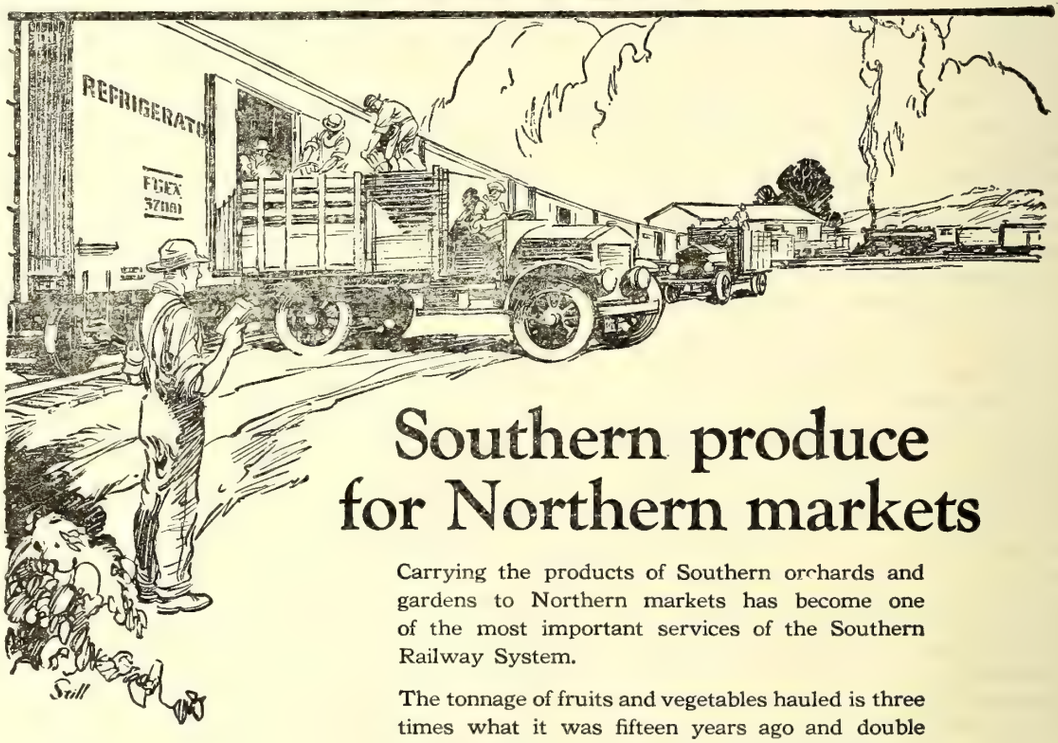
SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM



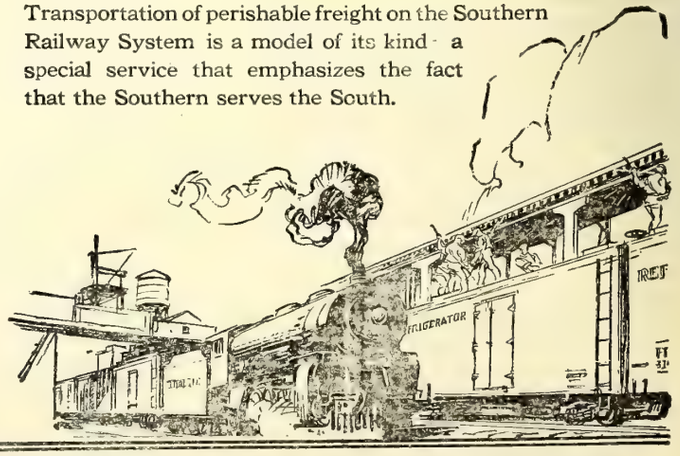
Southern produce for Northern markets

Carrying the products of Southern orchards and gardens to Northern markets has become one of the most important services of the Southern Railway System.

The tonnage of fruits and vegetables hauled is three times what it was fifteen years ago and double what it was ten years ago, and now equals the cotton tonnage.

Building up this great market for Southern produce, which increases the prosperity of the South, would not have been possible without dependable transportation, and this the Southern has provided.

Transportation of perishable freight on the Southern Railway System is a model of its kind - a special service that emphasizes the fact that the Southern serves the South.



Southern Railway System last year spent in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

YANCEY.

Sanford Yancey, the son of Benjamin Yancey of South Boston, Va., age 28 years, died at a hospital in Lakeworth, Florida on Thursday, November 5th.

Sanford's home for several years had been in Mecklenburg County, near Buffalo Junction, Va., but about one year ago he went to Florida with the Lassiter Construction Co. A few weeks before his death, blood poison developed from inflamation on a finger. He was taken to a local hospital and all done possible for him the two weeks prior to his death.

Besides his father, he leaves three brothers and one sister. At the request of the deceased made during his illness, his body was buried in Union Cemetery, near Virgilina, Va., by the side of his mother.

He was the grandson of the late Dr. Sanford of Virgilina, and of Horace Yancey, who was for years the leader in Hebron Christian Church.

The funeral and burial services were conducted by the writer on Sunday, November 8th. A large company of relatives and friends were present to express their sympathy to the family, especially to the aged father, who seemed crushed over the death of his youngest son. C. E. NEWMAN.

AN APPRECIATION.

Whereas, Deacon William Garland Farrar was associated with the Suffolk Christian Church, in all of its activities, for a quarter of a century; and,

Whereas, his faithful life in the community endeared him to all who knew him as citizen, business man, and Christian; and,

Whereas, his membership in our Board of Deacons created and maintained an abiding confidence and true fellowship, strengthened by our Communion-Day prayers; now, therefore,

Resolved:

1. That we hereby record our sense of loss by his death on the 17th of October, 1925, and our belief that he departed "to be with Christ; which is far better," and,

2. That we will not only cherish his memory, but endeavor to emulate his worthy example of fidelity as a Deacon; and,

3. That we hereby tender to his bereaved family our condolence in this crucial experience of their lives and, at the same time, the comfort of Him who "healeth the broken in heart and bindeth up their wounds," (Psa. 147: 3) believing that his grave will be to them the suggestion of heaven, and

4. That this expression of the Board's appreciation of Deacon Farrar, be offered to the Suffolk Christian Church for approval and to The Christian Sun for publication.

THE BOARD OF DEACONS,
Suffolk Christian Church.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Accused of $7,000,000 Fraud.—

Col. Thomas W. Miller, former Alien Property Custodian, two Germans, two Swiss, and three foreign corporations have been indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in Washington on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government out of more than $7,000,000. It is alleged that the foreigners succeeded in obtaining cash and Liberty Bonds held in the United States Treasury as part of the German property siezed at the start of the war by paying $441,000 to Colonel Miller and two other men prominent in politics.

No Fear for Students.—

Bishop William Lawrence, in a sermon before a great body of students in Boston, stated that the students of today did not suffer in comparison with those of other days. He declared that students had always been irresponsible, but that the student of today was beginning to feel responsibility. He entertains no fear for the students, but on the contrary seems to be quite sure that the trend is up and not down as some would have us believe. We are prepared to agree with the Bishop. There are many things in the lives of students which might well be improved, but they are manifesting a deep and vital interest in the greater issues of life, and are aware of their place in this swiftly flowing tide of life.

Peace in the Balkans.—

By restoring peace between Greece and Bulgaria after several days of actual fighting, the League of Nations has achieved probably the greatest triumph of its history and has demonstrated that it possesses real power to avert war. With the full acceptance by Greece and Bulgaria of the authority of the League and their pledge to accept any decision the Council may make with regard to the frontier fighting, the special session of the Council called to deal with the crisis has closed. Earlier both countries had withdrawn their forces within their own frontiers in obedience to a League order that they accomplish this within sixty hours. It is suggested that demilitarized zones shall be created between the Balkan States, to prevent such clashes in future.

Meditating Union.—

According to press reports, five conservative religious bodies are now meditating union. The bodies concerned are the Free Methodists, with headquarters in Chicago, Wesleyan Methodist connection with headquarters at Syracuse, N. Y., Pilgrim Holiness Movement of Owen Sound, Ontario, Canada, Brethren of Christ, a Mennonite body of Western Canada, Nazarene Church, organized in both countries. The United Church of Canada, made up of Methodists, Congregationalists and the larger part of the Presbyterians of that country was the first step toward actual union. Now it would seem that this step is to be followed by other bodies. It is an excellent thing for men to think in terms of united effort and tolerance.

New Zealand Wants Its D. D's.—

A law in New Zealand, which by the way is one of, if not the most progressive country in the world, so far as government is concerned, forbids the conferring of theological degrees of any kind by the schools. The Presbyterians are petitioning the Royal Commission on Universities to allow the conferring of such degrees. One editor, commenting on this fact, remarks that in view of the annual deluge of D. D's. in this country, there might be some Americans who would advise the New Zealanders to let well enough alone. Where genuine merit deserves a D. D., it is well perhaps, but many are given every year that are a discredit to the college conferring them and to the men who wear them. Then, too, we hear that they can be purchased with little cost.

How a Congregation Thinks.—

W. T. Hilton, a pastor of Pueblo, Col., asked his congregation to select his sermon topics. Fifty topics were distributed among the congregation and published in the public press. The following topics received the highest votes in the order named, the first three standing equal: "Is the Union of All Churches Desirable?" "When is a Man One Hundred Per Cent American?" "Shall the Bible be Taught in the Public Schools of Our Country on an Equality with the Greek and Roman Classics?" "Is the Volstead Law a Failure?" "Who is Responsible for the Crime of Today?" "Is a Man Saved or Lost on Account of His Morals?" "What and Where is Heaven?" "The Strength and Weakness of Protestantism." These topics are indicative of how a modern congregation is thinking. We wonder sometimes when we go to fill a pulpit what the folk in the pews would like to know about most. We feel the same way about talking to students. It would be a good thing if some of our preachers would try having his congregation select his sermon topics and give the results to The Sun. The trouble is that most of us don't care about preparing in advance, but it would fill our churches doubtless, and enlist the interest which seems so badly needed.

Buddhist Temple in America.—

America may now boast the largest Buddhist temple in the world outside of Japan. This great Buddhist temple was dedicated recently in Los Angeles, Calif., by Count Sonyu Otani, a brother-in-law of the Japanese Emperor and a leader of one of the largest and most progressive Buddhist sects. While in this country, the Count commented on the great contribution which America and Japan might make to world peace. He also stated, and this is interesting, that the great business on which he had come here was to persuade the men of Japanese now in this country to return to Japan for training in order that they might return as Buddhist missionaries to the United States. This will give, we think, a new light on missionary activities not known that we can thought of very much. It is true should make it more in our congress and reflect on our fitness or unfitness to reach a helping hand to other lands. Do we really need missionaries to come to us instead of sending them out? We believe that the Christ is the light of the world, but we have that light and should put it on, but are we may no more keeping it too faintly glimmering or hid in the complex life and we of it may, are ours have it, some, it is so hard for our mission board to raise among us five thousand dollars per month?

The Hope of Religion —

Two things which every one knows: What is the matter with the world, and What is the hope of the church? One of the latest declarations of this kind to get large publicity is that of Dr. H. D. A. Major, Editor of Modern Churchman, England. He stated his belief in a sermon delivered in St. George's Episcopal Church, New York City. Dr Major believes that the hope of religion now in Christian Education. He thinks that the greatest scholars and Christians have discarded the visible return of our Lord as the hope of final redemption, and that this hope has been supplanted by the hope of advancing to the world through Christian Education of the proper kind, the essential principles of Jesus until those principles come to dominate the forces of life for the betterment the State and the world. He would diligently advocate the Christian Education which he advocates from the old time Fundamental and Dogmatic meaning. There are many who will very vitally disagree with Dr. Major but it seems that there is something to be said for his position. Through Christian Education we are propagating the principles of Jesus as in no other way. And, whether we look to the visible return of our Lord or not, Christian Education will certainly help us the more to receive Him, and if not, it will make the world a better place in which to live. As for disagreement, that is the best way and the only way known to man to secure growth, because it makes us define our position, arms the reasons for the faith we hold, and in doing this debating we either see our errors and accept new truth, or we are more firmly grounded in the old faith. Religion, it is certain, is advancing more thought than of old, and we believe that there are greater possibilities to-day in a better tomorrow than our today is.

NOTES-PERSONALS

If your church is to have a function of any worth-while notice, it is better to write it up before hand than never to say anything about it afterwards.

Rev. R. A. Whitten and the Reidsville Christians are moving mightily to build a parsonage, which became a necessity. Brother Whitten writes a most interesting letter, presented in another column. Our Reidsville people are workers and deserve the best, and certainly should have the co-operation of their friends at this time.

The session of the Christian Missionary Association held at Oakland Church, December 8th, is said to have been great—the greatest yet held in every way. How glorious it is in this world to see institutions and movements in the Kingdom of our Lord grow from year to year—become wider and deeper in scope and in influence. "The kingdom of heaven is like leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of wheat, till the whole was leavened."

Rev. R. S. Stephens, pastor af the St. Luke's Christian Church, Dover, Del., announces quite a series of events in his church for Christmas week. On December 24th, Christmas Eve, he will officiate at a wedding in his church, the contracting parties being Frank J. Cooper, of Chester, Pa., and Miss Bessie E. Minner of Dover. On Christmas night, there will be the usual Christmas night entertainment and treat to the Sunday School children. On Sunday, December 27, there will be a mortgage burning, which will free the church of debt, the greater part of which has been raised through the indefatigible efforts of Rev. Stephens. In this latter event, Rev. Stephens expresses his thanks to every one who has contributed to the church, from a penny up to hundreds of dollars, in paying off the debt.

Some of the young people's classes in our Burlington Sunday School, under the kindly solicitation and help of Mrs. W. R. Sellars, teacher, are sending toys and gifts for the Christmas tree at our Rocky Ford Sunday School, Carroll County, Va. Mrs. W. D. Parry, of our Raleigh Sunday School, with the 'teen age girls' class and the Junior Sunday School, is sending the gifts for the Christmas tree at Elk Spur School, Fancy Gap, Va. These are certainly gracious and timely gifts, and will carry smiles, joy and sunshine to many faces and lives in the homes of our mountain friends. The children of the Raleigh Sunday School and the Burlington Sunday School are learning that it is more blessed to give than to receive; and here is predicting that they got as much out of the presents bought and sent to our mountain children as they will get out of those given them.

How one could wish that every Christian Church not having already done so, would try an experiment recently undertaken by a Christian Church which seemed headed for the cemetery one year ago. An interested brother writes as follows:

"A Woman's Missionary Society was organized in our church about six months ago. It has done more to bring on an era of good will in our community than anything else. Since the women got their society going, our Sunday School, which previously seemed dead, is undertaking to give one offering each month to the Orphanage, and now many of our members are interested in the Orphanage."

This is an old, old story, of course, but many churches and intelligent members thereof will not believe it enough to try it. Whenever a Woman's Missionary Society gets going in a church, other things, as a rule, get to going good in that same church. If we had to offer a remedy for sick churches, either those repining or declining, our first suggestion would be, "Organize a Woman's Missionary Society." If there is a church of this type amongst SUN readers, let this remedy be applied as an experiment—and something mighty good will happen.

WORD FROM WEBSTER.

The Webster Community Christian Church at Havre de Grace, Md., held a Thanksgiving Service at 10 A. M. and a Harvest Home. There was a splendid sermon by the pastor, Rev. Milton Sutcliffe. The amount of things that was collected shows what generous people we have in our congregation. The regular Parish Social was held in the evening.

Sunday, December 6th, being the first Sunday of the month, we had Holy Communion and Sermon. In the evening, Brother Sutcliffe gave us another of his fine sermons, the subject being, "Can Sins be Forgiven Hereafter." We all felt fully convinced that we must live right on this earth, or that we could not expect to here-after.

We are now working very hard on our Christmas affairs. The regular Christmas services will be held Sunday morning at 6 o'clock and at 10 o'clock. The Sunday School entertainment will be held the evening of December 28th, in the educational room. New Year's evening there will be a church night supper, followed by a free entertainment and the regular Watch Night Services.

HARRIETT E. CORLEY.

FROM ROANOKE, ALABAMA.

We have had a great and good year at Roanoke, and we are very much encouraged over the outlook for the future.

We are planning to finish paying for our lot on December 20th, and are expecting to begin building in the early spring of 1926. Brother Hunt is faithful and very much interested in the work, and our congregation appreciates him very much.

We have had quite a few visiting brethren with us during this year, namely, Revs. S. D. Lankford, E. M. Carter, H. W. Elder, J. H. Dollar, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and Mr. Hermon Eldredge.

We were indeed glad to have these visitors with us.

We have a live wire Sunday School, with interest growing.

On November 22d, by invitation, Rev. J. H. Hughes met with us and gave a lecture on Christian Endeavor, after which a Society was organized. We held our first meeting the following Sunday night, with thirty-two present.

We have adopted the budget plan in our church since conference, and find it works beautifully.

We are planning a Christmas service for Sunday evening, December 20th.

May I say just here, if anyone has money to lend to the cause of advancing the Christian Church, we are in the market for the same. We are not asking for gifts. In just a few short years, we intend to place it back in the work with interest added.

I must mention the most enthusiastic part of our church work; that is the Woman's Missionary Society.

Pray for the work at Roanoke.

Wishing the staff of Editors and SUN readers a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year, I am

THE REIDSVILLE PARSONAGE.

Dear Editor:

We are not in a position to build, but the house the preacher lives in was sold, and something had to be done. It looked like a ground hog case or nothing, as the old saying goes, so rather than try to winter out in the cold, I made an appeal to our good folks, I mean the members of our church here, and we got together and decided to build a parsonage.

It is to be a modern eight-room dwelling that will comfortably take care of almost any preacher and his family, and will be located about three blocks from the church on the same street, which, as you will recall, is Montgomery Street.

I agreed to see that the labor would be cared for; I mean by this that the building is to be constructed and this expense cared for in money raised or free labor. We have several carpenters and I am confident that they will respond to our call, besides I want to take this opportunity (provided you will publish this request) to ask our good friends from the rural churches within a radius of say thirty-five miles to help in the actual work on the building by giving us a day's work. Any day that you can come will be acceptable, and we will see that dinner is provided, and if you are not a carpenter, or cannot drive nails, we kindly ask that you favor us with whatever amount you can, and this request will extend beyond any mile limit. Remember what a job I have and favor us at this time, and we assure you that we will never cease to thank you, besides we feel that God will bless you in the giving. We have a wonderful field for service here, and our church gives promise of being one of the strongest churches of tomorrow.

On the plan adopted, when the house is completed, we will have only an indebtedness of about fifty per cent of the value of the building, and we have arranged for this amount.

The loyalty and devotion of our good people here appears worthy of mention. May God bless them, and you for sending us a donation, thus lending a helping hand in this hour of need.

I am very truly yours,

R. A. WHITTEN,
Pastor.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Be sure to look at that label and see that proper credit has been given you The greatest care is taken to see that this is done, but all of us are human, and a mistake is possible. And now just a word to our other friends: Look at the label on your paper now, and if you are very far in arrears—say a year or more—it will make our Christmas happier, and yours too, if you will pay the arrearage up to date—or better still, a year in advance. We would like to change in arrears, it will make our Christmas happier the date on your label the first issue of the year. And you might order THE SUN sent to some dear friend for the coming year. You know, those who do not take their church paper are really the ones who need to take it most.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The annual session of this body met at Greensboro, December 9th. As stated in its polity heretofore, the work of this conference is informal and inspirational, and in no sense legislative. In its two-days session at Greensboro, the conference lived up most nobly to its avowed polity. In no session of Christians limited to two days, has one heard so many addresses, well prepared and convincingly presented, containing so much historical and inspirational data. It is useless for THE SUN'S Editor to endeavor to give an adequate idea of the program of this conference and what such a program means to our church in the future. The papers presented, it is estimated, will fill a volume of at least 200 pages, and these papers were referred to a Committee on Publication with the instructions that the same be edited and if possible brought out in book form, the hope being expressed that in some way an edition of not less than 1,000 of such a book can be financed and issued. It would certainly prove a most valuable asset to the historian and to our church in the future. Every speaker and writer on the program seemed to feel that his Church had put him under obligation and that the field of facts which he occupied must be thoroughly cultivated and the products put on exhibition. It was indeed a wonderful exposition of our history, polity and principles.

Dr. W. C. Wicker is the president of the body, and delighted the audience with an ably prepared paper on the place of Priest and that of Prophet in the church. The formal topic under which he discussed this was, "Shall We Have a Dynamic or a Static Religion?"

Mrs. L. L. Vaughan presented a resume of the Woman's work in the conference the past year. This was a record of faithful labors and splendid achievements. The Home Mission Board of the Conference presented a plan of organizing a Christian Missionary Association, which association was duly organized and a long list of memberships secured. The officers of the association were chosen and the body begins to function at once through its Executive Committee, who were instructed to collect dues as early as possible and add to the list of those who joined the initial organization.

The Foreign Mission Report gave a sketch of what had been done the past year on foreign fields and recommended certain lines of action the coming year among the churches of the conferences. It would be difficult to say which of the following papers was most valuable, though it must be said that that by W. E. MacClenney on "The History of the Conferences in North Carolina," and that by Brother W. H. Turrentine on "The Early Educational History of the North Carolina Christians," were the most exhaustive in research and showed painstaking investigation worthy of the most capable historians. Think of sitting in a conference for a day and hearing papers read doing full justice to the following topics:

"History of the Conferences and Churches of the Christians in North Carolina"; "History of Deceased Ministers of the North Carolina Conference"; "History of Deceased Prominent Laymen and Women of the North Carolina Conferences"; "Statistical History of the North Carolina Conferences"; "Missionary History of the North Carolina Conference"; "Early Educational History of the North Carolina Christians"; "Later History of Education among North Carolina Christians"; "History of the Christian Orphanage"; "Literary History of the North Carolina Christians"; "An Interpretation of Rev. Jomes O'Kelly"; "The Principles of the Christian Church"; "Christian Union in the Program of the Christian Church"; "The Christian Church Facing the Future."

One regrettable feature about the conference was that hundreds of our people were not present to hear such a presentation. It would be nothing less than a tragedy for these papers to go without publication. And it is safe to say that they will find their way in print either through the columns of THE SUN the coming year or in book form or in both. Since this is to be done, it would be but vain repetition to endeavor to repeat them here or to give any adequate description of them. We simply wish with all our heart that thousands of SUN readers could have been inspired with these papers as scores were permitted to be. It was an epoch-making conference and one whose impact will be felt not only within the bounds of the conference itself, but throughout the whole communion.

The Greensboro church was most cordial and royal in its entertainment and hospitality, serving luncheon and supper in the basement of the building and the homes of the community being thrown open for entertainment and breakfast.

It was decided that the conference meet next year in a two-days session, the place being left to the Executive Committee, and that the Christian Missionary Association in its first regular meeting be held in connection with this conference. The association will then decide on its further policy as to time and place of meeting.

The State Conference has a place amongst us and certainly can be of untold value to the whole Church provided the people will attend its sessions and enter into its program.

THE PEACE STUDY CONFERENCE.

Many of those attending the National Study Conference on The Churches and World Peace, December 1st, 2d, and 3d, in Washington, D. C., declared that it was one of the most significant gatherings they had ever attended. There were delegations from more than thirty different denominations present, representing practically every State in the Nation. The conference was held in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, which church was the place of worship attended regularly by President Lincoln during his residence in Washington. The pew he occupied is roped off with a gold cord.

There were to have been five representatives present from the Christian Church, but three of the number were unavoidably detained at home. Dr. Minton and the writer were in attendance on each of the three days.

It was indeed a unique gathering. There were no "set speeches." The entire time was given over to informal discussion of the many questions involved in the attitude of the church toward the question of war. A carefully prepared syllabus of some thirty pages had been prepared in advance, containing a suggested outline of study and discussion, the same being sent to the delegates in advance. Every man was limited to five minutes to express his opinions or convictions on whatever topic might be under consideration. This made possible a most animated relay of short spurts in oratory. No matter who the speaker was, and no matter how much he had to say on the subject, and no matter how badly he wanted to say on, when his five minutes were up, he had to sit down. And there were usually from three to twenty ready to relieve him.

And when you consider that many of the greatest minds of the day—leading editors, statesmen, secretaries, bishops, pastors, and laymen, from various vocations, were present, you can imagine how interesting and illuminating the discussions were. It has never been my privilege to attend a conference or convention that expressed such a diffrence of opinion with such a harmony of purpose, and where such fine courtesy and brotherliness were manifested by everybody.

The conference was divided into three groups for study during the day periods, and a joint session of the groups was held in the evening to consider the findings of the different groups during the day. Bishop McDowell presided at the joint sessions.

The two social items of the conference were the very elaborate Tea served the delegates by the ladies of the church where the conference was held, and the invitation from President Coolidge to the delegates to a reception in the East Room of the White House to meet the President.

One thing that made a profound impression upon the writer during the discussion was the fact that some of the laymen present, representing large business interests and the professions, were more emphatic in declaring that modern warfare is the greatest collective sin of society than were some of the ministers.

A delegation was appointed from the conference to hold a service at the grave of The Unknown Soldier, and to place a wreath thereon.

I am glad that the Christian Church had representatives present at this great interdenominational meeting. And every member of the denomination ought to rejoice in the fact that during the past few years our Executive Board has seen to it that our beloved church has been represented at such gatherings. If this policy of having representatives at such meetings had been in operation for the past fifty years, it would not now be necessary for us always to have to explain who we are and what the Christian Church is.

One paragraph from the pronouncement of the conference will indicate the tenor of the meeting and must suffice here:

"War is the most colossal calamity and scourge of modern life. War is not inevitable. It is the supreme enemy of mankind. Its futility is beyond question. Its continuance is the suicide of civilization. We are determined to outlaw the whole war system.

"Economics and industry, social welfare and progressive civilization, morality and religion, all demand a new international order in which righteousness and justice between nations shall prevail and in which nation shall fear nation no longer, and prepare for war no more. For the attainment of this high ideal the life of the nations must be controlled by the spirit of mutual goodwill made possible through international agreement. The war spirit and war feelings must be banished and war preparations abandoned. Permanent peace based on equal justice and fair dealing for all alike, both great and small, must be achieved. The Kingdom of God in the relations of nations must be established.

"This stupendous, difficult and urgent task challenges the Churches of America and all citizens of goodwill. It is a moral and religious, as well as an economic and political task. All the forces of civilization must therefore unite in this noble adventure of faith and purpose."

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?

The word "Christian" occurs in the Bible in three different connections and from these we may be able by an analysis to determine what the Bible connotes when this term is used.

We are told in Acts 11: 26 that the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch. The context plainly shows that this term was used to indicate that by it certain persons were set off from the rest of the world. We may safely conclude, therefore, that there is a difference between the Christians and the non-Christians. This is the only logical reason why there is such a word as "Christian" at all, that it should designate a group wearing certain characteristics and exhibiting them in their experience and life.

This same word occurs in Acts 26: 28, where Paul is befor King Agrippa. Paul is at this time endeavoring to persuade Agrippa to become a Christian. We learn from this circumstance that one of the characteristics of Christianity is missionary zeal. The Christian feels that he is commissioned to win others to Christ. Whenever the church has had the missionary and evangelistic spirit, it has prospered and there is no other way for it to prosper.

The third instance where this word occurs is in I. Peter 4: 16. Here the apostle speaks of suffering as an integral experience of the Christian life. Christ Himself suffered for the sake of His followers and they are privileged likewise to suffer for His sake. This is one of the mysteries, deep and abiding and precious, of the Christian experience. Only those who have suffered for Christ have reached the zenith of Christian privilege.

In this connection, it would be well for us to see what Christ Himself has to say to those who are His followers. He does not use the word "Christian" to describe them, but does use the word "disciple" and the word "friend." He says in John 15: 14: "You are my friends if you do what I command you." And in that same chapter, 17th verse, "This is my command: to love one another." We are justified in concluding, therefore, that Christ numbers among His followers those who love one another and, if there is lack of evidence of love on the part of Christ's followers, this should be cause for self-examination. Our Master very plainly says we are not His disciples unless we obey His command, and His command is "love one another."

A Christian, therefore, is one who is set apart from the world, who undertakes to win others to Christ, who suffers for Christ's sake, and who loves his fellowmen. W. A. H.

PURPOSE OF "MISSION MONTH."

Acting upon a request of the Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention, all of our conferences have voted to have Mission Month in 1926, the Eastern Virginia in February, the others in March.

Our Mission work at home and abroad is very greatly handicapped from lack of interest in Missions and funds to carry on. The Mission Board has done its best and is now greatly embarrassed because it cannot meet its outstanding obligations.

To continue work already begun and meet obligations already made, an Emergency Fund of $25,000.00 is called for and is a necessity. Of this amount the ten members of the Board have pledged themselves, as individuals, to give $2,500.00 (one tenth of the entire amount), if the remainder of our membership will give the balance.

What is desired is this: Plan for and emphasize Mission Month. During that month put on in all the churches a missionary program,, get the pastor to preach a missionary sermon, emphasize missions in some way. Then on the Sunday designated by the pastor, take the missionary offering—a free will offering but with an earnest and honest endeavor to get every member and friend to make as liberal donation as possible. In this way it is greatly to be hoped we will make our churches more missionary in spirit, and in giving, and that our present work shall not further suffer.

Our Lord certainly meant each one of us when He said, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature." Many cannot go in person, but all can go, and thus obey our Lord, in prayer and in purse. Here is an opportunity, and a real need if there ever was one. As we give to Missions, we will become more interested in Missions. And as we know about Missions, we will give more to Missions. Let's give the people of our churches the information, and then their support will give inspiration.

There is not the least doubt but that our people will readily and gladly observe Mission Month, and do so in a most becoming manner, if they are given the proper opportunity. J. O. A.

CANVASS FOR MISSION FUNDS.

All the Protestant denominations are making strenuous efforts not to retrench in their missionary undertakings but to stir their respective communions to missionary zeal and liberality. Various plans are adopted and are being used to bring to the attention of the people the needs and the opportunities. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, through their general church paper, The Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., submits the following plan for their campaign, and in this there are suggestions that may help in many of our churches:

1. Appoint a missionary committee of at least five persons, who will cooperate with the pastor in making the canvass. One of the number should act as treasurer of the special funds collected.

2. Distribute missionary literature to the entire membership and constituency.

3. The pastor is urged to preach two sermons on the present missionary situation, one on the Sunday on which the canvass is to begin and one on the Sunday preceding. If it is not desirable to have a week of mission study, the pastor is urged to devote the prayer meeting services between these two Sundays to the discussion of our present missionary situation.

4. Wherever possible secure cash, as the need of the Board is greater at present than it has been at any time during the entire history of our Church. If it is not possible to pay all or part in cash, the pledge should be payable within the next three or six months.

5. Cash collected should be turned over to the special missionary treasurer. He should send in at once all cash to the Treasurer of the Board of Missions, and also the amount of all unpaid pledges.

Many of our pastors who are planning to observe Mission Month in February or March, will find these suggestions practical we think.

DR. FLETCHER RETURNS TO PASTORATE.

On December 1, 1923, Dr. W. P. Fletcher entered the service of the Board of Christian Education as Adult Field Secretary. He has rendered a signal service to our church through his radiant spirit and genial personality, and has created a fine atmosphere for the program of Christian Education. We are loath to lose him from the service of the church as a general officer, but he has decided to return to the pastorate at Oshawa, and entered upon his duties on the first of December.

In presenting his resignation, Dr. Fletcher says: "There is no lack of faith in our program of Christian Education, nor in those entrusted to carry it out, and I am perfectly willing to say that and will seek opportunity to do so whenever and wherever opportunity offers."

Dr. Fletcher assigns three reasons for leaving the work as Field Secretary of Christian Education at this time, as follows:

"In the first place I cannot at all fee tlhat my leaving will be as serious as your letter indicates. In the second place, for the sake of my wife and family and for my own sake, if I am to be of any service in the future years, I ought not longer to refuse to listen to my physician's advice to quit the trains and the road, and, in the third place, the Sshawa Pastorate has given a practically unanimous call and they seem very enthusiastic in it, and I have given without reserve my acceptance of their call. . . . I am looking forward with pleasure to work in the pastorate again."

The Board of Christian Education had confidently expected a most successful year of work in its department of higher education with Dr. Fletcher at the helm, a constructive work not only in respect to money raised, but in respect to the general morale as touching our colleges. We have no choice, however, other than to accept Dr. Fletcher's resignation, however reluctantly, and we are now open to suggestions for a person to be his successor in the field of higher education. We call upon the church to pray that the Board may be divinely guided in its decision and suggestions from the Brotherhood will be most heartily and appreciatively received.

NOTICE.

In the splendid quarterly report of Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Holland, Va., treasurer of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference, printed in The Sun, December 3d, page 8, the printer or proof reader made a very regrettable error. In the item for Rocky Ford, the print was $86. It should have been $86.42. Then one item was omitted entirely, "Orphan at Elon, from Suffolk Girls' Society, $150.00." The total was printed correctly, but if anyone endeavored to add the items, there was found a shortage of $150.42, for which this correction accounts. It was an unintentional error in printing.—Editor.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The tragedy of the Christian Dispensation is a divided church. Jesus prayed that "they all may be one." That is Christian unity, and not Christian union, in the sense of all one organization. Unity is more than organic union. Even in organized denominational units, there is not unity. Members of the same denomination differ as much in opinion and interpretation as members of different denominations. To quote D. A. Long, D. D., "To think is to differ." That is one of the wisest five word sentences in the English language, and is universally true, both as to time and place. Harmony is not far from the meaning of unity. In Music, the parts all differ in thought, but they harmonize in the anthem; and it would be a poor anthem, if soprano, tenor, alto and base did not harmonize. Unity is co-operation without loss to any, and with gain to all.

I purchased a railroad ticket this morning from Suffolk to Washington. It was in three parts. The first part said: Suffolk to Petersburg," and was taken by a Norfolk and Western conductor; the second part said: "Petersburg to Richmond," and was taken by an Atlantic Coast Line conductor; the third said: "Richmond to Washington," and was taken by a Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac conductor. The ticket was a unit in three parts. Not one of these Railroads could have carried me to Washington over the line I travelled; but all three of them by co-operation, did. Railroads would die if there were no co-operation; none of them suffers by this unity in service. There is not only co-operation in the service of these three corporations, but backside of all their activities is the unity of purpose, the confidence in one another, the common interest, and the share in profits. I changed trains at Richmond and I changed roads at Petersburg; but I did not change my ticket. One does not change his religion when he changes denominations. The Christian who cannot worship God in all churches may doubt whether he can worship God in any church. One common purpose dominates the real spiritual church—the salvation of the world. Nothing less than that spirit can meet the requirements of the prayer of Jesus.

Every movement toward Christian unity shortens the road to heaven, and makes it safer for those who are journeying to that Land of Promise. If all the denominations and all members of each local congregation were working in real spiritual unity, they could win any city to Jesus Christ; and it is just as true in the country. There should be no competition, but co-operation. I have written before, this; that "competition is the life of trade, but the death of the trader"; and it is even worse in religion, because it may be reversed. It may be here that competition is the life of the church, but the death of religion. The world comes to its best in government, in business, in education, in social life, and in religion, by unselfish co-operation. The Civil War was division; reconstruction brought unity. Consider the difference in feeling, prosperity, and development. The nations will never have peace till the churches have unity. My church must never be more important than the Church. Christ must be "all and in all."

The prayer of Jesus will be answered; but the church must help to answer it. God never made a harvest without human effort. Bread grains do not grow in the field of nature. "Seed time and harvest" are the essential factors in cereal products. Unity will never come through councils, but through an uncounted host of believers in harmony with Christ and one another.

ELON LETTER.

President Calvin Coolidge, in his Omaha Address, said:

"The generally expressed desire of 'America First' cannot be criticised. It is a perfectly correct aspiration for our people to cherish. But the problem which we have to solve is how to make America first. It cannot be done by the cultivation of national bigotry, arrogance and selfishness."

In his speech before the Congregational National Convention in Washington, the President said some additional wise things, among them we quote:

"I do not know of any adequate support for our form of government except that which comes from religion. . . . We do not possess any other enlightening force, we do not have any other hope for the reform and perfection of society. There is no other method by which we can live and have life more abundantly. . . . I have tried to indicate what I think the country needs in the way of help under present conditions. It needs more religion. If there are any general failures in the enforcement of the law, it is because there have first been failures in the disposition to observe the law. I can conceive of no adequate remedy for the evils which beset society except through the influence of religion. There is no form of education which will not fail, there is no form of government which will not fall, there is no form of reward which will not fail. Redemption must come through sacrifice and sacrifice is the essence of religion."

These two utterances by the President of the United States at a time like this are of a speecial value and significance. They plead first for tolerance and second for religion, and the President would not hesitate to connect the two ideas together in a single plea for religious tolerance. The American Republic was founded in an atmosphere of religious tolerance and it would be a most regrettable situation should the spirit of bigotry and intolerance ever become general in our land. We want men of deep and firm convictions, men who are so convinced of the verity and abidingness of their convictions that they do not feel under obligation to argue for them, and who at the same time have such respect for the convictions of others, recognizing that there are diversities of understanding and of spirit, who are willing that their brothers and sisters should also have convictions which to them are sacred and true, and who are charitable enough to recognize that these convictions on the part of others are entitled to charitable consideration both from them and from God Himself. They should go even further than this and in their own thinking assume that convictions in regard to the eternal issues of life arise from the voice of God Himself speaking to the heart and conscience of the individual soul, and they should be willing to agree that the individual soul is to be the interpreter for itself of the voice of God to that individual soul.

In view of this situation, based on the experience of devout and consecrated Christians, our church has always acknowledged the right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience. It was this great principle coupled with the acceptance of Christian character as a test of fellowship or church membership, which gave rise to the Christian Church. The spirit of tolerance is the spirit of our Brotherhood and this accounts for the fact that our church has not found it necessary to divide up in parties during this time of religious crisis and of conflict between the Fundamentalists and the Modernists. The fellowship of Christ is with the Christian Church a personal matter and men of diverse attitudes and convictions dwell together in unity in the fellowship of our Brotherhood. We are convinced too, that the Union of Christ's followers can be accomplished only through such a fellowship as the Christian Church offers to those who profess to be Christ's followers. W. A. Harper.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

Education means the drawing forth, cultivating and training of all our faculties in such a manner as to render them most useful to ourselves and most beneficial to others. Man is a threefold being, physical, mental, and moral. To develop the whole man, to fit him to be happy himself and to spread all around him as much happiness as he is capable of diffusing, is the proper business of education.

It is the business of education to develop all of a man's powers and teach him to perform all his duties as a dependent, social, physical, mental and moral being. Education is necessary for man, for without it he is the most helpless and the most useless animal in the world. When first born, he can neither walk nor talk, yet having been nourished, grown up and educated, he can walk abroad and everywhere behold and feel the beauty, grandeur and sublimity of nature.

In point of time, physical education comes first. This is the cultivation of our physical faculties in such a manner as shall most conduce to bodily strength, health and activity, and this depends on diet and exercise. By proper attention to these two things every perfectly formed child would grow up to a healthy and vigorous maturity with the prospect of a long and useful life. But in addition to these, in most parts of the world, he requires proper clothing and care concerning pure air. In the hot parts of the earth where man lives in the open these are not important matters.

When the child goes to school, everything possible should be done to render his situation agreeable and happy, or he will not grow and develop properly. He should be brought along by degrees as his strength of body and mind can bear it. Intense and long continued study pales the cheek and destroys the physical health without properly developing the mind. Long-continued and severe bodily exercise, at play is equally pernicious, and both should be equally avoided.

However perfect our physical or animal systems may be, without mental or intellectual culture, we would be but the most perfect of animals. It is the mind which places us at the head of all animal creation. But our mental faculties, as well as our physical, when we are brought into existence, are but in the embryo state. They are but the germs of what they may become by proper culture.

There has been a complete revolution in our educational methods in the last half century. The radical defect with our educational system of fifty years ago was that it exercised but a part of the faculties of the mind, while the rest were allowed to remain inactive and uncultivated. Students were compelled to spend years studying subjects which nature had not supplied them with any faculties for handling, on the theory that there were certain things which must be learned purely for mental culture and not because they were of any actual value to the student.

In the higher institutions of learning, Latin, Greek and Mathematics was the dose that was to kill or cure all. There is many a shining genius in this world who has no talent whatever for languages or mathematics, so he would be thus thrown aside as a dunce and not allowed to secure any kind of a college course. Today we go to the opposite extremes, as we try to cultivate those faculties the most which nature has bestowed on each individual. This is rapidly becoming a world of specialists. The great linguist may be a blank in mathematics, while the man who can solve the most intricate mathematical calculation may be only familiar with his native tongue.

Formerly many blacksmiths were able to fill teeth with iron fillings, and some dentists could do various kinds of blacksmith work. Now, we have men who spend all their years studying dentistry and never reach the end of the science, while blacksmiths do a class of work their fathers never dreamed possible. So both classes have been benefitted, and the same is true in every walk of life. Formerly a shoemaker could make a complete shoe, but now, in the modern factory, a shoe passes through about fifty hands before it is completed.

The studies pursued by the great mass of our people three-quarters of a century ago, consisted of reading, spelling, writing and arithmetic. When an attempt was made to introduce geography, there was great opposition, as it was considered one of the useless frills. English grammar was unknown in the grade schools in most parts of the country, and it was considered a great waste of time for a student to study a language he could already speak. Spelling was a great hobby. A man's entire education was often judged by how well he could stand up and spell in the spelling matches.

Today our public schools, at least in the large cities, teach the things the youth needs or thinks he needs to fit him for the particular kind of work he desires to follow. In addition to the book work, which must be the basis of all education, the boys may take manual training and the girls domestic science. The technical schools teach all kinds of trades, and business schools fit pupils to go directly into the business world, and these use the most up-to-date methods. They are rapidly revolutionizing the commercial world.

It was a common saying years ago that the high school student was no good until he went to some other kind of a school and learned something useful. This is no longer true. Those who are preparing for college attend the academic high school and study whatever subjects are required for entrance to the higher institutions of learning, but those who wish to take what we call the bread and butter courses are able to do so and make a good living from the day they graduate.

In our country, at this time, we have the greatest variety of the higher institutions of learning. A young man can specialize in anything he desires. Formerly there were four professions taught in colleges and universities. They were law, medicine, teaching, and preaching. Today, they are numbered by scores, and as a result there are the finest class of specialists ever known entering the fields of useful human endeavor, and the world is feeling the good effects of it.

Then, by a well rounded education, we mean the training of those mental faculties with which each is most abundantly endowed and enabling him to specialize in that for which nature intended him. It does not mean studying all over the field of learning without regard for his own particular talents, thus insuring his failure, as only specialists in our day can succeed.

Upon the right culture of man's moral nature, all depends. For it is the man's moral nature in which the power resides to choose the right, or eternally good, and reject the wrong, or eternally evil. No genius, no industry, no attainments can compensate for the lack of moral character.

Resourceful, responsible men and women are needed in every calling, and only such will fill high places in this age of science and varied and wonderful achievements. The men that are conducting the large enterprises for the amelioration of the hard conditions of life are clear-visioned, warm-hearted men of education. The men who have made two blades of wheat grow where one grew before, and so have increased the value of farm products millions of dollars each year; the men who have gathered the snows from the mountains, and from them sent sparkling water coursing through the deserts of the west, until now they breathe sweet incense and bring forth rich fruits in their seasons; in every department of the world's work, the men who are doing the work worth while, are men with a well-rounded education.

DISCIPLES CALLED CHRISTIANS.

By Rev. P. H. Fleming, M. A., D. D.

[Annual Address before the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, Salem Chapel, Forsythe County, N. C., November 10, 1925. Published by request of the Conference.]

Standing almost nineteen centuries this side the time when disciples of Christ were first called Christians, and one hundred and thirty-one years since the denomination now known as Christian, chose as its name Christian, to the exclusion of all other names, and in the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, here assembled, it seemed fit to me to speak to you today about the Christian Church: its origin, principles, visions, and aims; and of some present day problems for ourselves and others.

"And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch."—Acts 11: 26.

The name Christian was given to the disciples of Christ at Antioch in the first half of the first century, about A. D. 42 or 43.

Several opinions have been advanced as to how the name originated. It has been said that it was given by the disciples themselves; by the inhabitants of Antioch; by enemies; by divine appointment in fulfillment of prophecy. In Isaiah 62: 2, we read, "And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name." Antioch was a Gentile city, and Christian was certainly a new name.

Whether the name was given by Jew or Gentile, Greek or Roman, friend or foe, by the disciples themselves or by divine appointment, the name is here, and it is too appropriate and beautiful to ever die.

The name Christian, in thought is Hebrew; the root word is Greek; the ending is Latin. In the name Christian, the three nations—Greek, Latin and Hebrew—in whose languages was written the accusation or title placed above the head of Christ on the cross, unite in giving the name by which the followers of Christ are called—Christian. The church could not go very far without a name, and it was a long step forward when it received or took as its own, the name Christian after its divine Founder. Under the name Christian, the church has won many signal and glorious victories and is destined to win many more—and eventually to win the world to Christ.

In this Gentile city, Antioch, the capital of Syria, we find an established church called Christian, about ten years after the Ascension, and we need but to observe the clearly mentioned characteristics of this Christian church to find their belief, doctrine, and fellowship.

Following Peter's great sermon on the day of Pentecost, the record reads concerning the saved, "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers."—Acts 2: 42. This same kind of doctrine and fellowship evidently prevailed in the church at Antioch, for it was Christian.

The early Christian Church had in its fold apostles, deacons, elders and other Christian workers; but Christ was the head. Col. 1: 18, "And he is head of the body, the church." Those in apostolic times who began to be called after the names of their favorite teachers, were regarded as carnal. Paul says, "For while one saith, I am of Paul, and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal."—I. Cor. 3: 4.

In the history of this beautiful church called Christian, there are incidents and traits of special interest that stand out boldly. It was a church of solid organization, stability, moral firmness, and Christian character. In its bosom beat warm and impulsive Christian life and love; not only for itself; but for others of a different race, narrower belief; and for those in heathen lands.

This church at Antioch was evangelistic, enterprising, and purposeful. It was a church of perseverance, Christian brotherhood, and co-operation. It was a Spirit filled church. It believed in sacrifice. It was a working church. It believed that man was lost and that Christ came to seek and to save that which was lost. This church is noted especially for two beginnings: the name Christian, and Christian Missions. The disciples were called Christians first at Antioch. It was an intensely missionary church in character and action. It was the first, so far as recorded, to send relief to the saints in another field and country—Judea.

It was a pioneer of organized missions to heathen lands. From its doors went forth Saul and Barnabas on the first distinctly Christian missionary journey to the heathen. Others had gone out as individuals and preached Christ; but here was a church interested in missions and sending out two of its best teachers and preachers.

In the first, second and third centuries, there were violent opposition and severe persecution; but Christianity made rapid progress. It was widely known in Europe, Asia and Africa by the close of the third century. Before that century closed there were many Christians in the Roman empire. They were in the senate, in the camp, in the palace. They were almost everywhere. They were so numerous that Tertullian said, were they to have retired into another country, they would have left the Roman Empire only a frightful solitude. Shortly after the beginning of the fourth century the Roman emperor himself was converted to the Christian faith.

Had the church remained true in name, doctrine, fellowship, character—had she remained true and faithful to Christ her Head, in all things, the world doubtless would long ago have bowed in love and loyalty to Jesus Christ. But in the fourth century the purity of Christianity became corrupted by its brief alliance with the State, and by sectarian controversies and discords among professing Christians. Strife and worldliness crept into the fold. The doctrine and fellowship of the apostles were departed from, and even the name Christian was lost or discarded. Reverses came. Light grew dim and darkened into night; and the "Dark Ages" reigned for a thousand years, till the days when the Reformation, A. D. 1517, ushered in a new era; and light began to dawn and brighten into day.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENNISON, Secretary.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

The Secretary of the Bureau of Christian Stewardship desires to extend heartiest Christmas greetings to every person who in anyway has had a worthy part in the work of the Forward Movement; to those who have made it possible for the work of the Christian Church and of the Kingdom of Christ to go forward through the payment of their subscriptions; and to those who have renewed their subscriptions that the great work of the Movement may be carried forward. May these days of the holiday season bring you many evidences of the Father's blessings, both spiritual and temporal. We bespeak your hearty co-operation and most earnest prayers for the work of the Bureau.

CLINCH IT.

If you desire to clinch your Stewardship program close it with a great day of enlistment of Christian setwards and the enrollment of tithers. Be sure to enroll young people as well as adults. We have enrollment cards free. Send us the cards and we will send you a membership certificate with each name enrolled, and you may have them publically presented to each at a special occasion. We have neat wall charts for tithers also free. We desire that your Stewardship instruction shall be made permanent.

CHRISTMAS JOY.

What does Christmas mean to you? How are you planning to observe it? It is the anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ. Will your celebration be in harmony with the great event? What part in your celebration will Christ really have? Will your giving be mostly to your own, or will his cause be worthily remembered by you? All you are and have are because of him. Why not remember in some worthy way some one of the causes lying near to his heart. Will you not do some worthy giving to Christ on this his anniversary? Would not that bring you a lasting joy? Make it a worthy offering, worthy of Christ, of his blessings to you and yours. It will enrich your life, advance his cause, encourage his workers, make your giving a benediction, give you treasures really laid up.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, held its annual meeting at the Oakland Christian Church, on December 8, 1925, and was called to order by Rev. James H. Lightbourne, president of the association. Reports from all the churches were not in, but indications are that the total collections will be larger than of any previous meeting. This shows a growing spirit in mission work since no special drive for new members was made this year.

Beginning with the devotions led by Rev. H. B. Hall, who made an earnest plea for "Work and Co- operation," the whole program was characterized by enthusiasm and a deep spiritual atmosphere. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, delivered a stirring address on "Our Task in Eastern Virginia," emphasizing the importance of locating new churches in fields of real need. Rev. O. D. Poythress, in his message on "Missions and Men," spoke of the vast opportunities in our own communities of reaching the unchurched, and the need of "carrying on," if the great principles of our church are to reach the masses. Many fine things were said during the day, including a strong appeal by Col. J. E. West for the association to give itself as soon as possible to the establishing of new fields.

The following officers were elected for the coming year, 1926, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, president; Rev. O. D. Poythress, vice-president; Rev. John G. Truitt, recording secretary; Mr. C. D. West, secretary of missions, and Mr. B. J. Jones, treasurer. The invitation to meet with the South Norfolk Church next year was accepted.

Dr. I. W. Johnson and his good members of the Oakland Church seem to be happily located in their new church building, and proved their hospitality by their hearty welcome and the bountiful provisions set before the association.

Although the work of the Christian Missionary Association is new to me, the vision of the association seemed to grip my heart and cause that great text and words of William Carey to ring anew, "Lengthen the Cords! Strengthen the Stakes!" May we in our association, "Attempt great things for God; expect great things from God."

DATES TO BE REMEMBERED BY THE CHURCHES.

The following dates have been fixed by the various conferences as Mission Month:

Alabama, March; Georgia and Alabama, March; Eastern Virginia, February; North Carolina and Virginia, March; Western North Carolina, March; Eastern North Carolina, March; Valley of Virginia, March.

The conferences decided upon these dates in their recent annual sessions with the exception of the last named, which decided through its Executive Committee. Of course, where there is preaching only once a month and the Sunday set for the Mission program and offering is not suitable because of weather conditions, the Sunday of the following month will be observed. It is to be hoped that all the churches will not only observe the dates, but will seek to make the month voted by conference a great epoch in the annals of our church.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

THE DAY OF PRAYER FOR MISSIONS.

The annual Day of Prayer for Missions (February 19, 1926), held under the auspices of the Council of Women for Home Missions and the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America, has become a fixed feast in the Christian year to which thousands of women look forward with eager expectation.

The program for this year has already been prepared by a joint committee of the Federation and the Council. The theme is "In Everything by Prayer."

The committee decided that as this year is to be signalized by the study of prayer as a force in the Mission Enterprise, the attempt should be made to have the day really devoted to prayer; that we should come together for thanksgiving, communion and intercession and that instruction and inspiration furnished through addresses should be minimized.

Definite periods are assigned for thanksgiving and for meditation. The prayers are made very definite. Responsive readings are provided in which God's promises are recited. Intercessions for great causes are stressed. Songs are interspersed. It is suggested that the offering on the day, as in former years, be devoted to causes that belong to all denominations. In the home field, the offering will go toward the work among farm and cannery migrants; in the foreign field for Women's Union Christian Colleges and Christian literature for women and children.

It is hoped that each individual will have gathered her offering beforehand, and will bring it to the meeting.

The committee feels especially anxious that the causes selected, both home and foreign, should be the ones chosen in each meeting, rather than some local cause or causes. The Council and the Federation which are promoting the meeting are each responsible for their causes, and are depending on the Day of Prayer celebration for a large part of their funds.

The condition of the world in which we live certainly summons us to prayer with a great, compelling voice. If we can only unite the hearts of the Christian women of America in an outpouring of their souls to God we may help mightily in these times of crisis.—HELEN B. MONTGOMERY, in Missionary Review.

SOME GREAT PRAYERS.

"O Lord, give me souls or take away my soul."—GEORGE WHITFIELD, the famous English Evangelist.

"Here let me burn out for God."—HENRY MARTIN, missionary, kneeling on India's coral strands.

"Lord, to Thee I dedicate myself. O accept me and let me be Thine for ever. Lord, I desire nothing else, I desire nothing more."—DAVID BRAINERD, missionary to the North American Indians, 1718-1747.

"Give what Thou wilt, and how much Thou wilt, and when Thou wilt. Set me where Thou wilt and deal with me in all things just as Thou wilt."—THOMAS a KEMPIS, 1379-1471.

"Use me then, my Saviour, for whatever purpose and in whatever way Thou mayest require. Here is my poor heart, an empty vessel; fill it with Thy grace."—DWIGHT L. MOODY.

"Do Thou, my God, do Thou, God, stand by me against all the world's wisdom and reason. Oh, do it. Thou must do it. Stand by me, Thou true eternal God."—MARTIN LUTHER, when called before the Diet of Worms.

"O Lord, send me to the darkest spot on earth."—JOHN KENNETH MCKENZIE. Prayer as a young missionary candidate.

"Lord, save Fiji, save Fiji. Save these people. O Lord, have mercy upon Fiji; save Fiji."—JOHN HUNT, missionary to the Fiji Islands, when dying.

While we are profoundly grateful to the above schools for their liberal offerings and to the other schools which contribute monthly to Missions, it is noted with regret that there are quite a few schools in the Southern Christian Convention not yet sufficiently interested in enlarging the Kingdom and building up schools and churches elsewhere to make a monthly contribution. For the next few months these contributions, not otherwise designated, will go to the support and extension of our mountain work in Carroll County, Va., and it is devoutly hoped that many of our schools not already doing so will vote for and send one offering a month for this worthy and needy work of the Kingdom.

Fraternally,

J. O. Atkinson,
Mission Secretary.

ONE-DAY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

The churches of the Virginia Valley Central Conference were well represented at the One-Day School of Missions, held with Mt. Olivet (R.) Christian Church, near McGaheysville, Va.

The school was called to order at 10 o'clock by the Conference Mission Secretary, Mr. R. O. Rothgeb. After the opening song, Rev. V. T. Crawford led in prayer. The first twenty-one verses of the tenth chapter of Luke were then read by the chairman.

Dr. W. P. Minton, Dayton, Ohio, Foreign Mission Secretary of the Christian Church then outlined the plans of the Foreign Mission Board for the coming year.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C., Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, gave an address emphasizing the importance of Missions in the churches.

Dismissed for lunch with prayer by Mr. W. C. Wampler.

The afternoon session was called to order by the chairman. Miss Virdie Showalter, president of the Woman's Mission Board, gave a short talk. This was followed by an address by Rev. V. T. Crawford, pastor of the Christian Church at Winchester. Dr. Minton conducted a Missionary Round-Table.

Dr. Atkinson favored the audience with another of his matchless addresses.

An offering of $14.89 was taken, to apply on the traveling expenses of Dr. Minton. After which Dr. Minton told a story of the life of Miss Olive Gordon Williams, our former missionary to Porto Rico, who recently passed away in Lakemont Hospital.

Revs. R. P. Crumpler and A. W. Andes were present and lent their help in many ways to make the day a success.

Linville church had the largest number present and so to encourage attendance the Missionary Society of Antioch, which carried the honor last year, gave a year's subscription to The Christian Missionary to the Linville Missionary Society.

After several announcements, the day's session was closed with benediction by Chairman R. O. Rothgeb.

Mrs. B. F. Frank,

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

To the Churches and Sunday Schools of the Southern Christian Convention.

Dear Friends:

We come at this time with this very urgent appeal for funds to help meet the running expenses of Bethlehem College. It is necessary to secure funds to the extent of at least $5,000 above what we will get from students this year in order to balance our accounts for the year's work. $2,000 of this amount may be secured in and around Wadley, but the other $3,000 will have to come from other places.

Financially, Bethlehem has been hard hit this year. The cotton crop of this section is very short and the price is a third less than last year, and we are heceiving very little help from Men and Millions. So we must fall back on the individual churches for help, or close up the institution.

Our churches and Sunday Schools have always been so thoughtful and considerate of all the enterprises of our beioved church, and you will not fail us now in this hour of our direst need.

Our teachers are at Bethlehem at a stupendous sacrifice, and their salaries must be paid when due, if possible, but we have not the funds to pay them for the last month.

We believe this appeal will not go unheeded—that the interest your church and Sunday School have in their own College will lead them to make a worth-while Christmas Gift to Bethlehem College.

"Bethlehem College is your College—build it."

Send money to—

S. L. BEOUGHER, President,
Wadley, Alabama.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson XIII.—December 27, 1925.

Review: "From Athens to Rome."

Golden Text: "Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."—Romans 5: 1.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 91: 1, 2, 9-16.

Review means to view again. It is in keeping with sound educational methods to review, for in this way things can be seen in perspective and things take their places in a scale of relative value. Best of all a review helps to fix definitely in mind the truths that are so valuable, but truths that might be lost if they were never referred to again after they were discussed on the day of the lesson. I believe in reviews. But unfortunately review lessons in the Sunday School often become "bugaboos" to the teachers and dull to the pupils. A little study and a little advance preparation on the part of the pupils—advance preparation that has been stimulated by advance assignments—will transform the average review and make it fruitful in permanent spiritual results.

In this review a few suggestive teaching points will be presented. Better by far, however, is the method suggested in Tarbell's Notes. Questions on the book of Acts, Questions on the Pauline Epistles, and Written Work on such themes as The Cities of Acts, Paul's Fellow-workers, Paul's Enemies, The Character of Paul, Paul as a Missionary, and Paul as a Hero, should be assigned in advance and made the basis of the class period. There are tremendous possibilities in this review lesson for the wide-awake teacher.

I. Paul in Athens.—

1. God hath made of one blood all men, and all men are brothers in the sight of God. One of the fundamental principles of Christianity, then, is that all men live on brotherly terms.
2. There is instinctive in man that impulse to seek after God. The heathen unwittingly seeks after the God whom we know and worship.
3. Men are to be judged according to the light they have, but they are required to walk in the light they have.

II. Paul in Corinth.—

1. The central theme in the Christian message is that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God.
2. The truth about Jesus Christ sharply divides men.
3. God has faithful followers in the most unlikely places.

III. Paul Writes to the Corinthians.—

1. Christianity may be said to be the religion of love: (a) Love to God through Christ; (b) Love to man.
2. The law of love supercedes all other laws.
3. The more we love the more we become like God.

IV. Paul in Ephesus.—

1. Greed and selfishness find in Christianity a real menace.
2. Religion is often used as the basis for an appeal to unworthy things.

V. The Fight against Strong Drink.—

1. The Christian life is a constant and uncompromising warfare.
2. The Christian must be thoroughly armed with spiritual weapons.

VI. Paul's Farewell at Miletus.—

1. Happy is the man whose conscience bears testimony that he has done his work well.
2. Many of life's highest values consist in worthy friendships.
3. The faithful and unselfish Christian worker has an open door into the lives of those whom he has served.

VII. Paul's Arrest in Jerusalem.—

1. If a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed.
2. Religion may become an evil in the form of bigotry and prejudice.
3. It takes moral courage to bear witness for Jesus Christ.

VIII. Paul Before Felix.—

1. A man should strive to keep his conscience clear both before God and before men.
2. The truth finds out men in their inner lives.
3. Refusal to heed the truth hardens the heart.
4. Procrastination is not only the thief of time; it is the enemy of souls.

IX. Paul Before Agrippa.—

1. Heavenly visions are to be obeyed.
2. Happy is the man who is conscious that he is doing the will of God.
3. A righteous man is more powerful than an unrighteous king.

X. Paul's Voyage and Shipwreck.—

1. God strengthens those who call upon Him in humble trust.
2. A cool head often saves many lives.
3. He is a blessing indeed who can comfort and encourage men in the hour of danger and fear.

XI. Paul in Melita and Rome.—

1. All things work together for good to them that love God.
2. Men can rise above their circumstances.
3. Forced pauses in life are often the most fruitful periods for the spiritual life.
4. Tackle the hard thing first.

Some Worthy Qualities of Paul's Life.—

1. His supreme spirit of consecration.
2. His undivided loyalty to his work.
3. His comprehensive vision.
4. His indomitable purpose.
5. His Christian attitude toward his enemies.
6. His courage, both physical and moral.
7. His boundless enthusiasm.
8. His warm human spirit of sympathy and friendship.
9. His ready response to what he thought was the will of God.
10. His personal interest in his converts.
11. His love for his fellowmen.
12. His spirit of sacrifice.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

December 27, 1925.

Topic: "Press On!"—Phil. 3: 7-14.

Some Bible Hints.

One element of progress is letting go things that hinder us, laying aside weights. (V. 7.)

Do we prize the knowledge of Christ, and His companionship? If we do, we will seek to gain these things. (V. 8.)

As our physical powers grow weaker with age, our spiritual powers may grow stronger, making all life victorious. (V. 10.)

God has a plan for every one of us. We must try to see what it is and press on to obtain it fully. (V. 12.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

Press on to full fellowship with Christ, to be partakers of His power, sharers in His sufferings, doers of His work, that we may at last share His resurrection.

No matter how far we have advanced in the spiritual life, we must still press on, for there are heights we have not scaled, work we have not done, joys we have not reached.

Press on through difficulties. Do not grow discouraged. No matter what happens, you win if you persevere.

A Few Illustrations.

The pupil that labors to solve his problems unaided, gains a victory and makes progress which enables him to make still better progress later. Press on that you may be better able to press on yet further.

The mongrel's hold slips, but only a crowbar can pry loose the grip of a bulldog. That is the spirit that wins.

To Think About.

What progress have we made in the past year?

What better work can our society do this year than last?

What goals may we set for the coming year?

"I am afraid," the brave man said,
When in his strength arrayed
To do his duty to the end,
"Afraid to be afraid."

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide or Peloubets' Select notes, either or both, for the coming year, may be obtained through the office of The Christian Sun, 1536 East Broad Strreet, Richmond, Va. They are invaluable in preparing the Sunday School lesson. Order your copy now, price $2.00, each, postpaid.

The minutes of the various conferences will be published in the Annual as soon as is possible. In the mean time, the representatives of the churches should lay plans in accordance with what was done at conference. It is not necessary to wait, but go to work.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Does any Sun reader have copies of The Christian Annual for 1904 and 1905, either or both? If so, it will be a most helpful and generous donation if the same will be sent to Miss Louise Savage, Librarian, Elon College, N. C. By patient and persistent endeavor, Miss Savage now has in the library a complete file of the Annuals since 1870, with the exception of the two now asked for. The history and events that these Annuals carry are invaluable.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We are happy to state to you that our report this week carries us across the thirty thousand dollar mark. Our grand total for our report this week is $30,122.24. This carries us to the highest peak we have ever reached in a single year. Our final report for the year 1920, when we were building the "Baby Home," carried us up to $30,003.85, up to this year that had been the year that set the peak for the total collections for any one year. From this date last year, till the books closed for the year, we raised $3,907.34. Let's do a little better this year and make the grand total $35,000.00 for 1925.

Let every church that has not made its offering this year, take the offering and send it in and help make up this amount. Everybody help and let us make a grand rush for the final goal. Church offerings, Sunday School offerings, personal checks, payments on the new building can help us reach the goal.

Holy Neck Church, Holland, Va.; First Church, Norfolk, Va.; First Church, Durham, N. C., joined the "Banner List" this week, making their offering more than $100.00. How many will join this list next week?

"I AM NOT AT LEISURE."

I have read of one that presented Antipater, the king of Macedon, with a book that treated of Happiness. He refused it, saying, "I am not at leisure." Many have the Book by them, yea presented to them by Christ, that treats of everlasting happiness, but they slight the present. "I am not at leisure," say they. They have opportunity of hearing the Word opened on week days, as well as Sabbath days; but they are not at leisure. They have means of knowledge for hearing the same Word; but they are not at leisure. They have many precious seasons of grace, seasons of prayer, seasons of duty; but they are not at leisure. They take leisure to their own work, their worldly work, yea, for idle conversation; but they have no leisure for God's work, their soul's work, eternal work! Reader, have you leisure to be saved? or, are you willing to continue in the bustle of the world, neglect salvation, and be lost?—Ralph Erskin.

THE HISTORY OF CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS

LESSON: Matt. 1: 18-25.

There is a beginning of everything. We can say of everything "once upon a time." We are told that the first Christmas was celebrated in the time of Diocletian, the Roman Emperor, who persecuted the Christians, in the years 280-292. The first Christmas carol was sung in 1521 and was written by a man by the name of Warde. The first Christmas card was written about seventy-five years ago in London. It was an ordinary postal card sent to a friend with the simple message, "Merry Christmas."

The first Christmas tree was celebrated in the eighth century by St. Winfrid, a missionary to Scandanavia. It was the custom of the Druid priests to lead their people to the forest and under a big oak to worship their God and hold their festivities. On one of these occasions St. Winfrid followed them and cut down the oak and set up instead a fir tree, and said, "Here is the living tree, first it points to the sky and symbolizes man's upward look to God. Call it the tree of the Christ -child. Go no more into the forest for your feasts with their secret rites of shame, but keep them in your homes with laughter and song and love. The oak has fallen. The green fir tree remains for the birth-right of Christ." We have had the tree ever since.

There is also a reason for the decorations we use on our trees. Apples, balls, oranges, and other things round, represent the sun, symbolizing Jesus the Son. Lights, candles, etc., represent the light of the sun and symbolize the light of the world—Jesus. The tinsel and all of the shiny things represent the radiant light of the sun and symbolize the radiating light of the world—Jesus. The candy, the toys, and the gifts, represent the sacrifice of Christ and are a token of our sacrifice to Him. We see a cross on the tree—that represents the cross of Jesus and His sacrifice. I see a heart—that means His love. There is a mince pie for dinner. That typifies the rich gift of His love.

The first Santa Claus was St. Nicholas, Bishop of Myra. In the year 300 A. D., he, to do good to the poor, climbed to the top of a chimney and dropped a coin down the chimney, expecting it to fall on the hearth that the needy ones might get it. It happened to fall into an open stocking. And since that time the stocking has been hung for the gifts of Santa Claus, and God has blessed the world with someone from year to year to perpetuate the memory of St. Nicholas, and we have called him Santa Claus. These are some of the beginnings of our customs of Christmas.

Prayer.—Our Father, as we enter upon Christmas week, help us to put the true spirit in all our work and celebrations, and we pray Thee to increase that spirit in us until it permeates not only us but the whole world. May we all be joy-givers this week. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LESSON: Luke 1: 26-55.

There are many holidays which commemorate events of importance. There are birth-days of great men and nations, but one is different from all the rest. The birth of our Lord has had more to do with the history of the world than anything else in the world.

Although at first Christmas was celebrated on the sixth of January, and later changed to December 25th to coincide with the winter solstice (the returning of the sun to earth and coming spring typifying the coming spirit of the world), the time it took place is not important. That it is a fact is sufficient. The importance lies in the manifestation of God to the world in the flesh, that it is the fulfillment of prophecy, being what the world looked for for 4000 years previous.

How beautifully it touches the hearts of children! How it appeals to parents as a voice of God! What an opportunity it is for us to express our love in gifts and speech and worship.

It is proper that we should ring bells and sing carols and give gifts; send cards and write letters and go visiting. They all tell of Jesus' love—that He is the sin-bearer of the world. It is a witness that the coming king will call us to Himself and make eternity one glad glorious holy day to all of His followers.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, our Father, that we can understand these things and that we can make everything we do this week speak our love and devotion to our God. Forgive our sinful hearts and make our Christmas all that it should be to us ,and help us to use it right now and forever. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

IF CHRIST HAD NOT COME.

"If I had not come."—Jno. 15: 22.

Imagine it! Imagine a wedding without the bridegroom. Imagine a wedding feast stopped and the people turned to mourning, and the hearse at the door and hearts weeping.

If Christ had not come! Turn out the lights, darken the windows, shut the doors, do away with all the Christian literature, burn up the books, destroy the art, hush the music and the singing, silence those that play, dry up the voices of little children, take away the joy and the laughter, undo the noble past, trample under foot every proposal of peace, blight every hope of the future, stop good deeds, repeal all good laws, forget every good motive, bring on darkness, increase pride and vanity, jealousy and ill-will, and sorrows without hope; bring on sin, misery and shame, and hell on earth. What then can we whisper in the other's ear? What lamp can we light? What comfort can we give to those who are sick and bereaved? We could not even conduct a funeral.

But to us His coming is like the morning mountain glory of a rising sun held in the bondage of night—glorious splendor, light and life, fruit and happiness. Ours may be a hard task but the morning light transforms our burdens. As we walk in those foggy hours, we say, "O well, it will pass away when the sun is up." To those coming on behind us we can say, "Fear thou not when thou passest through the waters. I will be with thee. I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Prayer.—Our Father, give us new visions of the blessings of the coming of our Lord, new energies, new life, new impulses, new hopes, new ideas of good and of God and His world, new stars in the skies and new ambitions to attain them. May we dare always to do right for Christ's sake. May we lean on Thee and prove what is the acceptable and perfect will of God. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

JESUS WITH FOUR NAMES.

LESSON: Isa. 9: 2-7.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and his name shall be called, Wonderful Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

The joys of Christmas are really more than 2000 years old, dating away back to the above prophecy. These four names complete the full significance of all that Christ is to the world.

"Unto us a child is born." That is His humanity. "Unto us a son is given." That is the act of God. "And His name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor,"—that is His superior wisdom. Even as a child he amazed the world with His words. In the temple He astounded the doctors. In great gatherings, the multitudes marveled, for "never man spake like this man spake." His speeches radiated with vision and truth in unclouded beauty and compelled moral and spiritual certainty in undimmed authority.

"Mighty God." To His counsel He adds power. He not only legislates but He executes. He is the world's love and strength, conqueror and deliverer. His success is through unqualified right and conquering love. He touches tyranny and it crumbles, slavery and it vanishes, wrong and it falls.

Prayer.—Our Father, forbid that we shall forget Thee in our own puny successes, but cause us to know and acknowledge Thee that Thou art our strength and success. Today we give Thee the praise. Help us to make tonight and tomorrow, our Christmas, all it ought to be in our hearts and the lives of others. We ask it in His name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FATHER AND PRINCE OF PEACE."

"Everlasting Father."

We could never be satisfied with a Saviour who is only wisdom and strength. We are creatures of love and must have something to satisfy that love. Here we understand the incarnation. We can see the hand of God in the heavens, the mind of God in the earth, but nowhere can we see His glory except in the face of Jesus. "He that hath seen me hath seen the father."

"Prince of Peace." The song of the angels may be driven out by the din of war, marching of armies and the shedding of blood; by the burning of cities, ruining of homes and blighting of the beautiful; by weeping widows, fatherless children and starvation; but God does not fail. He is still the Prince of Peace when He is tried.

Man fails, force fails, nations fail, preparedness fails, governments fail, business and humanity fail; but "He will not fail until he hath set justice in the earth and the isles shall wait for his law." Wherever He is taken in, there is peace. He will convince the world by His wisdom, subdue it with His might, inspire it with His love, and bless it with His peace. He who rings bells of true joy, sings songs of true life and gives God the place of honor, is the one who knows most of and gets most out of Christmas.

OUR CHRISTMAS PRAYER.

Dear Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for another Christmas. We thank Thee that Thou makest us glad with a yearly remembrance of Thy dear Son, Jesus Christ the Saviour—of Thy love and Thy salvation. We thank Thee for the great joys that Thou dost bring the world with this season of the year and that thou hast spread it out over every nation and clime.

As Thou dost make glad the world, we pray Thee to bring peace to it—the peace which Christ can bestow, the true peace of God that passeth understanding. In spite of tribulations, give the people everywhere a keen consciousness of the peace we ought to have.

We pray Thee Lord to regard not our sins, but our humiliation and our prayers. Forgive and bless us. While we make merry on the outside, give the inward experience of love and harmony, and flood our souls with the light of Him who

"CHRISTMAS FAIRYLAND."

"Fairy-land is a magical place;
Built in a country fair,
Miles and miles from the highest point
Of the highest and brightest star—

There we live in the happiest way,
Busy the whole day through,
Planning numbers of pleasant things
That will happen some day to you!"

My, but I should love to play at being a Christmas Fairy, and live in such a beautiful place, like Fairyland, wouldn't you, dears? Lets do play it then, starting today.

How do you play? Keep your eyes, and your ears, and your hearts open, and you'll find out for yourselves!

"Oh, oh," I hear you all say, "I can't do that."

Yes, but listen, dears—Old Santa wants some helpers this year. So you Kiddie Korner Kiddies can be Santa's own helpers—if you will keep your ears and your eyes and your hearts open—and you'll know just what to do:

IT IS'NT A SECRET AT ALL!

"It's a maxim for great and for small,
And it isn't a secret at all—
It's the jolliest, easiest kind of a way
To make yourself happy this great holiday,
If ever you try it you're bound to succeed,
It's the one kind of magic you need—
It's for old and for young,
For great and for small:
And it isn't a secret at all!"

Say Kiddies, Santa Claus told me this week the whole secret of being happy this year was doing kindnesses to others and helping others to have a Merry Christmas.

And, dears, while we are helping those at home, let's not forget our dear Orphan Friends and our little Mountain Kiddies—they love to be happy too, same as you.

All love from,
YOUR EDITOR.

HOW GOD PDOTECTS BIRDS.

All the trees and little weeds in the deep woods were covered with snow. Softly the bushes rocked back and forth shaking the snow from their tiny branches. The birds sang a sweet song, as if to speak to the sunshine that came peeping through the trees.

It was a beautiful day, and, with their warm, feathery coats, the birds hopped about in the snow with no fear of the cold.

One would have thought it was the birds' Thanksgiving Day, for they all seemed so happy. They flew about from tree to tree and stopped to pick berries from the bushes. Often they flew to the very tiptop of a tree, held their heads up toward the sky and sang a beautiful song.

They were grateful to the heavenly Father for their warm coats and their food and His loving care.

One little robin sang louder than all the rest—all through the forest his song echoed. "Chirp-chirp, come to me," he sang, and all the birds flew to the tree where he sat.

"Why do you want us to come?" said the bluejay; I am going to take Mrs. Bluejay to find a new kind of berry."

"Oh, I know something lovely," sang the robin, "and you could never guess what it is. Oh, but you'll be happy when I tell you."

"Chick-a-dee-dee-dee, tell us about it," sang the Chick-a-dee.

Then they were all quiet, and the robin sang of a house at the edge of the forest where a little girl lived.

"Every morning," sang the robin, "I go there for my breakfast, and I'm going to take you with me. This morning I heard the little girl say: 'Maybe some more birds will come; little robin, won't you call them for their breakfast?"

Before the robin finished, each little head went up, and from each little throat came a song, clear and sweet, that rang through all the snow-covered forest.

"Chirp-chirp, follow me," sang the robin, and they all spread their wings and away they flew.

Sure enough, there was the house and the little girl, too, scattering bread crumbs on the white snow.

The proud robin flew to a branch of a tree and watched the chick-a-dees and the bluejays as they hopped about, picking up crumbs. What a good breakfast those birds had, and how they sang "Thank you," over and over again to the little girl.

"That's all right," said the little girl, "I want you to come again. If you will come every morning I will feed you."

"Thank you," sang the robin. "Thank you," sang the bluejay, and they flew away. Even after they had flown over the top of her house the little girl could hear a little echo of their song to the loving Father in heaven.—Edna Rowe.

SUNSET.

"The sun is sinking in the west,
The day is drawing to a close;
The birdies settle in their nest,
While all night long a cool breeze blows.

"The tiny flow'rets bow their heads,
The little lambs are in the fold;
The stars peep out, a watch to keep,
As they have done since ages old.

"The streams reflect the fading light,
The red and gold and purple bars,
That soon shall sink into the night—
Be lost beneath the watchful stars."

OUR FATHER.

"He who makes the pretty flowers,
He who makes the leafy bowers,
He who sends the warm spring showers,
Watches over all.
"Yes, He watches day by day,
Listens when we come to pray,
Guides us all along the way—
Watches, lest we fall."

DISQUALIFIED CRTICS.

Many of those who are criticising Christianity do not know what it is. The only way to know it in its essence is to experience it, and they have never experienced it. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

From the very beginning, Christianity has encountered the criticism of the unspiritual. Our time is in no way peculiar in this respect. We should not be upset by advehse criticisms of our religion. It only means that there are still men in the world who need it and have it not. Such men may yet be quickened and become ardent witnesses for the faith they are now trying to destroy. Let us pray for them rather than hate them. They may be sincere, but they are very ignorant.—Exchange.

set His life and soul to the harmony of heavenly music. Train our thoughts to justice and righteousness and brotherhood. Deepen within us the knowledge of the fact that peace and joy comes from within, and that we must be so trained. Give us the Christ life more and more, that we may have the same power that He had when He overcame the world—that we may overcome sin through His strength. Give us the peace of life that is radiant with love and good will, that strengthens our shoulders for the tasks and that mounts toward His level.

We thank Thee that thou hast drawn no circles and built no walls, but that Thy gracious invitation is for all. Give us the moral and spiritual courage to attain it. Again we pray for forgiveness of our sins, and for the gift of His life to abide in our hearts, the most satisfying experience known to man. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE MEANING OF IMMORTALITY.

"The Lord knoweth the days of the perfect; and their inheritence shall be forever."—Psa 37: 18.

This "hath been manifested by the appearing of our Saviour Christ Jesus, who abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel"—II. Tim. 1: 10, and "righteousness into (shall be) eternal life."—Matt. 25: 26.

The word "Immortality" sounds good. It slips easily. What does it mean? It means "Completeness." Like the rose bush: first the leaf, then the bud, and then the flower—that is completeness. This is a long process. We wait patiently for it all the year and sometimes several years, until one morning we find the flower in full bloom on the stem. In its completeness, dignity and beauty, we forget the pains of waiting. The completion of our soul is a life-time process of righteousness which has its reward in perfection—a full grown blossom of immortality.

Prayer.—Our Father, in this world of misery and sin, we look for another—a crown of glory—where we shall be free and perfect and like Thee. Help us in our efforts now to lay ourselves on the altar for this glory. Grant this in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE MEANING OF IMMORTALITY,

LESSON: Luke 2: 1-20.

So we are in the making for perfection, if we are doing the things that make perfect followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a long time coming about, but it is coming. This life has in this way been called a vestibule of a glorious temple beyond. All the way we are preparing to enter that temple. The process is but the promise of the full grown flower beyond, and the blessed assurance is only in Jesus.

A ship-wrecked mariner does not care how he gets ashore, so he gets there. All the pain and suffering and anguish of this world is that crucible of the process. It is but the image of the earthy, and "as we have borne the image of the earthy, so shall we bear the image of the heavenly." Thus it does not matter here. We can bear it all for the sake of the heavenly. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

Prayer.—Our Father, fix our minds and hearts on Thee and Thy glory of the future, and make us willing to endure all in this life for the sake of perfection and happiness in glory. So we dedicate our lives to Thee this day. In Christ's name. Amen.

OBITUARIES.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

On October 5th, the spirit of J. L. Rawles took its flight to that beautiful home prepared for all those that love and serve God. He was greatly afflicted, but bore his suffering with Christian fortitude and was resigned to God's will.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well;

Second, that with deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, we commend them to the Lord, who will comfort their wounded hearts and when their final summons may come, they may meet each other around God's white throne.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of Liberty Spring Christian Church, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

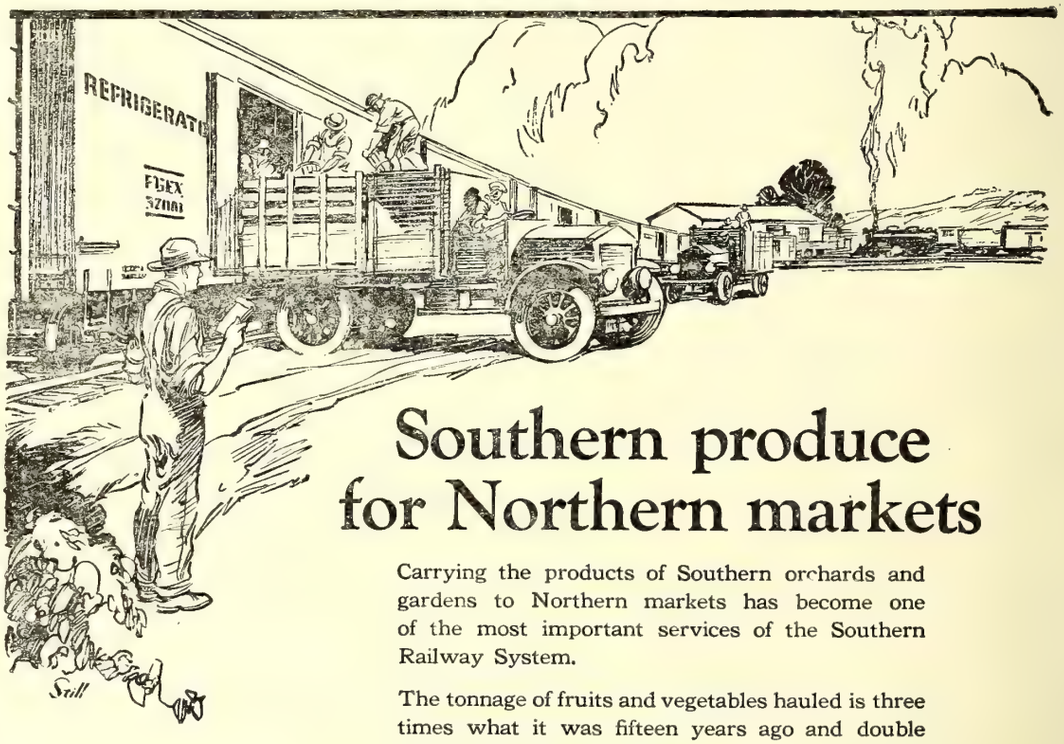
SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM



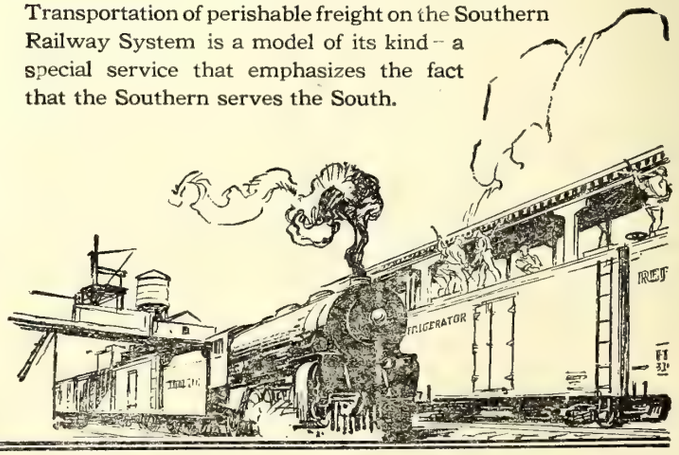
Southern produce for Northern markets

Carrying the products of Southern orchards and gardens to Northern markets has become one of the most important services of the Southern Railway System.

The tonnage of fruits and vegetables hauled is three times what it was fifteen years ago and double what it was ten years ago, and now equals the cotton tonnage.

Building up this great market for Southern produce, which increases the prosperity of the South, would not have been possible without dependable transportation, and this the Southern has provided.

Transportation of perishable freight on the Southern Railway System is a model of its kind – a special service that emphasizes the fact that the Southern serves the South.



Southern Railway System last year spent in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

THE KNEELING CAMEL.

The camel at the close of day
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off,
And rest again.

My soul, thou too shouldst to thy knees
When daylight draweth to a close,
And let thy Master lift thy load
And grant repose.

Else how canst thou tomorrow meet
With all tomorrow's work to do,
If thou thy burden all the night
Dost carry through?

The camel kneels at break of day
To have his guide replace his load,
Then rises up anew, to take
The desert road.

So thou shouldst kneel at morning's dawn
That God may give thee daily care,
Assured that He no load too great
Will make thee bear.

PAYNE.

On November 1, 1925, Linville Christian Church, of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, lost its last charter member in the death of Mrs. Rebecca Ann Payne. She was born February 8, 1845, making her, age at the time of her death, eighty years, eight months and twenty-three days.

Not only was Sister Payne a charter member of Linville Christian Church and the last one, all of the others having preceded her to the glory land; but, when the church was organized her name was the second one to be entered on the register. She united with this church while Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., was pastor, or about fifty-eight years ago. All of her subsequent life has been one of consistent Christian devotion and consecrated service.

The only relatives who survive her are one son, three daughters, and several grandchildren and great- grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted and the interment made at the Linville Christian Church, November 3, 1925. At her own request made several years ago, Elder D. W. Miller of Broadway, Va., a minister of the Church of the Brethren and a friend of the family, preached the funeral sermon. He was assisted in the services by her pastor, the writer.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

REYNARD.

Henry Caspar Lee Reynard was born October 5, 1863, and died November 17, 1925. He was 62 years, 1 month, and 12 days old. It was my pleasure to receive Brother Reynard into the church at Palmyra several years ago. Most of his time since then has been spent with some of his children entirely away from the community, and consequently I had not seen much of him, but I am told that he lived a faithful, Christian life, until death called him higher.

Funeral services were conducted from the U. B. Church in Edinburg, and the body was laid to rest in the cemetery not far away. He is survived by eight children.

A. W. ANDES.

SMITH.

Mrs. Abner Smith died November 21, 1925, being about 80 years of age. She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, 8 children, 3 boys and 5 girls, 46 grandchildren, 14 great grandchildren, besides many other relatives and a host of friends.

Burial was at Hines' Chapel, where she had been a life-long member, having joined the church early in life. The abundant floral offering and the very large attendance at the burial attested the very high esteem in which she was held. May the heavenly Father comfort the bereaved.

OUR FIRST CHRISTMAS GIFT.

"Now it came to pass in those days, there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment made when Quirinius was governor of Syria. And all went to enroll themselves, every one to his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judæa, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and family of David; to enroll himself with Mary, who was betrothed to him, being great with child. And it came to pass, while they were there, the days were fulfilled that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son; and she wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.

"And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flock. And an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people: for there is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. And this is the sign unto you: Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth peace, good will toward men."

—Luke 2: 1-14.

NOTES-PERSONALS

THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for all of its readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

The Richmond Sunday School will be six years old on the 3d of January. The school is in good shape and is growing steadily.

Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, pastor of our Danville Church, also pastor of Palm Street, Greensboro, will observe March as Mission Month, as voted by conference. He writes, "I heartily approve the plan of Mission Month. We can do His will only as we are missionary."

Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., writes: "My work is going fine at Rose Hill Church. The Sunday School has doubled in attendance. Twenty-nine at prayer-meeting last week. Congregations increasing at every service. We have several members here who tithe. I am planning to put on Mission Month as per decision of my conference."

A most happy service was reported held in Holland, Va., Christian Church on Sunday, December 13th. The last dollar of indebtedness against the church was paid and everyone who had been on the note to help negotiate a loan, had some part in burning said note. Congratulations to Pastor Lightbourne and his happy people.

The entertainment given on last Wednesday evening by the young people of the First Church, was much enjoyed by those attending. The young folks later repaired to the Sunday School room in the basement, where Santa Claus had prepared a Christmas treat that was a delight to all. Mrs. W. I. Wilkins and her committee are to be commended for their work.

Since the last issue of THE SUN came from the press, several ministers have been among the callers at the office. Drs. J. H. Lightbourne and N. G. Newman, of Holland, Va., and Rev. W. T. Scott, who is travelling for Elon College. Dr. W. W. Staley was also in the city, but paid his visit by telephone. We were glad to have these visitors and were sorry that Dr. Staley did not get time to call in person.

Rev. H. E. Truitt, Waverly, Va., gives his plan for Mission Month: "I have planned my program, sermons, mission study, and at least one mission pageant during February, leading up to the offering which we will take." It may be said that not a few pastors plan to have a pageant at some time during Mission Month. This is a very happy suggestion. This can easily be done, particularly in those churches where there is a Woman's or Young People's Missionary Society who will sponsor the pageant. Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the Franklin, Va., Church, is among the number who contemplate a pageant. The pageant properly presented, is one of the powerful engines of missionary inspiration and aspiration.

Dr. A. E. Kemp, pastor of the First Christian Church, Troy, Ohio, from which the funeral of the late-lamented Sister Olive G. Williams was held, in acknowledging a telegram sent by the Secretary for the Southern Convention Mission Board, very graciously writes: "I wish, dear brother, to thank you as Miss Williams' pastor and for her. It surely was very kind of you to express the sympathy of your Mission Board so splendidly. Your telegram along with one from Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, was read at the funeral services, and added to the fine spirit of one of the most impressive funeral services that I have been permitted to witness. Thank you again for your kind remembrance and wishing for the Southern Convention Mission Board the very best possible blessing, Yours in Christ." Dr Minton writes that the service in Miss Williams' honor was among the most impressive and appropriate he had ever attended. Surely a noble Christian soul has winged its way to glory and leaves us of earth bereft of a noble friend and an unselfish worker on the Mission field.

Many, many friends will be wishing Uncle Wellons a hearty and happy New Year. Here is hoping and believing that more than one hundred New Year's cards or notes of veneration will reach him on or before January 1, 1926, when he, according to his calendar, rounds out his one hundredth anniversary. It is not given to many to live a century, and while a hundred or more may write him affectionate greetings, thousands will think of him affectionately. What a blessing in the world this man of God has been in his day and generation. On his one hundredth anniversary, he is to preach in the auditorium at Elon College at 10:30 A. M. Friends everywhere are invited to be present. Hon. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in President Wilson's Cabinet, is to be present and bring greetings and a word of cheer on behalf of the host of friends in this and other States. It promises to be a notable occasion and the exercises will no doubt be most memorable and impressive. Let all SUN readers who can do so come to the College on that day to cheer the heart of our beloved Centenarian. Those writing should address, Rev. J. W. Wellons, Masonic Home, Greensboro, N. C. At this writing, Uncle Wellons is getting along nicely and from all indications, gives promise of going far beyond the century mark in the span of his beneficient and beautiful Christian life.—J. O. A.

INGRAM AND PLEASANT GROVE.

This is indeed a great and good people. They have done everything possible, it seems, to make us comfortable and happy since we moved on the field. Both churches have "pounded" us, and this helped in a most substantial way.

The work at Ingram is in a very prosperous condition, having a good, live Sunday School, and the attendance at the church services is good. They are a most attentive and appreciative people.

The work at Pleasant Grove is going nicely, but not so well as we could wish. The church, being off the main highway, is handicapped during the winter months. The Sunday School is small, but active, and is doing good work under Brother George Talbert, its superintendent. The Aid and Missionary Society is active and holds regular meetings. We organized a Christian Endeavor Society sometime ago, but find it hard to keep it going, as most of our capable leaders are away teaching or attending school.

Pray for us that we may be given the wisdom and strength to do our Master's work as it should be done; and that the Kingdom of our Lord may come into the hearts of our people in this field.

With kind regards and praying that God may richly bless you in your endeavors.

A PASTOR TO HIS PEOPLE.

Dear Church Member:

Why is it that out of Four Hundred members we only have One Hundred Forty at church? Within the last six weeks, I have visited in the homes of nearly Three Hundred of our members, and to the others I am going just as fast as I can, and yet not nearly half of our folks are coming to God's House! I cannot believe it is because I have not visited you and invited you to come.

Nor do I believe it is because you do not like your pastor. I am sure it is not that. For why should you not like him? Wherever he meets you he feels a fellowship and understanding that gives him confidence in your faith in him. He loves his work and he loves his people, and is trying to be of uplifting service. He loves and honors every man, woman and child in his church, and he believes it is mutual.

The worship hours are certainly carefully and prayerfully planned. They are sweet, dignified, worthy and worshipful. It is true we have no paid singers, but I think both the singing of the choir and congregation is excellent. A spirit of genuine reverence and prayer pervades the entire service. Jesus Christ is preached as the world's Redeemer. And a carefully prepared Bulletin is presented to each worshipper. It surely is not the service that keeps folks away.

For instance, this coming Sunday, there will be two especially fine services. The morning service will be the observance of the Lord's Supper, and a devotional address by me on "How John Loved Jesus." In the evening at 7:30, there will be a special sermon, "Your Place in the Father's World," and some of the Scripture references will be: "Hold that fast which thou hast that no man take thy crown"; "Jesus, when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom, remember me"; and "Who knowest whether thou art come to the Kingdom for such a time as this?" Do you wish to be lifted out of your daily trials and be given a fresh and vigorous hope in God, then come with us Sunday, and we will do thee good.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

Norfolk, Va.

(This letter fell into our hands, and seems so suggestive, timely and interesting, we pass it on to SUN readers. Needless to say that the Sunday following there was a packed house.—Editor.)

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Just a word to you who have paid your subscription recently: The label on your SUN will be advanced to the correct date on the first issue in January, 1926. Be sure to look at that label and see that proper credit has been given you The greatest care is taken to see that this is done, but all of us are human, and a mistake is possible. And now just a word to our other friends: Look at the label on your paper now, and if you are very far in arrears—say a year or more—it will make our Christmas happier, and yours too, if you will pay the arrearage up to date—or better still, a year in advance. We would like to change in arrears, it will make our Christmas happier the date on your label the first issue of the year. And you might order THE SUN sent to some dear friend for the coming year. You know, those who do not take their church paper are really the ones who need to take it most.

NOTICE.

If any of our churches in the Southern Convention are without pastors, I shall be pleased to furnish a list of available ministers with whom correspondence would be invited. I shall be glad to furnish this information as some of our willing and able pastors are ready to take work where needed.

Mission Secretary.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

"CHRISTMAS."

The story of how Christmas began, as told by Luke, has never been surpassed in literature. If words superior to these (on the first page) can be found for the family on Christmas morning, then let the reader find them and present them.

In the light of this epochal event in history, the following superb presentation by Joseph Fort Newton, in The Atlantic Monthly for December is worthy of reading in connection with the above on Christmas morning:

"Only God could have thought of Christmas. Its beauty is beyond the wit of mortals, so simple in its sublimity, so homey yet so heavenly. On a tapestry woven of stable-straw and starlight, it unveils a picture to soften and purify the heart, and to bring us back from a wisdom that is not wise, because it is hard, unholy, and unhopeful. Man would have made it a pageant, its stage directions as follows:

"Array of Great Ones,
The Army marches by,
Fanfare of Trumpets,
Enter the King.

"Our pageants pass and fade, but God works in slower and more secret ways. He blows no trumpet; He rings no bell. He begins within, seeking His ends by quiet growth, and by a strange power that men call weakness, a wisdom mistaken for folly. Man has one answer to every problem—force; but that is not the way of God. He did not send an army to conquer the world; He sent a Babe to make a woman cry. The divine method is different:

"The crowded Inn,
A Mother and a Babe,
No Cradle but a Manger,
A man stunned by wonder,
A wandering Star.

"Such wisdom bends the knee; such beauty breaks the heart—and mends it. It is a scene to sanctify the world, as if to teach us that God enters the life of man by lowly doors, attended by starry ideals and simple shepherd sentiments—'one of the children of the year.' They are wise men who bow at such a shrine, linking a far-off pilgrim star with the cradle of a little Child. By such faith men are truly wise, knowing that no hope is too high, no dream too holy to be fulfilled—even the hope and dream of 'peace on earth among men of good will.'"

Arranged by J. O. A.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

Merry Christmas! That is my sincere wish for all who read these lines. It isn't hard to say "Merry Christmas," and yet, if one says it as a sincere expression of his heart's desire for another, it means a lot. Christmas is God's wish for happiness to all mankind. It tells of "the good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people."

The Christmas Spirit is the sincere wish of the heart for the joy of others. And when this spirit fills one's heart, one cannot think evil of another. One cannot harbor a grudge in his heart against another. One cannot be envious of another. One cannot be selfish. One cannot be unbrotherly toward any one. The Christmas spirit creates the beautiful harmony of life. It fills the soul with the melody of love. It makes one forget the disorders of hum-drum life." It brings to earth the blessing of heaven—"peace and good-will to men."

A Spirit so powerful, a Spirit so helpful, a Spirit so divine, must be the Spirit of God himself. The many expressions of human love coming from the hearts of men and women and little children during the Christmas Season are the evidence of God's Spirit in human life. Love is always wanting to give. Love always wants to bring joy to the hearts of others. Love always wants to serve, always wants to help, always wants to cheer. And God is Love. So whatever desire we have to bring joy to some other life—the life of a sister or brother; a mother or father; a wife or a husband; a daughter or a son; a friend or neighbor; whatever desire we have to bring joy to any life is evidence of that much of the Spirit of God in our lives.

Christmas is God's declaration that we ought to have His Spirit, the Christmas Spirit, in our lives every day of the year. The Christmas Spirit should not die in our hearts with the passing of Christmas, for the Christmas Spirit is the spirit of love, and good will to both friend and foe—the spirit that can make every day a day of glory to God and peace, fraternity and good-will to men.

"The other poet" has expressed the true Christmas Spirit, the Spirit of Christ whose birth the day commemorates, and in "the other poet's" lines, each of us should find the expression of the highest and noblest ideals we have cherished for ourselves and our friends in our best moments:

"'Tis only a half truth the poet has sung
Of the 'house by the side of the way,'
Our Master had neither a house nor a home,
But he walked with the crowd day by day,
And I think when I read of the poet's desire,
That a house by the road would be good;
But the service is found in its tenderest form
When we walk with the crowd in the road.

"So I say let me walk with the men in the road,
Let me seek out the burdens that crush;
Let me speak a kind word of good cheer to the weak
Who are falling behind in the rush.
There are wounds to be healed, there are breaks we must mend,
There's a cup of cold water to give;
And the man in the road by the side of his friend
Is the man who is helping others to live.

"I could not remain in the house by the road
And watch as the toilers go on,
Their faces beclouded with pain and with sin,
So burdened their strength nearly gone,
I'll go to their side, I'll speak in good cheer,
I'll help them to carry their load;
And I'll smile at the man in the house by the way,
As I walk with the crowd in the road.

"Out there in the road that goes by the house,
Where the poet is singing his song,
I'll walk and I'll work midst the heat of the day,
And I'll help falling brothers along—
Too busy to live in the house by the way,
Too happy for such an abode,
And my heart sings its praise to the Maker of all,
Who is helping me serve in the road."

"BUILDING IN 1926."

By every promise, prophecy and precept, 1926 is to be an epochal year in the annals of our Christian Church. The sky is clear, the weather is inviting, times are favorable, circumstances are auspicious.

Men and Millions Movement gave an impact to our Church interests and enterprises on all hands. Elon College arose sphinx-like from her own ashes, which in buildings and equipment today equals the best on any campus of a church institution anywhere to be found. Our Christian Orphanage, having paid all previous indebtedness, has erected an additional building, which is the third large brick structure to house its growing constituency. Scores of churches have improved their plants, many buildings have gone up at tremendous cost. And now the missionary challenge comes as it never came before, and the conferences have prepared and provided for it.

Nineteen Hundred and Twenty Six is to open up in our borders and throughout all our churches with a constructive program for missionary awakening and missionary endeavor. As one pastor, in a recent letter puts it, "I do not see why 'Mission Month' was put off until February or March, as we should open the year with a clarion call to missionary vision and missionary activity. However, my churches will abide the decision of conference and observe 'Mission Month,' but I shall preach and teach and talk and work for Missions from now until Missionary Month is over and the free will offering in all my churches shall have been taken."

God has ever poured out his blessings in rich abundance on those who have given themselves unreservedly to lengthening their cords and strengthening their stakes. His guiding hand has always directed those who undertook great things for God, and then expected great things of God.

So in all our Christian Churches, on the opening weeks of 1926, we shall talk and preach and pray and give for Kingdom enlargement, for world-wide evangelism, for winning the unsaved to Christ and for sending the gospel to those who need it most because they have never had it. If there is, as there should be, a genuine missionary awakening throughout the length and borders of our churches, in the early months of 1926, it takes neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet to tell that this shall be the most memorable year in our annals and the years to come will reveal the wisdom of appointing a "Mission Month" and of making an attempt, on the part of all pastors and churches, to co-operate through His great name in carrying out this program for Christ and the Kingdom. Our Christian Church will greet and embrace 1926 with open arms, glad heart, glorious expectancy, and a courageous readiness to sacrifice and to save.

PLANS FOR "MISSION MONTH."

Responses from pastors and delegates attending our annual conferences, indicate a great desire and determination to make "Mission Month" an epoch in our church history. Eastern Virginia Churches will observe February, those of the other conferences will observe March. From suggestions received, the following plans seem to be those in the minds of pastors and people.

1st. In city churches where there are services every Sunday, a three service program in many instances is anticipated. First the pastor will preach on Missions, emphasizing the need of missionary emphasis and study, also the present emergency situation, outlining the program to be followed. At this service, the speaker or speakers for the following Sunday will be announced. In some instances two or three interested persons in the congregation will be selected to have charge of the services the following Sunday. In some instances an invited speaker from another congregation will speak on Missions. On this second Sunday of the program, three or four young people will be appointed and given the names of all the members of the church and those usually attending the services. Each of these young people will be given sufficient envelopes to give one to each name on his or her list, with the suggestion that the envelope be returned the following Sunday containing the offering.

On the following Sunday the offering will be after the pastor shall have explained the need and urged all present to make as liberal offering as possible. The offering will then be taken in the usual way.

One pastor, in whose church the Budget System is strictly adherred to, says he will use the following plan: "I now think we will put on an educational program during the month of February, culminating in a pageant near the last of the month, with the understanding that the Mission end of the envelope offering and the special offering at the pageant, go as our special for the Emergency Fund. It seems to me that this will keep us with the Budget System and at the same time enter into the program of the conference." This certainly seems a fine program to follow where the Budget System is in practice.

In churches where there is preaching twice a month, the first Sunday of "Mission Month," according to the purposes of many, will be used by announcements and sermon to lay the matter of Missions and the need of the present emergency before the entire congregation. At this first service a group of three or four will be appointed and given the names of the church membership and a packet of envelopes sufficient to give one to each member. The Every Member Canvass will be made on the first Sunday or during the week following it. At the second service, two weeks from the first, the speaker or speakers appointed and announced by the pastor at the first service, will at this second service have charge of the program. If there are three speakers, each one will be allowed ten minutes. After this presentation by speakers appointed by the pastor, and after the appeal and explanation by the pastor, the offering will be taken in the usual way.

In churches where there is preaching but once a month, many pastors anticipate preaching on Missions on a Sunday prior to "Mission Month" and at that service appoint a committee for the Every Member Canvass, giving to the committee, as in the two cases above, a packet of envelopes sufficient to give one to every member of the congregation. As soon after this service as possible, the committee appointed by the pastor will endeavor to place an envelope in the hands of everyone interested with the urgent request that he or she carry the envelope to church on next preaching day with as liberal offering as possible. On the day the offering is made, some pastors anticipate having an invited speaker preach or that they themselves will make an explanation and appeal for a liberal offering for the Emergency Fund.

In each and every case there seems to be two essential features, without which the church can hardly hope to make the day a successful one.

1st. A special missionary service, laying before the congregation the program of our Lord as contained in Matthew 26: 19-20, or Mark 16: 15.

2nd. The appointment of a committee to make the Every Member Canvass with envelopes given to each member of the church and congregation. So far as is known, these two items are in the minds and plans of all who purpose to make the services effectual.

Many pastors have written that they will vary their program to suit local needs and conditions, but all anticipate the heartiest co-operation and a most worthy desire to make the month memorable in the service of our church and to our Lord.

"NOBLEMEN" AND "NOBLE LADIES" ONLY.

No doubt many SUN readers are unaware that less than four centuries ago our ancestors—unless they belonged to the "Nobles"—were not allowed, by legal authority in England, to read the Bible. Writing from Canton, China, on November 25th, 1919, Robert Morrison, who had just finished translating our Bible into Chinese, said:

"I trust that the gloomy darkness of pagan scepticism will be dispelled by the dayspring from on high, and that the gilded idols of Buddha, and the numberless images which fill the land will one day assuredly fall to the ground, before the force of God's Word, as the idol Dagon fell before the ark.

"These are my anticipations, although there appears not the least opening at present. A bitter aversion to the name of our blessed Saviour, and to any book which contains His name or His doctrine, is felt and cherished. However, that does not induce me to despair. I think of Britain, what she was, and what she now is, in respect to religion. It is not 300 years since national authority said, that 'the Bible should not be read openly in any church (by the people), nor privately by the poor'; that only 'noblemen and gentlemen, and noble ladies and gentlewomen, might have the Bible in their houses.' I remember this, and cherish hope for China." J. O. A.

A BIRTHDAY GIFT.

One of our splendid Christian woman (may our dear Lord multiply her kind in the earth!) writing a most kindly personal letter to the Secretary of Missions, closes with this sentence, which reveals the true Christmas spirit:

"The Lord knows how badly this money for Missions is needed, and I find it in my power to give my Saviour a Birthday Gift to help carry on the work that He loved best. I am thrice happy to have it to give, especially on His anniversary. He gave it to me, and I gladly give it back to Him. Am sending Cashier's Check" (for $40.00).

We wish every line that this good friend (the wife of one of our hardest working and most self-denying ministers) wrote, could be given to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but it is personal, and we are not at liberty to print it. A Birthday Gift to our Lord for Missions! That strikes the Editor as the most fitting gift that we can make at this Christmas time. J. O. A.

CONFERENCES OF COLORED PERSONS.

(Reprint from Christian Annual, 1875.)

The North Carolina Conference was organized in the City of Raleigh in 1866, and was, perhaps, the first conference of any denomination, composed wholly of colored persons, organized in the South after the close of the war and the emancipation of the colored race. Rev. W. B. Wellons, D. D., President of the General Christian Convention, and Rev. H. B. Hayes and Rev. J. W. Wellons were present to aid in the organization of the conference. Rev. Wm. M. Hayes was the first President.

The Western North Carolina Conference met in the city of Raleigh, N. C., on the 4th of November, and the session was a profitable one, but the proceedings have not yet reached us, and we can give no particulars. Their next session will be held in Plymouth, N. C.

The Virginia Conference met at Providence, in Norfolk County, on the 23d of October, and had a good session. Rev. R. C. Tuck was with them one day, and assisted them. The next session will be held at Antioch, Isle of Wight County, Va.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference held its annual session at New Berne, in September.

The Colored conferences will publish their proceedings together. We are unable to give the statistics or the names and addresses of the preachers.

The three conferences number about forty ministers, and about fifty-five or sixty churches.

The visits of the white ministers to their annual meetings are highly appreciated.

(NOTE.—The above, printed more than half a century ago, seems to indicate another particular in which the Christian Church has pioneered.—Editor.

BASIS OF CHRISTIAN UNITY.

John Wesley, the father and founder of Methodism, did not take steps to build another denomination or start another branch of the Church. As is well known, he remained a member of the established church, but those who followed him built up what this great man of God had begun and the denominations which grew out of his life and labors have in many instances gone far of the mark aimed at by their leader. Wesley wanted Christian unity and laid down the following as the basis of that unity:

"I will not quarrel with you about opinions. Only see that your heart is right toward God; that you know and love the Lord Jesus Christ; that you love your neighbor and walk as your Master walked, and I desire no more. Let my soul be with these Christians, wheresoever they are and whatsoever opinions they are of. Whosoever thus doeth the will of my Father in Heaven, the same is my brother and sister."

This issue of THE SUN is No. 52, and is the closing number of the year. Volume LXXVIII, No. 1, will appear on January 7, 1926. Meantime we wish you a very happy New Year's Day.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Nothing has done so much to improve human character, social relations, commercial business, and civil government, as the birth, life, ministry, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. His birth opened a new world for womanhood and babyhood. Ages had been hard on woman. Only a very few outstanding women appear on the pages of history, until the angel said to Mary: "Blessed art thou among women,"—Luke 1: 28 and 42. From that moment until this, there has been a rising tide of woman's influence among the nations; and we are not at the end of her sway. Every age of this rising tide has made a better world.

Baby never had a fair chance until Isaiah wrote, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder,"—9: 6; and, later, when the angel said unto the shepherds, "Unto you is born this day, in the City of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2: 11. That promise and that declaration opened up a new world for babyhood. No one would have even thought to say, "The world advances on the feet of childhood," had it not been for the Babe of Bethlehem; but no one can stay the advancing tide of babyhood. Christmas started with the song of angels, the finding of the Babe in the manger, and the visit, worship, and contribution of the wise men. The echo of multitudes of the heavenly host, with the angel, praising God, and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," on that Holy Night, lingers still in Christmas Carols and great Anthems of praise. A few intellectuals waste time in discussing the Virgin Birth; but Christmas comes on apace and millions of angels in human form go forth to fill babyhood and childhood with inexpressible joy, and to smooth the wrinkles and cares of age. The hush of Christmas night is broken at early dawn by the hosannas of infant voices and the chatter of happy tongues.

Christmas does not stop with happy children and busy women, but it enters the big world of business and makes all take notice. Walk the streets and behold the store windows in their richest and most beautiful displays. Enter the post-office and see the busy men and the anxious crowds. Go to the express offices and see the crowded trucks and busy men. Step into the shops and mingle with the throngs looking, talking, buying, and hastening out with their presents for loved ones. Mills stop, business goes on.

The Public School pauses in honor of Christmas, and it ought to know it would die but for children and the Bible who called it into being. To shut the Bible out of the Public Schools is to shut out its founder and to deprive the children of their due. Bank the fires in the great industrial plants, cut off the electric power, close the office, leave the sheep on the hillside, go to the Manger, the true Cradle of Liberty, the fountain of Salvation, and listen to the angels who speak to the soul. Grandma is quiet, but memory blushes with joy. Childhood is noisy as birds with music that fills the house. The busy man rests. The busy woman smiles. Home, sweet Home is filled with peace. What will it be when Christ comes again? We will wait and watch.

ELON LETTER.

Those who were present at the Elon College Commencement in 1925, will recall the glowing compliment paid our college by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary of the Association of American Colleges.

Dr. Kelly has just conferred upon us two other signal honors. He has invited Prof. S. A. Bennett to write an article for Christian Education, describing the program of leadership which is being conducted here. Prof. Bennett very modestly gave as the title of his article "The Mooney Christian Education Building." However, when Dr. Kelly edited this article for his magazine, he gave it the title in solid capitals as follows: "CHRISTIAN EDUCATION COMES INTO ITS OWN." In addition to that, Dr. Kelly offered the college the privilege of using the November, 1925, issue of Christian Education as a regular Elon College Bulletin. The college accepted this offer and mailed out a thousand copies to our trustees, ministers, and alumni. If other persons desire a copy of this bulletin, so long as they last it will be supplied free.

The other kindness that Dr. Kelly has conferred is in his latest book entitled: "Tendencies in College Administration." This book gives pictures of significant college buildings in the country. There are forty of these college buildings in the United States given in this book and in addition to this, one in France, and he has included among this forty, on page 90 of this book, a beautiful view of our Christian Education Building. This book may be purchased from the Science Press, Lancaster, Pa., for $1.50.

I wish to quote a paragraph from this book:

"Every college is a benevolent institution. While the colleges are increasing their charges to the student, there is little likelihood that a college can be made to pay. To put the charges on a paying basis would be to exclude some of the most able and promising students simply because they are poor, and this no college wishes to do. They prefer themselves to assume the role of beggars and be continually passing the hat for endowment, buildings, equipment, current expenses. State institutions prefer to bombard legislatures for increasing appropriations. In some form, society makes up the deficit."

In this connection, it should be said that every time Elon College adds a student it must find an income from generous gifts or from endowment amounting to $117.18, in order to balance accounts. This is why the State of North Carolina through its Department of Public Instruction and the Southern Association of Colleges have made it necessary for Dr. Walters and Brother Scott to be in the field at this time raising money for the benefit of Elon College. We could cut down our student enrollment to one-half and perhaps get by, but the Christian Church is not a half-way group of Christian workers. They have always wanted to render their full service for the Kingdom and there is no service so valuable and so necessary for the church to render now as the service which inevitably inheres in the maintenance of Christian institutions of higher learning. President Coolidge has said that religion and education based on religion are the hope of our country and, in this judgment, President Coolidge is eminently wise. The hope of the Christian Church resides in her colleges. We must rally to Dr. Walters and Brother Scott in their work, and this "must" is all imperative from which there is no escape.

The first Sunday in January, or the nearest preaching Sunday thereto, has been designated as Elon Day, on which our ministers are requested to preach on Christian Education and to lead their congregations in public prayer for Elon. The only way that we shall succeed in our efforts to maintain our college, is to pray for it, which in turn will lead us to give for it. In the name of Him who gave Himself for us I call upon our people to pray for Elon and to give for its support and I am especially happy to be able to do this at that season of the year which marks His advent into the world.

VALLEY LETTER.

After an intensive revival meeting campaign, I am glad to be at home again for a little rest and study during the winter months. I have been blessed with good health during the fall, and have been able to keep right on with my work with only two nights off since September 24th.

On that date I began the meeting at Mayland. The spirit of co-operation was fine, and the congregations were large. Rev. R. P. Crumpler preached several nights to good acceptance. The Cadle Crusaders also rendered valuable assistance on several occasions. The Young People's Bible Class from Linvelle, and the Unity Chorus from Mayland Brethren Church sang at two services each, much to the enjoyment of all. There were eight conversions during the meeting, and two united with the church there.

My next meeting was at Timber Ridge. Rev. R. P. Crumpler rendered valuable assistance there also, during part of the meeting. The weather was unfavorable much of the time there, and the congregation hardly up to the average. There were four conversions, and all united with the church.

From Timber Ridge I went to Leaksville and began a meeting there. We had good congregations, good interest, four conversions and five additions to the church.

My next meeting was at Newport. Here the congregations were fine. There were eight conversions and nine additions to the church. Newport has recently made some much-needed improvements in the church building. They have removed the plaster from overhead, placed a nice ceiling there, painted the walls, and put in electric lights.

The visible results of my meetings this fall have not been up to those of former years, yet I feel that my conscience is clear and I have done my best. I shall have three meetings to hold in the spring.

Our one-day school of missions, held at Mt. Olivet (R.) Church, was not quite so large as we had hoped for, but the program was of a high order. Dr. W. P. Minton and Dr. J. O. Atkinson gave two or three excellent addresses each, and Rev. V. T. Crawford, the new pastor at Winchester, gave one good address. All present were delighted and inspired by these masterful presentations of truth and duty. On Sunday following, Dr. Atkinson preached at Newport and Leaksville, and Dr. Minton at Bethlehem, Concord, and Dry Run. From what I have heard, the congregations at these places were delighted and inspired. The visits of such men as these are a blessing to our people.

LIBERTY, VANCE.

The last session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, recently held here, has been declared the best session yet held, and all business was transacted in a spirit of Christian love.

We enjoyed so much having these Christians with us, for through them, we are inspired to greater service for our King. One of the greatest joys of this life is to meet the people of God and have that sweet fellowship, when we can talk of Jesus and His wondrous love. While a full account of the conference has been given, we desire to mention a few things briefly. First, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, N. C., made a splendid address on "Stewardship." We wish every one of our people could have heard this, and may God grant that each of us be awakened to the fact that we are stewards and must give an account of everything entrusted to our care, whether it be time, talent, or money. We should be keenly conscious of God's ownership of all.

Dr. Harper brought a good message, showing the difference between "College" and "Christian" education. Then the annual conference sermon, by our conference evangelist, Rev. H. C. Caviness thrilled each heart, as it was a message of great value in the present age. He used as his text, "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 32. In this marvelous discourse, the "evoultionist" was dethroned, while our Savior was enthroned King if kings and Lord of lords. As usual, Brother Caviness spoke under the demonstration of the Holy Spirit. In this man we see one who has lost his will in God's great will, one that lives in very close communion with the Father, one who realizes from the depths of his heart, that all the words of praise and the works of man, are but a failure when used to express the matchless love and wondrous power of a resurrected Lord.

Another item of interest was the address of Dr. J. O. Atkinson. As usual, this was fine, and especially at this time did he exalt our Christ and show us our duty in a very definite way. That we should press forward, working to carry out His command to go "into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature." We might say a lot about Dr. Staley, but we have the promise of his address in full, through THE SUN.

Thursday evening following the conference, we had the great pleasure of having Dr. W. C. Wicker, Rev. R. L. Williamson, and Rev. H. C. Caviness, to make short talks in our Federation service, after which, Rev. M. R. Moss of Charlotte, N. C., preached for us. Bro. Moss is only a young man, but he has a promising career ahead. He has for some time been associated with Mr. Caviness in evangelistic work, as pianist and personal worker.

On the following Sunday, Bro. Caviness honored us with another great sermon, from the 5th chapter of Revelations, and 12th verse. This message will abide with us for all time, because we consider it the greatest sermon that it was ever our pleasure to hear. We shall always remember that hour when the messenger was exalted, our Lord glorified, and the name of Jesus magnified. Thank God for such men. We trust that our churches will keep him busy in evangelistic work. As our conference president and evangelist, let us pray for him daily, asking God to give him both spiritual and physical strength to enable him to do for us great and mighty things in Jesus' name.

We desire to say a few words about our outgoing and in-coming pastors. Four years ago, Rev. J. E. Franks came to us as pastor, but a stranger to all. During his stay with us he has done efficient and faithful service, making many life-long friends that regret so much to lose him. Brother Franks always had a good message, that the hungry soul could feed upon. In each message he brought us, there was a dividing line that placed the Christian on one side and the sinner on the other. He, like Paul, was determined not to preach anything but the pure gospel in all of its simplicity. This faithful servant of God did not have a "college education." He did not graduate at some university, but he has his diploma from the "King's College," with the B. A. degree, having been "born again." He goes forth, believing the Bible, preaching the Bible, and living the Bible. We are glad to recommend him to any people as one strong in faith, filled with the spirit, and devoted to the cause for which Christ died. Words fail to express the gratitude of many here for all that he has meant to us as a spiritual adviser. We shall never cease to give thanks for a sermon in his early ministry here. His theme was, "The Stool of Do-nothing-ness, or One Hundred Per Cent for Christ." At that time we caught a vision of a deeper life in Christ Jesus. Since then our only joy has been when in service for Him. May God bestow His richest blessings upon this faithful pastor and people wherever he serves.

Our new pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, came to us from Elon College, the third Saturday in November. We were so much impressed with his first sermon (Romans 15: 29), because we want the full gospel. He gave a splendid message both Saturday and Sunday. We are praying that God may guide not only our pastor, but all ministers and teachers unto all truth. We ask our dear readers to pray that the New Year may be the best in the history of our church.

To THE SUN family, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year in service for Jesus.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Does any SUN reader have copies of The Christian Annual for 1904 and 1905, either or both? If so, it will be a most helpful and generous donation if the same will be sent to Miss Louise Savage, Librarian, Elon College, N. C. By patient and persistent endeavor, Miss Savage now has in the library a complete file of the Annuals since 1870, with the exception of the two now asked for. The history and events that these Annuals carry are invaluable.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

TO THE CHURCHES AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

Dear Friends:

We come at this time with this very urgent appeal for funds to help meet the running expenses of Bethlehem College. It is necessary to secure funds to the extent of at least $5,000 above what we will get from students this year in order to balance our accounts for the year's work. $2,000 of this amount may be secured in and around Wadley, but the other $3,000 will have to come from other places.

Financially, Bethlehem has been hard hit this year. The cotton crop of this section is very short and the price is a third less than last year, and we are heceiving very little help from Men and Millions. So we must fall back on the individual churches for help, or close up the institution.

Our churches and Sunday Schools have always been so thoughtful and considerate of all the enterprises of our beioved church, and you will not fail us now in this hour of our direst need.

Our teachers are at Bethlehem at a stupendous sacrifice, and their salaries must be paid when due, if possible, but we have not the funds to pay them for the last month.

We believe this appeal will not go unheeded—that the interest your church and Sunday School have in their own College will lead them to make a worth-while Christmas Gift to Bethlehem College.

"Bethlehem College is your College—build it."

Send money to—

S. L. BEOUGHER, President,

MISSIONS

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

Warren H. Dennison, Secretary.

Start 1926 by becoming a tither, also by making a personal and family budget, and keep accounts.

THE NEW YEAR.

May 1926 be the best year we have ever had as a church! We believe that our Christian Church has made the most permanent development and substantial contribution to the work of the Kingdom during this quadrennium that it has ever made. We are convinced that, taking all in all, our church is stronger today than ever, and so far as it is humanly possible to judge, is making a greater contribution than ever to the progress of the Kingdom. I am not unmindful of our many weak places, or of the many open doors, or of our great needs. We are fully aware of them and they are tremendous challenges to our faith, prayer and sacrificial giving; but our battle line as a church is further forward than ever. The year now closing shows more numbers than ever received into our churches, a larger enrollment in our Sunday Schools, more Christian Endeavor societies organized; the rank and file of our churches are better informed about our work, more churches have been builded, repaired, enlarged, made more substantial, with better equipment than heretofore. Our colleges are over crowded with students seeking higher education; we have a larger number of people dedicating themselves to life Christian service, and never so many doing graduate work preparing themselves for efficient leadership in Christian work; our young people are organizing in a dozen conferences and are coming on in large numbers to take their places in the activities of the church; our summer schools have multiplied and the numbers attending are greatly increased.

Our churches and conferences are being better organized, thus becoming more efficient constantly; our church literature is better than ever. With all our needs, we should take courage and enter this new year with a deeper spirit of consecration and larger efforts to serve.

STEWARDSHIP INSTRUCTION.

From the information we have received so far concerning the observance of the stewardship period, we are sure that there has been a more general observance by far than last year. A great variety of stewardship programs have beei used. Some have said that they were prevented for various reasons from carrying out a program at this time, but would do so at another date. We hope that no church and pastor will fail to give their people real instruction on this theme that is engaging attention in all denominations. We hope for a general expression of stewardship experience from your church's study.

BETTER FINANCE METHODS.

We are hoping that our churches will decide now during this stewardship period that they will make a real study of church financial methods and decide that they will use the well approved methods that add to the spiritual life and which put the finances of the church on a sound basis. Decide to make a budget, both for your current expenses and for benevolences, and to raise these budgets by an annual Every Member Canvass; also to use your influence to bring about a simultaneous canvass for the churches of your conference.

A RECOMMENDATION.

We recommend a real study of stewardship in pastors' conferences. If the pastors of a conference would meet for a day's study of this great subject at a central place, there would be brought into your conference an emphasis that is sorely needed in the churches. Not all pastors have gotten down into the depths of this vital theme and a day's conference would be of untold blessing.

WILL THE CHRISTIAN WORLD BALANCE ACCOUNTS?

We, in the joy and happiness of Christ's light and love, still content ourselves with spending fifteen times as much on Home Missions as we do on Foreign Missions. The Christian Advocate says that the Southern Methodist Church hardly strikes the average, which is fifteen times as much for home church maintenance as for Missions. The evangelical churches of America, according to reports, gave $500,000,000 for the home field last year but onil $40,000,000 for foreign lands, which is 12½ times as much for gospel maintenance at home as to carry the gospel to the perishing millions who know nothing of its light and life and have never heard its message. The Christian Advocate also states that the Southern Methodist Church gives about one-tenth of one per cent of its income to Missions. Evidently very few of the denominations have yet taken seriously to heart the missionary message. And yet this is the supreme command of our Lord.

J. O. Atkinson,
Mission Secretary.

THE CONFERENCES WERE LOYAL.

Every one of the eight conferences composing the Southern Christian Convention voted unanimously to accede to the request of the Executive Committee of the convention to designate a "Mission Month" for offerings from all the churches of the conferences. All conferences will use March except Eastern Virginia which voted to use February.

We are hearing from pastors all over these conferences and in every instance there is most hearty approval and the determination expressed to co-operate in every way in making "Mission Month" effectual and note-worthy. One of our good pastors writes that he sincerely hopes, and will do all within his power to make his hope come true, that "Mission Month" in his conference will be an epoch-making event in the history of the churches and the most helpful program ever put on by the churches. If all the pastors will prove as loyal and as willing to co-operate as the conferences have done through pastors and lay delegates, there can be no doubt as to the outcome.

Mission Secretary.

THINK OF THESE THOUSANDS.

Your Mission Secretary is just in receipt of a Christmas card bearing the picture of two aged Koreans who in the course of human events must soon face their Maker. Their faces are worn and wan and carry a look filled more with blank indifference or despair than with any gleam of hope.

My good friend sending the card from Korea, writes: "Thousands like these will know nothing of the Christmas message and joy that will envelope America. Pray with us that we here may have a part in bringing the message to a few of them this year. Christmas wishes to you and yours."

There was received almost by the same mail a letter containing a check for Missions saying, "A Christmas gift for our Mission Fund—for our dear Savior's cause." This latter will possibly carry or help to carry some word or message to the thousands who wait without joy or hope of any Christmas, as they know nothing of such an event. This is or should be the real spirit of Christmas, namely, a desire to share its joys with the millions who have never heard of our Christ and who await that message until we carry or send it to them.

WHY SONG WRITERS ARE OFTEN ACCUSED OF PLAGIARISM.

I have often ovehheard discussions regarding the authorship of certain songs—where more than one writer takes credit for the words and music. It is true that sacred music has been published where it appears as though the words or music were a deliberate steal from music that has already been published.

As far as I am able to discover, the accusation of plagiarism in music is as ill-founded as that in literature. Some historians have accused Abraham Lincoln of appropriating the thought in his Gettysburg Address from the Greek account of the funeral oration of Pericles over the dead bodies of the Athenians after the Battle of Thermopylae.

Lincoln probably did read this oration in his youth. The thought remained after he had forgotten its source, and at Gettysburg the thought again came into consciousness when he expressed his feelings on this occasion.

The same thing has undoubtedly happened in music. For example, there has been considerable discussion concerning a portion of Signor Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West," and "Alexander's Rag-time Band"—how they were practically the same, note for note, yet no one will assume the great Italian composer plagiarised, and surely the rag-time man had never heard the "Girl of the Golden West" when he published his song, for they were published simultaneously in different parts of the world.

The popular song, "Haven of Rest," is taken from one of Dr. Robert Lowry's compositions, published in one of his early books, both words and music. The melody of "Face to Face" is the first strain of a home song popular two or three decades ago, written by W. A. Ogden. "When the Mists Have Rolled Away" is quite identical with the song written by J. H. Anderson back in the early 70's. The chorus of "At the Cross" is an old plantation melody, once well known.

Charles H. Gabriel once told me the following incident: "I wrote and published a song entitled 'Over in the Glory Land'; the manuscript had been seen only by myself and the typesetter. My surprise may be imagined when one day, soon after, I received from an Eastern hymn writer a text on the same subject, same title, same meter, and substantially the same subject-matter throughout, stanza for stanza. He had not seen my song nor I his poem, yet the one was the counterpart of the other. I immediately mailed him a printed copy of my composition, which proved to be as much of a surprise to him as his had been to me."

It is entirely possible that two or mare men of a creative type may feel and express in music the same thought and emotion.—Homer Rodeheaver.

DISCIPLES CALLED CHRISTIANS.

By Rev. P. H. Fleming, M. A., D. D.

[Annual Address before the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, Salem Chapel, Forsythe County, N. C., November 10, 1925. Published by request of the Conference.]

It has been a hard struggle back to the principles, doctrine, and fellowship of this church, where the disciples were first called Christians. These reformers, great and good men, though they were, labored in the twilight of the coming morn. They were steering back to the moorings of the first Christian church; but noon had not come. It was the morning hour of a brighter and happier day.

That some mistakes were made, from a religious view point, in working out religious problems in the renaissance, is evident. It was right to break away from the old that was wrong, and to accept the new that was right. It was right to give to the people the open Bible—that was apostolic; but it was not apostolic nor Biblical to bind them to human creeds and to human and sectarian names.

Since the beginning of the Reformation, A. D. 1517, many religious denominations have come into existence; and it hardly seems that the day has yet come when another shall not be born.

Among the multitudinous births of denominations during and following the Reformation, there was born a denomination from a three-fold source: namely, from the Methodist church in 1792, on questions of government and discipline; and when on August the 4th, 1794, they called themselves Christians and took the Bible as their creed; and from the Baptist church in New England on questions of name and doctrine; and in the organization of a church in 1801 known as Christian; and from the Presbyterian church in and following the great Cane Ridge revival which swept over Kentucky and parts of Tennessee in 1800-1801, and by the end of 1804 had extended to southern Ohio and western Pennsylvania, there sprang up a new organization which in 1804 resolved to take the Bible as their creed and to be known as Christian.

It appears that these movements were unknown to each other and that there was no concert of action by these three bodies in their movement to the Bible as the rule of faith and practice, and to the name Christian by which each decided to be called.

These three bodies becoming acquainted, merged into one organization. Their principles, briefly stated, are:

I. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

II. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

III. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

IV. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.

V. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

The vision seen by the founders of the Christian denomination is portrayed by its principles and the things initiated. Its principles are true, good, and beautiful, but notwithstanding all that, such broad and generous declarations are fraught with danger when not rightly understood, interpreted and practiced.

The Head: Christ is the only Head of the Church. He is given as a witness, leader, and commander of His people. Those who accept Christ as the Head of the church, and obey Him, place themselves under His direction and guidance. There is communion between Christ, the Head, and the church, the body. Since Christ is the Head of the church, the church owes Him allegiance and obedience.

The Name: The name Christian defines a peculiar people, and is the synonym of evangelical truth. It is scriptural, and is the name owned and worn by the early church. Under it martyrs of the cross for three centuries marched to death. It means a believer in and a follower of Jesus Christ. The name is significant of all that is related to Christianity. Christian is a cosmopolitan name, the truest and the best; and it stands above all other names by which the followers of Christ are called. To be a Christian, one must be an obedient follower of Jesus Christ.

The Creed: The Christian denomination takes the Bible as its creed. Not one of the books is discarded, nor any part of a book is junked by those who take the Bible as their rule of faith and practice. The book of Genesis cannot be thrown overboard, treated simply as tradition or a myth; nor can such a church or people relegate to some junk pile such doctrines as man's creation, man's fall, the virgin birth, regeneration, the resurrection, the judgment, the existence beyond the grave, nor any other doctrine taught in the Bible. To profess to take the Bible as the rule of faith and practice and then disregard it in life and teaching, brands one a traitor.

Church Membership: Christian character is the test of fellowship and church membership. When a man accepts Christ as his Lord and Savior, he becomes a Christian. The ruling principle in Christian character is Christ-mindedness, Christ-likeness, Christ-love. Christian character is the highest character that a human being can bear on earth.

This principle is both inclusive and exclusive. It would exclude none that accept and follow Christ; nor would it include those that He rejects.

Private Judgment and the Liberty of Conscience: Private judgment and the liberty of conscience as a principle is open to criticism and abuse, unless understood and interpreted aright. It must be understood that the statement is made by and for those who have repented of sin and accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. It is made by and for those who in truth follow Jesus Christ, and who are led by the Holy Spirit in the interpretation of the Word of God.

Man is a responsible being, and hence must be free, but the liberty of conscience in things Christian, may not be claimed by one who is not a Christian, by one who has not accepted Jesus as Lord and Master.

Things Initiated.—In several fields, the Christian denomination has blazed the trail where now great highways run. I know of no church that has initiated and fostered more good things than the people known as Christians.

Of the things initiated or set in motion, wherein the Christian denomination certainly seems to stand first, I mention the following:

In Union.—When the followers of Christ from the Methodist Episcopal, the Baptist, and the Presbyterian churches, three separate bodies, came together as one body, it was a rare and beautiful thing, and a thing unheard of before in the annals of time.

Religious Newspaper.—The Christian denomination gave to the world, in 1808, the first religious newspaper, The Herald of Gospel Liberty, which is now the oldest religious newspaper.

Co-Education.—In co-education, the Christian denomination pioneered, in that in 1850, it founded the first college, Antioch, that gave equal privileges in higher education to male and female in classes, and to professors, and to all creeds and races.

Temperance.—In the field of temperance organizations with a total abstinence clause, members of the church known as Christian were evidently in the fore-front. In a large stone, set in concrete, on property owned by Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Alamance County, North Carolina, and where a former church building stood, there is a tablet erected bearing this inscription:

"Erected 1909
by the Pleasant Hill Temperance Society in Commemoration of its Organization
1833."

From an old, faded book, containing the constitution, roster, and minutes of that society, I quote the following: "We therefore agree that we will abstain from the use of ardent spirits except as a medicine, in case of bodily infirmities, that we will not allow the use of them in our families nor provide them for the entertainment of our friends, or for persons in our employment, and that in all suitable ways we will discourage the use in the community."

Women Preachers.—The Christian denomination led in the matter of ordaining women preachers. In 1860, it ordained a woman preacher, and so far as I have been able to ascertain, it was the first denomination in modern times to ordain a woman to the gospel ministry.

The Christian denomination has certainly caught sight of great visions and has certainly had great ideas, and has set in motion great streams of influence and power, but it has not pursued the visions earnestly enough, nor urged its ideals forcefully enough, nor followed the streams of influence and power rapidly enough to reap the rich fruitage and the great harvest of its early sowing. Others have followed and won laurels in fields where the Christian denomination pioneered. I blame them not, but congratulate them. The opportunity was ours, and though we may not have gathered a large visible harvest, I am glad that we were privileged to blaze the way.

It may seem strange that a people so numerically small, when compared with the large denominations, should have given to the world such great ideas and movements; but it is not strange when one thinks of their principles and aims.

The Christian denomination in its organization and principles was well nigh a hundred years in advance of the age in which it came into existence. And as paradoxical as it may seem, its greatest strength has been, and is, its greatest weakness, in that it depends too much upon its principles to publish themselves. Even the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, needs to be proclaimed.

(Note.—The next, and final installment of Dr. Fleming's address, will take up "Some Present-Day Problems for Ourselves and Others.")

Henry Ford hit the nail squarely on the head in the following passage, which tells us why work wins:

"Selling is telling. Shoot straight, hit hard, and everlastingly hammer your story home, and the sales will come.

"There isn't any luck about it. Work is the thing; good, earnest, honest hard work—work in the right direction—work with brains, but everlastingly, persistently, continuously—work.

"If it required no brains, no energy, no work, there would be no glory in achievement.

"Reinforce yourself with steel-hooped, copper-rivited, well-directed energy and intelligence, and knowing what you want to do, do it.

"Work wins. You can't beat it."

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

INTRODUCTION.

During the greater part of the past year we have been studying the Acts of the Apostles, and during the latter part of the year, the lessons have been centered around that most wonderful character, St Paul the Missionary to the Gentiles. And, in spite of the fact that Paul was a great preacher of the essentialness of faith, he told by example what James puts into words, that "Faith without works is dead."

Paul has passed from the scene. So have the Apostles, save John alone. Three of the Gospels have been written:. Matthew, the gatherer of taxes has told the story of facts and figures; and Mark, has set down from his own memory and guided by Peter, his story of the Christ; Luke, the doctor, has told as only a man trained in the sciences, the story of the Life of Light.

Jerusalem, the Holy City that Jesus would fain have saved is no more; and the youngest of the apostles is an old, a very old man, when he starts to write the Gospel of Love. Being taken from the Gospel of John, the lessons of this quarter are almost necessarily of an evangelistic character. This Gospel was written to persuade men to accept Jesus as the Son of God, the sacrificial Lamb, through whose blood all mankind should eventually be saved.

Amos R. Wells says: "The Gospel of John is the crown of all writings, as Jesus Christ is supreme among all that have ever lived on earth. Into this little book, the inspiring Spirit has poured the whole of essential religion. If our missionaries had no other book of the Bible, with this alone they could win the world."

It is this book of the Book of books that we are to study for the next three months. If you have not done so already, go now and read the entire book.

The writer of the "Gospel of Love" was eminently fitted for his task, for was he not "the disciple whom Jesus loved"? Was he not with his Lord at those times which were most sacred? He was with Christ when the daughter of Jairus was raised; was with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration; he was in the inner circle in the Garden of Gethsemane; and it was into his hands that Christ committed His mother's care when He was dying upon the cross. Truly was the writer of this Gospel fitted for his task.

John's Gospel was more than likely written at Ephesus where John spent the latter part of his life, ministering to the church which Paul founded there. John is supposed to have lived to be a hundred years of age, and the Gospel was written in the last years of his life, probably around A. D. 90.

"The Fourth Gospel is planned with care and the plan is skillfully worked out, in strong contrast to the almost haphazard method of the synoptic Gospels. The plan exhibits the growth of the faith of Christ's disciples and the opposition of Christ's enemies. The outline of the Gospel, according to Plummer, is as follows: I. The Introduction, setting forth Christ's origin and nature. II. Christ's revelation of himself to the world: the testimony of John the Baptist, of the disciples, and of the miracles; Christ's work among Jews, Samaritans, Galileans, and mixed multitudes. III. Christ's final revalation of himself in his last discourses to his disciples, his crucifixion, and his resurrection. IV. The appendix to the Gospel(Chapter 21). This outline we are now to fill in, our first lesson being taken from the introduction.

LESSON I.—January 3, 1926.

"THE SON OF GOD BECOMES MAN."

Lesson: John 1: 1-18.

Golden Text: "And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father), full of grace and truth."—John 1: 14.

Devotional Reading: Phil. 2: 5-11.

Reference Material: Matt. 1: 18-25; Mark 1: 1-8; Luke 1: 26-36; 2: 4-7.

In his prologue, John summarizes in a sense the entire Gospel, setting forth in minature what follows. He states directly, that The Word was God, the Word became flesh, and the Word reveals the Father of all.

The "Word" was a term that was familiar to Greek philosophers. The nearest approach to its meaning in the Old Testament is expressed by "the Angel of the Lord." As man's speech expresses the will and character of man, so does Christ express all that God is. As man's speech is coexistent with man, yet separate from him, so was Christ with God "in the beginning." And though united with the Father, yet was the Word a distinct Person from that Father from the eternity before the ages began.

And through this Word were all things created, for He was the Father's agent, "And without him was not anything made that hath been made." Now since Christ made all things, he has power over all things. And even the sea obeys His will. And certainly we are justified in praying to Him to send us the sunshine and the rain and in asking Him to cure us of our infirmities.

Indeed, "In him was life," and He was the source of all life and health and happiness; for that "life was the light of men." Jesus told His disciples, "I am the Light of the world," and we who live today can bear witness how history has proved the truth of that saying. What a pity "the light shineth in the darkness" and even now "the darkness apprehendeth it not." Why do we still reject Jesus? Why are we so backward in carrying out his commands.

John tells us that "he came unto his own." They were his because He had made them, a thousand times more do they belong to Him now, for He has redeemed them that receive Him, and to them has he given "the right to become the children of God."

And that He might better teach men the Word, "the Word became flesh and dwelt among us." He did not put on flesh as a garment that might be dropped at any moment, but became flesh and assumed the role of a human being in all things, like as we are, so that we might behold the glory of God whom no man hath seen. It is through Jesus that we must see the Father, if see Him we will.

Christ alone can interpret God and make Him manifest man. And Christ has declared, "He who hath seen me, hath seen the Father."

LESSON II.—January 10, 1926.

"FIVE MEN BELIEVE ON JESUS."

Lesson: John 1: 19-51.

Golden Text: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world!"—John 1: 29.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 53: 4-12.

Reference Material: Matt. 4: 18-22; Mark 3: 13-19.

Time: February,A. D. 27 (30).

Place: The banks of the Jordan, near Bethabara, where John the Baptist was preaching.

The subject of this lesson might well be called, "Seeking and finding Jesus. Peloubets Notes, divides it into the sections, as follows:

I. The Work of John the Baptist, vs. 19-24.
   The voice in the wilderness.
   The prophecy of Jesus.
   The witness to Jesus.

II. John and Andrew Seek Jesus, vs. 35-42.
   "Behold the Lamb of God."
   "Come and ye shall see."
   Winning brothers.

III. The Calling of Philip and Nathaniel, vs. 43-51.
   "Follow me."
   "Come and see."
   Bringing others to Christ.

I. John the Baptist, the great forerunner of Jesus, was a kinsman of Jesus, and their mothers had visited together before the birth of the two sons; but John had been reared in Judea and Jesus in Galilee, so that they probably did not meet until John had started his ministry.

John's reputation for holiness and his burning eloquence drew many to the wilderness to hear him. He summoned all to repentance, and baptized his converts in the river Jordan. John was the last of the long succession of Old Testament prophets, and was probably the greatest and most heroic of them all. Yet remarkable as was the man John, his fame rests soley on the fact that he was the herald of Jesus Christ. In true humility does he tell of the fast approaching of the time of the Messiah's appearance.

Notwithstanding his preaching, he was amazed when the Messiah did come, and almost horrified when he was commanded to baptize Him, that all righteousness might be fulfilled. But when John was persuaded and did baptize Him, oh, wonder of wonders: down from the heavens above came the Holy Spirit "as a dove" and rested upon the young Galilean, and from the throne of the Father came a voice saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Not only did these words confirm the faith of John, but they must have been a source of consolation to the Christ Himself in the troubled life that was to follow.

II. And again on the morrow John saw Jesus, and he pointed Him out to John and Andrew. "Behold, the Lamb of God," said John. "And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus." And John and Andrew abode with him until the evening, when Andrew went and found his brother, Simon and brought him to Jesus. What a beautiful thing to do, and what a wonderful thing too, for it was this Simon who became Peter, the Rock of the Church.

III. And on the morrow, Christ found Philip, and he in turn found his brother, Nathaniel, and brought him to Christ. Thus were first five of the twelve chosen.

Today Christ calls to us to come; and today we should learn of Him, and after having found Jesus it is not enough to rest content at His feet, for there is many a brother that must be shown the good that hath come out of Nazareth.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our Thanksgiving Offering is still coming in nicely, and three more churches have joined our "Banner List" this week. Our Burlington Church sent us $500.00; Wentworth, N. C., Church, $102.15, and First Church of Greensboro, $165.00. This makes nine churches that have joined out of the twenty-five asked for. Several of our churches got nearly to the mark, and we wonder if they would not like to send in an additional offering and get on this list.

We have received on the special Thanksgiving Offering this year the sum of $4,880.35. We are a long distance from our goal. We will not close our books till January 15th, so all churches will have time to get their offering in. If your church has not taken the offering, please see to it that it is taken in your church and let us have one time in the history of our Church that every church on the list made a Thanksgiving Offering. That would be fine.

Our faithful little church at Mebane, N. C., deserves special mention. They have 25 members and some of that number children, and they sent us $20.00, nearly $1.00 per member. What if all of our churches made a special effort to send us $1.00 per church membership, say if you have 500 members in your church, make your offering $500.00. If that could be worked, we would raise $30,000.00 for our Thanksgiving offering every year. If you have not done so, please mail your offering in from your church.

The following has been sent in:

The Philathea Class of the Suffolk Christian Church, $25.00 to buy Christmas toys and candies for the children.

The Twiddy Bible Class of Christian Temple, Norfolk, $25.00 for Christmas toys and candy for the children.

Sidney Cotton Mills, 3 bolts of goods.

M. W. Hook, 5 pairs of little shoes.

Ladies Missionary Society, First Church, LaGrange, Ga., 2 pairs shoes, pairs pants, 1 coat, hose, handkerchiefs, towels, pillow cases and underware.

A. A. T., 715 Chestnut St., Burlington, N. C., 2 coat dresses

Ladies Aid Society, Newport News, Va., 1 pretty quilt.

Mrs. V. V. Ellis, Suffolk, Va., 1 coat, 4 pair hose.

Ladies Aid Society, Mt. Olivet Church, 2 quilts, 2 dresses, 1 blanket, 2 pair hose, and underware.

Ladies Aid Society, Richland, Ga., 1 quilt.

MONDAY.

THE BETHLEHEM OF THE HEART.

LESSON: Isa. 9: 27.

"Until Christ be formed in you."—Gal. 4: 19.

The old world became a new one when Christ was born. That is a mystery, and what is more, it is the perplexity of it that is at the same time our salvation.

The new life it brings explains that salvation, and it comes only to those who possess it. When Christ came to the world, new hope seized the discouraged Israel; new ideas filled the brains of the high and low; new ambitions siezed those in authority; new world joys increased, its industries multiplied, its activities quickened, and, since that time, life has not ceased to be a battle ground between misery and happiness, nor have the faithful relaxed their efforts to extract from the world the true and the good for the Lord Jesus Christ.

So it is with the soul when Christ is born into it. New life in every way. That is the soul's Bethlehem. To be born again turns us from the old ways, makes us dare to do right, makes us love everybody, breeds in us love for good and hate for wrong, lightens the burdens of the discouraged. And all this takes place in the cradle of the heart.

Prayer.—Our Father, as we leave our Christmas activities and celebrations, be Thou born in us more and more, and may we feel the embodiment of the Savior in our hearts and know that we are transformed by the renewing of the mind in Christ Jesus, and as we look forward may we prove for the new year what is the acceptable and perfect will of God. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

STAR-LED.

LESSON: Matt. 1: 18-2: 12.

"The Star went before them."—Matt. 2: 9.

The wise men were star-led men. They followed their best light. They consulted the star—their light—and it showed them the Lord.

Do we follow our star—our best light? Do we do what we know to be right always? Do we follow the guidance of our conscience, even?

The world needs star-led men to reveal Christ to it. Of all the starry beacons that ever shown on man, the brightest and the best is the sun of the night that lights the way of the wandering, the ignorant and misunderstanding, from the darkness of wrong to the light of right and God, and makes us realize that there is the Lord.

Prayer.—Our Father, we know we have not a single reason for not doing our best. We have no excuse for not throwing our whole strength against everything that would hinder Thee in Thy purpose to bring light to men that they may see the way and that they might be found in us complete. Forgive us Lord and turn our thoughts to Thee for the new year. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

EFFICACY OF VISITING FRIENDS.

"And they communed with each other of all these things which had happened," and as they did so, "Jesus himself drew near."—Luke 23: 13-15.

A Scandanavian saying is: "Go often to the house of thy friend, for weeds choke up the unused paths." It is to be regretted, and it may come to be tragic, that the automobile and the great hurry of the age is breaking down some of the old-time sociability and friendships. When we drove horses, we visited our friends at gates, on the roads, and anywhere we met or passed people. Both time and disposition made and kept warm many friendships. In the day of automobiles, we pass and repass like bullets on the battle-field.

I passed my father the other day and did not notice him. Even when we do recognize those whom we pass, the operation of the motor is so absorbing that only the wave of the hand is seen. The automobile is a great machine, and is a necessity to humanity. But if we use it improperly and neglect our fundamental relations to one another we will certainly have to pay the penalty. Friendship is chocked out by disuse.

Companionship, sweet counsel with one another and walking together in our thoughts are necessary for unity of purpose in life, and unity of purpose can never come to pass until we are thus bound together. Jesus and His will are revealed in Christian communion and companionship.

Prayer.—Our Father, whatever mission we may have with one another in this world, forbid that anything should come in to upset it, or put us on the wrong track. We pray for contact with folks, for fellowship with the good and the mighty, for desire that Thy kingdom should come into the hearts of men. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD'S WAY AND THE WORLD'S WAY.

"And it shall come to pass that before they call, I will answer, and while they are speaking I will hear."—Job. 13: 22; Isa. 65: 24.

"Truly the most of us stand in awe at the wondrous mystery of prayer. All through sacred history, we have repeated assurances that the prayer of the believing heart reaches the ear of Him who is both hearer and answerer. The inspired prophets of old spread broadcast the assurance that the prayer of the sincere soul is never ignored, and that the Lord is 'nigh unto them that call upon him in truth.' But infinite wisdom goes even further and meets our needs by a far better way than we can devise. 'Call unto me and I will answer thee and show thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not.' "

Jesus, too, gives the assurance: "Your father knoweth what thing ye have need of before ye ask him." Then the text crowns them all and many similar promises and gives us a dazling glimpse of the height and depth of God's love and care for his children.

Prayer.—O dear Heavenly Father: May we live so close to Thee that we may never be uncertain about Thy way and never lack strength to turn from the ways of the world. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE.

LESSON: I. Cor. 3: 9-23.

"We are God's fellow-workers."—I. Cor. 3: 9.

"We work together in God's service; you are God's field to be planted, God's house to be built."—American Version.

"The sun is just rising on the morning of another day, the first day of a new year. What can I wish that this day, this year, may bring me? Nothing that shall make the world, or others poorer; nothing at the expense of other men; but just those few things which in their coming do not stop with me, but touch me, rather, as they pass and gather strength: a few friends who understand me, and yet remain my friends; a work to do which has real value without which the world would feel poorer; a return for such work small enough not to tax unduly any one who pays; a mind unafraid to travel, even though the trail be not blazed; an understanding heart and a sight of the eternal hills and unresting seas and something beautiful the hand of man has made; a sense of humor and the power to laugh; a little leisure with nothing to do; a few moments of quiet, silent meditation; the sense of the presence of God and the will and power to worship Him."—From "A Morning Wish," by W. R. Hunt.

Prayer.—Our Father, give us the patience to wait for the coming of all these things we are wishing for the coming year, and the wisdom to know them when they come, an dwe will give Thee the praise, world without end. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE VANISHING ROAD.

"Ye have not passed this way before."—Joshua 3: 4.

We stand today at the intersection of two vanishing roads. Behind is the old road, a long travel, tired feet, aching hearts, miserable failures, happy successes, oases of joy, and a thousand other things too numerous in our experience to mention.

Before us, in tense solitude, is the new way. A year ago we looked at 1925 as a new way, and down its long stretch our eyes lost themselves in its wistful curve at the end where our vision passed into hope that just beyond the vanishing point we would realize the end of our desire and know some of the reasons of our travel; but now that we have come to the bend of the road and the new way, much of our past seems a miserable failure, and we arrive at the end only to look out upon a long stretch of the new way. It beckons us on into its stretches, and, with the strongest resolutions and determination, we take fresh hope and press on to the mark of the high calling.

Let us not be discouraged. God's beckoning hand promises that her ways are ways of pleasantness, and that we shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace, and that the only condition is that we "walk with God." With Him, no road will be too rough or too long, and the wrong things will be made right and misfortunes and failures over-ruled for good.

Prayer.—Our Father: Make us afraid to live without Thy presence all along the way; and make us to feel that Thou art by our side. May we never relax our efforts to press on to the high mark. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"UP-HILL."

"Casting all your cares upon him, for he careth for you."—I. Peter 5: 7.

"Does the road wind up-hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.
Will the day's journey take the whole day?
From morn till night, my friend.
"But is there for the night a resting-place?
A roof when the slow dark hours begin.
May not the darkness hide it from my face?
You cannot miss that end.
"Shall I meet other wayfarers at night?
Those who have gone before.
Then must I knock or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at that door.
"Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak?
Of the labor you shall find the sum.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Christmas Eve Kiddies:

Its most time to shut your eyes and try hard to go to sleep and wait till morning—Oh, oh—that wonderful morning when you wake up all over and peep out to see if its time to get up—Oh, gee-whiz—Why does Mother say "Lie still, now dears, till the room is warm"—when, oh, oh, whoever wants a warm room any way on Christmas morning. Santa's gifts are enough to warm any one's toes—and then you find that he has been there after all, and its not just all talk—Oh, oh, its too wonderful to believe.

But do you know, Kiddies, the best Gift that was ever sent? I want to tell you about that Gift this Christmas Eve. And while you read it, remember that there are some little folks that never heard this story—and if you like it this time and think its good enough to send on to another little boy or girl who hasn't heard it—put five bright pennies into your Mite-Box on Christmas morning. Then when the time comes to send the pennies to your Willing Workers' Treasurer, won't you be happier to remember that five bright pennies in that box are to send the story of "God's Best Gift" to other little children in a far-off land.

Here is your story, now, all ready to enjoy.

A Merry Christmas to all of the dear Kiddies, with a heart full of love and best wishes from

Your Editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

GOD'S BEST GIFT—THE BABY JESUS.

Long, long ago, God, our Father had given His children who lived in this great, round, wonderful, beautiful world, many things to make them happy. He had given them the bright butterflies and the singing birds; He had given them the tall strong trees and the lovely flowers; He had given them a beautiful, bright day-time for work and play, and the quiet, dark night-time, for sleep and rest; He had given them mothers and fathers to love them and care for them. But, listen dears, God our Father loved His children so very much that He wanted to send them a gift that was better than any of these. And so He said, "I will send my children the gift of my own dear Son Jesus. He shall go into the world as a little baby. And after he grows up, he shall be my helper and shall tell people everywhere how much God their Father loves them."

But God our Father knew that if he was going to send the baby Jesus into the wordl, He must find a mother gentle and mild, to care for the baby, and a father strong and kind to make a home for the dear baby to live in. So God sent one of his beautiful angels with a message to a young woman named Mary—and guess what the angel said to her, dears, "Some day God is going to send you a dear little baby to love and care for. He will be God's Son, and you must call his name Jesus."

And the angel told Joseph the same thing, and Mary and Joseph were very, very happy at the news the angel brought.

Many, many months passed, and still Joseph and Mary were watching for the little Baby Jesus. Then one day, they had to leave their home for a little while and go on a long journey to Bethlehem. After traveling many days, they came to Bethlehem one night. They were very tired after their long journey and wanted to find a room where they could rest and sleep.

But there were many strangers in the little town and there wasn't any room. Joseph looked everywhere for a place where Mary could rest, for he thought perhaps the little Baby Jesus would come that night, and he wanted a place where Mary and the Baby could be warm and sleep well. At last he found a stable where the cows and the donkeys and the nice wooley sheep lived; and he took Mary there. There on the soft, sweet hay Mary and Joseph rested; and there on the soft hay the little Baby Jesus was born. Mary did not have a bed for her Baby, so she laid him on the soft, sweet hay, in a manger (that is what they call a feed box); now, wasn't that a strange place for a bed? And Mary and Joseph were very happy that the Baby had come to make their hearts glad; and they thanked God their Father for sending them such a Gift.

And that night when the Baby Jesus was born was the very first Christmas; and ever since then we have Christmas every year, because we always want to remember the birthday of Jesus, God's Best Gift!

Prayer.—Our dear Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for sending us the Gift af the Baby Jesus. Amen.

ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT BY BETHLEHEM TOWN.

BY ROBERT P. TRISTRAM COFFIN.

There were green hills by Bethlehem Town—
Sleepy hills the sheep came down
When the Folding Star burned in the West,
And sheep and shepherds went to rest.
Year after year the Shepherd's Star
Hung on the western hill afar;
Year in, year out the shepherds knew
Nights of silence sweet with dew,
And silently they took their peace,
Weaned their lambs and sheared their fleece,
And had no songs but those that run
Through tired hearts when day is done.

But on a night of nights there came
A star on the eastern hills aflame,
A star that seemed another dawn!
The cedar shadows lay upon
The earth; and suddenly the night
With angel wings was white on white—
Rose-white with burning seraphim,
Snow-white with singing cherubim—
And through the flames a song came down
The little hills of Bethlehem Town:
"Christ is born! The red, red Rose
Of spotless Beauty buds and blows!"

And all the years of silence ended.
The patient shepherds who had tended
The flocks took up the heavenly mirth
And welcomed Christmas to the earth;
Beneath the choirs of the sky,
"Nowel! Nowel!" went up their cry.

II.

Under the hills of Bethlehem Town
A baby lay like angel down,
Like petals of new roses curled
When June comes singing across the world;
Under the lanthorns, in the hay,
The King of kings of ages lay.
The breath of oxen stirred his hair
That looked like flakes of amber there;
The breath of oxen warmed Him sleeping
Who holds the stars within His keeping;
The soft, big eyes of barnyard things
Brooded on the King of kings;
The little hens aroost for night
Made gentle noised in the light,
And chanticleer sang carols high
Upon the roof against the sky.

III.

Upon the hills of Bethlehem
The dew hung on the holly stem;
One by one the shepherds came
To the manger lit with flame;
The oxen and the shepherds all,
And all the beasts of barn and stall
Bent the knee to Him who lay
Like a diamond in the hay.
Over the bleating of the sheep,
Across the midnight's starry deep,
The angel wings were winnowing
Lullabies for the Christmas King.

IV.

Down the hills of Bethlehem old
One king came riding, bearing gold;
One king came with a morning star,
A great pearl in an azure jar;
One king had summer in his hands,
Roses of a thousand lands,
Myrrh and musk and all the dawn
From shores the sun shines first upon.
Diamonds like icicles in thaw
They scattered in the stable straw,
Gold to match a rooster's eyes—
For these were kings both rich and wise.
All their frankincense was shed
Like scent of mown hay on the bed
Where slept the King who will reign on
When all the stars are dust and gone.

V.

The little hills of Bethlehem Town
To dreamless slumber laid them down;
The little hens closed eyes at last,
And on the roof the cock slept fast;
The topazes of oxen eyes
Were dimmed with sleep; the three kings wise
Bowed beards into their bosoms low;
The shepherds nodded in a row;
The angels shook down a starry haze
Till heavy grew their starry gaze,
Till white heads on white shoulders lay—
And Christ slept on in the mangered hay.

VI.

O far green hills of Bethlehem Town!
O fair green hills the kings came down!
Where angels sang and shepherds knelt—
Kings that of the pasture smelt!
Two thousand years with starlit sky
Have marched your sheep and shepherds by,
Yet still the Star that lit Christ's birth
Hangs shining in the eyes of earth!
This night we hear the whisperings
Of angel wings, and see the kings
Come out the dusky East, and hear
White angels singing, tier on tier.
And men who love God's sheep and kine
Keep close to God, and see Him shine
In stars and dew, and find His face
In any humble stable place.
Tall Troy is down, and Babylon;
But Bethlehem stands singing on!

God rest us all this night in peace,
And through the years till years shall cease!

Will there be beds for me and all who seek?
Yea, beds for all who come."
—Christina G. Rossetti.

"O yes, He cares!
I know He cares!
His heart is touched with my grief.
When days are weary,
The long nights dreary,
I know my Father cares."

Prayer.—Our Father, when burdens and cares press us hard and we are pained; when it is uphill and the way is weary and long; if the way be dark and failure treads upon our heels and there is no relief from oncoming temptations; when sorrows bow us in sadness and grief; show us that Thou dost care, and that in Thee we have a friend who will bear it all. Oh forgive us and help us to lean on Thee. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

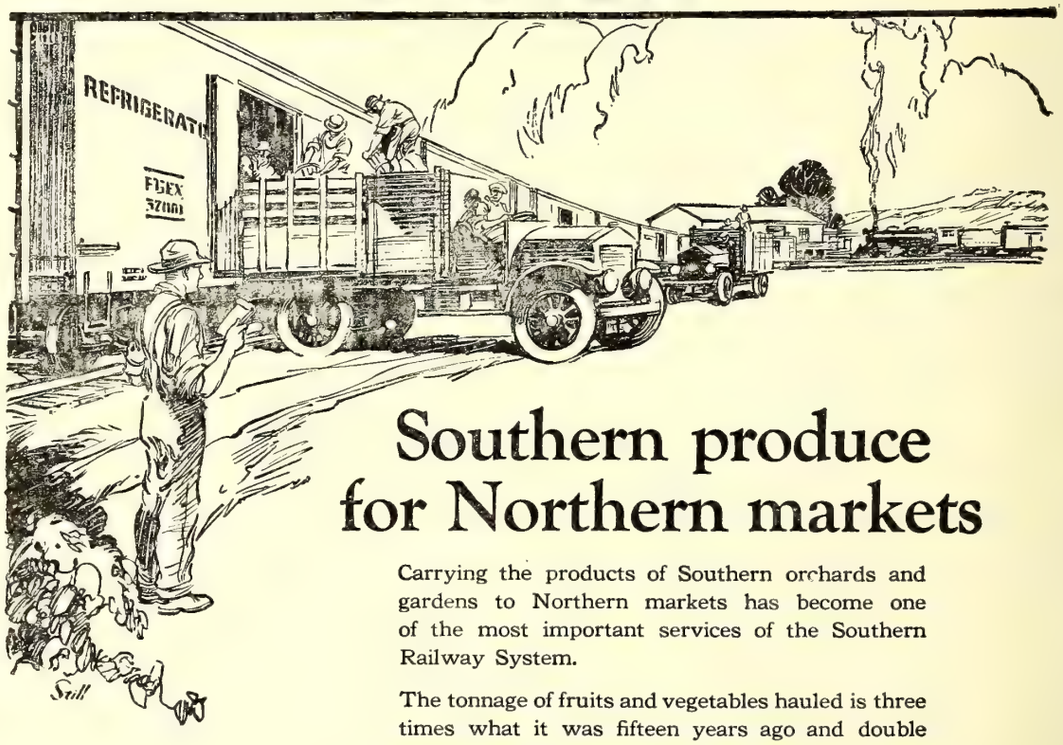
SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM



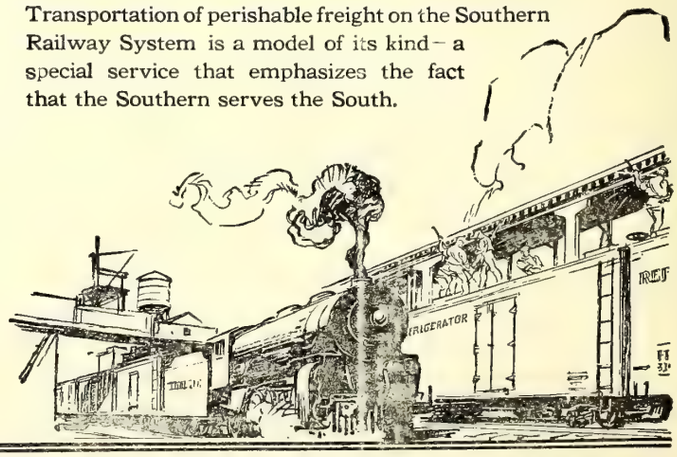
Southern produce for Northern markets

Carrying the products of Southern orchards and gardens to Northern markets has become one of the most important services of the Southern Railway System.

The tonnage of fruits and vegetables hauled is three times what it was fifteen years ago and double what it was ten years ago, and now equals the cotton tonnage.

Building up this great market for Southern produce, which increases the prosperity of the South, would not have been possible without dependable transportation, and this the Southern has provided.

Transportation of perishable freight on the Southern Railway System is a model of its kind – a special service that emphasizes the fact that the Southern serves the South.



Southern Railway System last year spent in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

THE SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH
